FIRE AND A RUNAWAY.

The Department Has a Brave Tussle with Burning Acid and Gasolene.

A young man from Dunellen ran into T. J. Carey's office on Front street last evening and said there was a fire on Washington avenue. He wanted the key to Box 42 to send in the alarm, but Mr. Carey thought he would better attend to it himself, which he did.

When he pulled the box the steam gong sounded only two blows, although the alarm went into the various house gongs all right and the department responded quickly.

A few minutes later Chief Doane sent Inspector Herbert Chamberlain to adjust the valve in the whistle. He then pulled the box again, and the alarm sounded all right.

The fire was in a small frame building situated on Washington avennue near Front street, owned by Christopher Becker, and leased by G. O. Keller as a dyeing establishment.

Mr. Keller was at the place at 6, and left soon afterward when he claims everything was all right. After supper he joined some friends and spent the evening with them in North Plainfield and did not return home till nearly midnight, and knew nothing of the fire till 8 this morning when a little girl told him.

In the building was a considerable amount of chemicals, a barrel of gasoline near the boiler, an engine, boiler and various other goods valued altogether at $800, on which there was $600 insurance, held by Agent M. M. Dunham. Agent W. A. Woodruff held a policy for Mr. Becker on the building.

The fire started in the second story of the building, and is supposed to have been caused by heat from the boiler breaking a carboy of acid.

The department after an hour of hard work succeeded in extinguishing the fire, though everything in the building is a loss. The firemen had a fierce battle against the acid and gasolene.

When Driver Townley of Alert hose wagon had arrived at the Washington avenue bridge he left the team standing. David Dunavan was on the wagon putting on his boots. Just then a stream of water struck one of the horses and frightened them into a run. Mr. Dunavan in attempting to get hold of the reins was thrown off, but not injured. The team went on to Rockview, Mercer, Sycamore, and Willow avenues, and came back to Washington avenue, where a young man named Cornwell, jumped on the seat and stopped them. The right hind wheel of the wagon was sprung a little, and one of the side lamps was smashed.

The recall was sounded about 11:30.

Men Not Willing to Accept.

Rev. Mr. McKelvey of Warren Chapel preached in Grace M. E. Church last night from the words, "If they will not believe Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead". He said we had already in God's Word all that one from the dead could tell us about God, or salvation. Miracles in the days of Moses and of Christ did not convince many and they would not now. Sufficient unto our salvation is revealed to us in the Bible, and the difficulty with men is that they are not willing to accept it. There was a large and interested congregation.

The Rev. Mr. Kinsey of Dunellen will preach to morrow night a sermon appropriate to children.

Humbled Jane's Pride.

A good old woman whose relatives figured in the colonial history of the country now resides with her son's family in the borough. Her eyesight, while good, became a little twisted a few days ago. The good grandma's daughter-in-law had been cleaning her silverware, and had tastily decorated the sideboard with the polished brightness. The elder housewife, coming into the dining room, remarked: "My, Jane, however did you clean that tinware so nice! I haint seen tinware shine like that sence Deborah's time!" Deborah was a cousin to the old lady, and has been dead over forty years.

Lots o' Rock Near Warrenville.

The Press some time ago mentioned the discovery of a quarry on Squire Austin's farm at Warrenville. The Press could also say without fear of contradiction that on several farms to the west of the above-mentioned find there are numerous places where blue, red, and sand stone could be quarried profitably.

Needs Replacing.

Time and the elements are fast sapping the fibre from the big stick that acts as a junction-pole for the telephone company on Somerset street, corner of Pearl.

The experience of Geo. A. Apgar, of German Valley, N. J., is well worth remembering. He was troubled with chronic diarrhoea and doctored for five months and was treated by four different doctors without benefit. He then began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, of which one small bottle effected a complete cure. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. JERSEY'S GREAT CEDAR MINE.

Logs that Have Lain Uninjured in a Swamp for Ages—The Mine is at Dennisville and Has Been Worked for Three-Quarters of a Century — What Preserved the Timber?

The mining of cedar has been going on in Dennisville, Cape May County, for three-quarters of a century or over, but few Jerseymen seem to be aware of it, although the fact has been exploited in the newspapers from time to time. When one speaks of mining cedar the impression usually is that petrified cedar is meant. It is nothing of the sort. Ages and ages ago a forest of cedar trees waved its multitudinous branches in the breezes about Cape May. They were superb monarchs of the forest, many of them, and they met their death in some violent manner. They fell prostrate, perhaps, through the agency of some terrific storm, and perhaps through some tremendous earthquake.

At all events, they did not rot away, but were laid low in their prime, these stalwart cedars. One theory is that the forest was once of wide extent, and that it stood in a lake of swamp or fresh water. Then say Dr. Maurice Beasley and Clarence Deming, geologists of standing in the lower part of the State, either the half-submerged land on which the forest stood sank lower and the trees collapsed into the lake or swamp, or else the sea burst the barrier which had separated it from the trees and rushing down upon them wrecked widespread destruction. Possibly, the tumult of the inrushing ocean was sufficient to overturn the gigantic trees by the force of its waves and by the undermining of their roots, but they may have been done to the death in a more gradual way—by the destruction of their life at the roots by the salt water.

Down they all went, however, into the soft muck in which their roots were imbedded, sinking deeper by reason of their tremendous weight. The mould of centuries of leaves closed over them as if they had been babes in the woods, and the festive plethiosaurus and the melancholy pterodactyl knew them no more. After life's fitful fever they slept well, and if trees have any sense of feeling and subtle inner consciousness the grim old fellows must have thought it was all up with them. But it was not so to be. The resurrection time began away back in the year 1812 when some prosaic South Jerseyman, delving in the earth, hit upon a cedar log and brought it out to the light of day. To the surprise of everyone it was found to be in a fine state of preservation. It had been successfully protected from decay by the peculiar qualities of the soil about it—one of the strange accidents of nature which set scientists agape every now and then. It did not take long for the natives to reason that there might be more logs of the same sort in the vicinity. So they went about plunging an iron rod into the soil. When the rod struck something hard, and after they had satisfied themselves that the substance was wood and not stone, they attacked the earth with their shovels and soon would have another cedar laid bare. Practically the same process is pursued to this day, and thousands of feet of excellent timber have been procured since the mining of cedar began.

The trees often lie over one another and sometimes in heaps, as dead men lay on some of the battlefields in the Civil War. The miner usually has little trouble in striking wood. One or two jabs into the soft soil oftentimes suffices to locate a log. When the prod strikes the log the miner chips off a piece with the sharp point of the tool, which brings the splinter to the surface when drawn out of the muck. By the appearance of this chip the experienced miner can at once tell whether the log is sound or rotten. If it is sound he falls to work to prod up and down its length until he has determined how long it is. This ascertained, he goes to at the mining. He works a saw, similar to those used in cutting ice, down into the earth, severs the tree near its roots and also at the top. The log is then ready to be raised. A ditch is dug down to the log, the trunk is loosened by cant hooks and it rises with the water to the surface of the ditch. A very odd thing happens to the logs when they are raised to the surface—they invariably turn bottom side up in the water. To haul the log off to mill is then a very simple matter.

These venerable trees are white cedars, and as the saw eats its way into them an odor many times intensified over that of the red cedar of today rises to the nostrils. In color the wood is of a delicate flush tint. Strange as it may seem, not a single log, it is said, has ever been found that was waterlogged. The earthen shield about them has protected them perfectly from the dampness of the swamp in the very midst of which they lie. So far there seems to be no means of telling how deep down into the earth this cedar mine goes. Although the mine has been worked for eighty odd years the first layer has not yet been entirely removed. That there are more beneath the first layer is certain. In some stretches of the Dennisville swamps the logs have been uncovered without the hand of man, by the sinking of the earth. There the prehistoric cedars can now be seen lying criss-cross and in heaps. Nowhere in the entire swamp have logs been found lower than five feet beneath the surface, but that means that the miners have not bent their energies to probe further, while the first layer remains unexhausted. Eight miles distant, however, logs have been found at a depth of twelve feet, and twelve miles further on, at Cape May, some men engaged in sinking an artesian well came upon a log ninety feet down. The earthen sheath about this log was similar in composition to that of the Dennisville swamp.

The old logs make excellent building material, and there are tubs, pails, casks, and even shingles in South Jersey which were made from the wood seventy years ago, in a fine state of preservation.

What it is in the soil about the logs that has preserved them so perfectly no one seems to know. If any scientist has solved the mystery the great world wots not of it.

Music, Recitations, and a Lunch-Box Auction.

The Christian Endeavor society of the German Reformed Church enjoyed an entertainment and lunch-box sociable last evening in the basement of the church.

The room was filled with Christian Endeavorers from the home and other societies.

Miss Anna Doeringer opened the programme with a well rendered organ solo, which was followed with an address of welcome by E. S. Bach.

A recitation by Miss Lida Pangborn was pleasingly given and appreciated. The next number was an instrumental selection by Bert Naylor, violin; William Chamberlain, banjo; William Blake, guitar; and Bert Blake, mandolin; which was heartily applauded, and several encores were given. Henry Staats followed with an amusing recitation which kept everyone in the best of humor. Miss Nettie Kreitling, accompanied by Miss Nellie McGinnis on the organ, sang a very pretty solo in her usual excellent manner, after which Miss Anna Doeringer gave a recitation. The entertainment closed with a recitation in German by Frank Splain.

Mr. Splain was then asked to auction off the lunch-boxes, which he did much to the amusement of all. Prices from 10 cents up were secured. After the boxes had been sold, all had a jolly time socially, eating their lunch.

That Watchung Avenue Will o' the Wisp.

"With twenty years of agitation,"—remarks a progressive boroughite—"and over $7,000 of the innocent taxpayers' cash spent, it is indeed a shame that Watchung avenue has not been opened into North Plainfield. It is beginning to look as if it never will be, unless by individuals who may yet be elected to office who do not own property along the proposed route. Those now in office do not care to open the subject unless the taxpayers at large will pay for the improvement. The people at large should certainly pay a portion of the expense, but the owners of land along the new street should be made to pay a larger percentage by far than our rustic and agricultural friend who resides on a farm in Greenbrook, six miles distant, who may never see the street, let alone use it."

The New Postoffice.

All the fixtures of the new postoffice except the mailing table (which is to be 6x12, a most convenient size for rapid work) and the free delivery furniture, consisting of carriers' tables, etc., are now in place and the work will doubtless be completed tomorrow, so far as the office itself is concerned, ready for the change at any time deemed desirable by the postmaster.

Some minor changes are still to be made in the front of the office, notably the addition of a vestibule, from which two pair of double swinging doors will lead into the lobby, being so arranged that one set of doors will be used for entrance and another for exit, thus avoiding any confusion or collision among the patrons of the office.

The new office, when completed and in working order, will be one of the finest and best equipped offices of its class in the country, according to the opinion of experts who were discussing the matter yesterday.

—Franklin Council, No. 41, J.O.U.A.M., reinstated one member last evening.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dismondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: 'I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c.

INDIAN RELICS.

Interesting History of Snowshoes and Moccasins Now Exhibited in Plainfield.

The Indian snowshoes and moccasins on exhibition in Doane & Edsall's show window, which are loaned by W. S. Bullock, have interesting histories.

In the Winter of 1884 a brother of Mr. Bullock, now deceased, while traveling through the Canadian provinces, had occasion to make several trips from the main land to Prince Edward's Island across the ice of the channel. A narrow path between huge snowbanks constitutes the "road" and at occasional intervals the path widens for "breathing holes" through which the natives fish. These holes are a serious menace to the safety of the lone traveler who fails to guide his horses by them in safety, and many fatalities have resulted from carelessness in this respect.

On one occasion, while driving his tandem over this lonesome highway, Mr. Bullock came upon a native who was struggling in vain to get his half-frozen horse back again to the solid ice surrounding one of these holes.

The poor animal was clinging by his forelegs and was being held back by the weight of the sledge and trappings which were below him in the water.

But for the timely assistance rendered by the new arrival the animal would soon have disappeared in the icy current.

Finally, after much exertion, the native's horse was again put on his feet and the sledge fished out, but an inventory showed that the robes, blankets and packages which the latter contained had all gone down except a new pair of snow shoes which had in some way been tangled in a runner by the loose thong which fastened them together. Having nothing else to give in order to show his gratitude, the Indian insisted that his new found friend should take the snow shoes. On reaching Halifax Mr. Bullock sent them with other mementoes of his wanderings to his home in the "States".

The story of the moccasins is as follows:

The trial of the Sioux Chief 'Plenty Horses" for the murder of Lieutenant Casey during the Pine Ridge Agency uprising in 1891 was held at Sioux Falls, South Dakota, the town being full of Brules and Sioux from the Agency who had been detained as witnesses. W. S. Bullock, who was traveling through the Northwest at the time, was present at the trial. One evening while standing on the steps of the Cataract Hotel he noticed a large party of Indians on the opposite side of the street clad in their usual fantastic garb, part Indian, part American, and was particularly attracted by the beautiful moccasins worn by one of the number, who afterward proved to be a Brule Chief bearing the incongruous name of "Woman's Dress". Crossing the street Mr. Bullock accosted the interpreter of the party, (a very few Pine Ridge Indians can speak English) and asked if there was an opportunity of purchasing the moccasins. Now if there is any one thing an Indian enjoys it is, next to his "fire-water", a chance to barter. So the proposition to give a fine pair of "American" shoes in exchange for the footgear of the Indian was eagerly accepted and the entire party entered a shoe store nearby. As the Indian removed his moccasins the fact was revealed that he wore no hose, and knowing that the nails, of which there was a plentiful supply inside the shoe, would cause a war whoop from "Plenty Horses", Esq., when his feet came in contact with them, the prospective owner of the moccasins entered a neighboring store and brought back a pair of cotton socks, (price 5 cents). When they were presented to the Indian his joy knew no bounds, such luxuries being wholly unknown to him up to that time. The deal was finally completed, and arrayed in his new "finery" "Plenty Horses" started for the door, the envy and admiration of his friends. By some occult means the news of the transaction had spread to every Indian in the town, and on reaching the sidewalk about 300 of his brethren gathered round their Chief and executed a war dance in honor of the event.

The moccasins are made from suntanned buckskin and are completely covered with many-colored beads after the Indian fashion, in a very artistic manner. These beads are fastened on with animal sinews, thread being almost unknown to the squaws of the Northwestern Indians.

The moccasins are prized very highly by their owner as one of many interesting souvenirs of "The wild and wooly West".

Cottages on the Mountain.

John H. French, the miller, will undoubtedly erect a few Summer cottages on Johnston drive in the Spring, thus opening up what many believe to be the best of Plainfield's building sites.

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm and that she has also used it for lame back with great success. THE VICTORIOUS PARKS.

They Not Only Tied the Newark Boys But Beat 'Em from the Start.

"You may tie 'em (if you have good luck) but you can't beat 'em."

The athletic Park Club bowlers boarded the train for Bayonne last evening with the firm conviction that they would "do" their opponents of the evening, the Newark Bay Boat Club bowlers, "hands down".

Firm convictions are mighty good things to take with you to the alleys as the score will show, for when the Newark Bays sprinted in the fourth frame, after following the pace-makers from the drop of the flag to the quarter-pole, the Parks climbed at once into their fighting clothes and quickly mowing down the average, (which was only 31 against them), led as they came out of the back stretch and trotted up to the grand-stand at an easy canter with 65 pins to the good; Dr. Thiers well in the lead with a comfortable total of 195 pins and Faber 189, and Brown 188 close at his heels, struggling hard for the place.

Some of the Newark Bay Bowlers, being asked late last night by an absent friend if they were in the game, sadly replied: "No, we had a game but we were not in it; those Plainfield boys don't say much but they saw an awful pile of wood". Of course the rooters were there in full force, and in spotless array, that is to say it was spotless when the game was over for the Parks simply knocked the spots off everything around the alleys. Well here's a toast to Capt. Matthews and Plainfield People's Popular Park Players. The game was called at 8:30, and the score follows:

Plainfield Helping Western Sufferers.

The Relief Association desires to express thanks for the very generous donation of clothing which was so promptly sent in for the sufferers in the Northwest. Seven large boxes were packed, containing about 1500 articles of wearing apparel, all in good condition.

This acknowledgment has been delayed owing to the uncertainty as to whether we should be obliged to pay the expressage on these boxes. The following letter explains the situation, and if any persons are disposed to help this worthy cause still further, the way is open.

Thanks are due the United States Express Company, which carried the boxes free to New York.

10 BIBLE HOUSE,
NEW YORK, Jan. 28, 1895.

Mrs. J. K. Myers, Plainfield, N. J.

MY DEAR MADAM:—Your letters of the 25th and 26th came safe to hand and in the former I noted the $2—for which I heartily thank you and through you the donor. As to the seven boxes sent, let me say that before I could get hold of them, two (the smaller and one other) had been sent to Kansas. I regret this, but however let us hope that they went to the best point and are on the way to comfort some sad ones. The five I sent as follows: Two for Chas Kelsey, one for Mr. Peck, one for Mr. Dye and one for Mr. Hunt (our missionaries in South Dakota). I did this with latter three to get half rates via American Express Company, and also because I found that the greatest need prevailed in South Dakota. The half rates were, however, very much more than I expected they would be. I paid $31.48. which of course had to come out of the relief fund, and this I regret very much, as the need of money for food is very great.

If the good friends would feel like doing anything towards this freight bill I would appreciate it very much indeed, as it would allow us to send funds to South Dakota where the destitution is very severe.

Thanking you for all your kindness and wishing you all blessings, I remain

Yours very truly,
GEO. R. G. FISHER.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold by L. W. Randolph's drug store.

AT REST

Mrs. Maria Brookes.

The funeral of Mrs. Maria Brookes, widow of Bamber Brookes, of Malden, England, was held yesterday at 3 p. m. at the residence of decedent's grandson, George N. Hartley, 73 Rockview avenue, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone of the Church of the Redeemer officiating. The solemn and impressive Episcopal funeral service was read, and "Jesus, lover of my soul" and "Abide with Me" being beautifully rendered by the quartette, which consisted of the Misses Thompson and Messrs. W. E MacClymont and Elmer E. Runyon.

Many friends were present to take a last look at the peaceful face of the dear old lady whose 85 years had set so lightly on her. There were no flowers.

The interment was at Evergreen Cemetery.

Plainfield Riding Club.

The regular weekly ride at the club last evening was a most enjoyable affair. Capt. John I. Holly took charge of the drill for the first time since his return from the Brooklyn "frontier". During the evening some very clever hurdling was done by Messrs J W and Harry Johnson, Capt Holly and Proprietor Stephenson. Among those present were Mr and Mrs Lemuel Serrell, the Misses Holly, Miss Coard, Miss Opdyke, the Messrs J W and Harry Johnson, W T Broadway, Charles McDonald, Samuel St J McCutchen, William J Buttfield, and G W Van Boskerck.

Midwinter Social.

The women of Union Village and vicinity will hold a midwinter social at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Smith, near Rogers Bros' home, Wednesday evening, Feb. 6. Music, both vocal and instrumental, and a pleasant time for all, are promised. Should it storm, it will take place the first fair evening.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Hazelwood Kellar has recovered from the grip.

Jed. M. Smalley, who has been ill with pneumonia, is welcomed out today.

L. B. Bromfield and family of East Sixth street are visiting relatives in Philadelphia.

Herman and Harold Mills of Watchung avenue are gradually recovering from their illness.

Harold Luckey of East Fifth street, who has been ill with the grip, has entirely recovered.

Miss Lucie P. Davis of East Fifth street is visiting her friend, Miss Pearl Edgerton of Brooklyn.

Miss Nellie Schutt of Duer street is able to be out again after suffering from a severe attack of the grip.

James Arnold has returned to his studies in the North Plainfield public school after a two weeks vacation.

Miss Cora Laire of East Fifth street, who has been very ill with a combination of grip and other troubles, is able to be out again.

Miss Ginna has sent out cards inviting her friends to meet Miss Hutton at her home, "The Pines", tomorrow afternoon from 5 to 7.

Miss Emily Mullon and Miss Bessie Cushing of Brooklyn are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Hand, Park avenue.

Miss McCoy, teacher of the Sixth grade in the North Plainfield public school, returned to her work Wednesday after a week of the grip.

Bertha LaRue, who has been confined to her home on West Fourth street by illness, is once more able to attend her studies in the High School.

Miss Huitz acted as teacher of the eighth grade in the North Plainfield Public School yesterday in the absence of Miss Emma Bainbridge the regular teacher.

Harry Messersmith of Washington street, who has been rapidly recovering from the grip, has had a relapse. It is hoped nothing more serious than a second attack of the grip will be the result.

General Williams of Mt. Pleasant, Berkley County, South Carolina, who has been seriously ill during the past two weeks from a severe attack of the grip in Hotel Grenada, is rapidly improving.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. STORY OF KRUPP.

THE GREATEST GUN MAKER OF THE WORLD.

Hardships and Struggles of the Early Members of the Family. An Incentive to Poor Boys with Genius. Potatoes as the Principle Article of Diet.

A letter from Berlin not long since announced the important information that the Krupps, the great steel manufacturers of Essen on the Ruhr, Prussia, had under serious consideration the advisability of establishing a branch of their great manufacturing industry in America. If this should happen to be true it is a most important fact, for the establishment of a great plant in this country by the Krupps would be of inestimable value.

The great Krupp Works at Essen are known to be the greatest manufacturing plant in the world, and are the development from a small forge driven by water power, which Friedrich Krupp established between Essen and Altenessen in 1810. The Krupps had owned for a brief season the "Good Hope" Iron Works at Sterkrade, but had abandoned them in 1808, selling out to Heinrich Huyssen of Essen. It was while these works were being operated by his mother that young Friedrich Krupp imbibed the idea of discovering the secret of making cast steel, which was at that time known only by the English forge masters at Sheffield. At his little forge this forerunner of the greatest manufacturing industry of the world worked with tireless energy, sometimes cast down, but generally hopeful, until at last, during the latter part of 1814, he announced to the world that he had succeeded. The secret of producing and perfecting cast steel was his.

In 1822 Friedrich Krupp, the possessor of the greatest secret known to the world, had met with such reverses that he was compelled to give up his home on Limbecker street in Essen and move into a little cottage near his works, which stands to-day in the midst of the great works an object of reverence to all the thousands of workmen who earn their daily bread in the great foundries. Friedrich Krupp's life was purely one of experiment and discovery, and it remained for his son, Alfried Krupp, to make the name world famous.

Broken down by reverses, with hope abandoned and health wrecked, Friedrich Krupp died on Oct. 8, 1826, at the early age of 39 years. Before he died, however, he confided to his son, Alfried or Alfred, as we shall call him hereafter, the secret of making his famous cast steel. The boy, who was destined to become the great "Cannon King," was then only a grammar school boy of 14 years of age; but he put all the joys of boyhood's years behind him, and, with unflinching courage, accepted the sacred legacy left him by his father, put off the rosy prospect of youth, and donned instead the rough garments of the forge worker. Under the provisions of his father's will he had been made superintendent of the works, while his mother, Therese Krupp, was to carry on the business.

With remarkable self-abnegation and the most wondrous energy this tender boy took his place at the anvil, and for fifteen years labored side by side with his hired workmen. In his own account of his struggles he says; "Working hard, often all night long, my food being for the most part potatoes, coffee, bread and butter but no meat, I felt the responsibility of a harassed father of a family. For twenty-five years I persevered, until at last, under gradually improving circumstances, I conquered a decent living. My most vivid impression of the distant past is the recollection of the long continued, ever threatening danger of ruin and its avoidance through patience, self-denial and labor. For a period of fifteen years I earned only sufficient to pay my workmen their wages, and for my own labor I had no other recompense than the consciousness of duty done. With this recital I desire to encourage every young man who has nothing, is nobody and wants to be something."

Alfred Krupp's first great triumph came in 1851. It was the opportunity offered by the World's Fair at London to bring about a comparative test of the products of English and German steel makers. It had been considered impossible by English makers of cast steel to cast an ingot of more than twenty-five hundred weight under the most favorable circumstances. Krupp placed upon exhibition a finished and polished block of steel weighing 4,500 weight.

Immediately the English steel makers raised an outcry that there was some deception about it, and that it was a fraud, therefore unfair to bring it into competition with their product. They also sneered at the assertion made by Krupp that his cast steel could be forged, and asserted that cast steel, if heated to the necessary degree to subject it to the hammer, would crumble and disintegrate.

Krupp immediately showed them that his block of steel was solid and not a fraud, and that he could not only cast but forge his steel. He had the block sawed in twain, after which pieces were cut from it and forged into all manner of tools under the hammer. Not only was the great crank of an engine forged but blades for knives, nail rods for gun barrels, and fine razor blades were made from it. The scraps were then melted and run into a solid ingot again. This satisfied the English steel founders that they had much to learn.

Krupp's triumph was complete, and Essen, which had hardly been known outside of Germany, became known all over the world, while Krupp received the highest award of the exhibition, the council medal.

The Golden Rule was the guiding star of this noble man, who, when asked to accept a title, said: "No; I want no title further than the name of Krupp."

Thus Alfred Krupp builded for himself a monument more enduring than marble and more indestructible than brass. He was always the kind and considerate friend and not the proud dictatorial employer to his workingmen. Thus his name is graven on their hearts, and his memory will live as long as mankind endures.

If the Krupps should decide to come to America to establish a great steel works, the indomitable energy of the family can prepare us to see an American Essen grow up in our midst. Alfred Krupp builded his own monuments in the great mills of Essen in Prussia; there is room for Friedrich Alfred Krupp to build a like monument for himself in an American Essen. The whole land stands ready and eager to welcome him.

Just the Thing.

Jorkins—Do you consider journalism proper work for a lady?

Perkins—Certainly. All women have a fondness for press work.—Truth.

A GIGANTIC GEYSER OF OIL.

Flowed Fourteen and a Half Million Gallons in Twenty-four Hours.

The Kirkbridge No. 1 oil well, is in Madison Township, Sandusky County, Ohio. The flow of oil commenced Nov. 18. The spectacle is described as one of the most magnificent ever witnessed in that part of the country. First appeared a column of water eight or ten feet in the air. This was followed by a black stream of mud and sand, which gradually changed to yellow. Then, with a deafening roar, the gas burst forth in an immense volume, hiding the derrick from view.

As this cleared away a solid golden column a foot in diameter shot from the derrick floor 100 feet in the air, there breaking into fragments and falling in a shower of yellow rain for a quarter of a mile around. For a period of five hours this great column of oil shot upward. In a very few moments the field about the well was covered several inches deep with petroleum.

Within three or four hours the ditches for miles around were overflowing with oil. Dams were constructed in order that the product might be estimated, but these were overflowed and swept away as rapidly as built. Some persons living in the vicinity, alarmed at the spectacle, packed their household goods and fled. The Buckeye pumping station, a mile distant, was compelled to extinguish its fires on account of the gas, and all other fires within the district were put out.

It was a literal flood of oil, the estimated production for the first twenty-four hours being 14,560,000 gallons. About 19,000 barrels per day have been saved and marketed, since the oil has been brought under full control. The owner has refused an offer of $500,000 for the well, being content with the income of $10,000 per day.

SLATE PENCILS AND SLATES.

Millions of Them Used Yearly in Schools and Elsewhere in This Country.

Only one firm in the United States is making pencils from native slate. There are imported many slate pencils—that is, pencils made of slate—from Germany, and also some soapstone pencils from abroad. The native soapstone-pencil industry languishes, according to those interested, because of the recent reduction in the tariff upon imported soapstone pencils. Millions of pencils made of slate are turned out at a quarry in Pennsylvania. The rough slate is sawn into suitable pieces by machinery, and from each piece a special machine cuts six pencils of standard length, 5 1-2 inches. These pencils come out rounded, but not pointed. Deft boys take them by twos and threes and quickly point them at an emery wheel rapidly revolved by machinery. The pencils are then put up in pasteboard boxes of 100 each, and these boxes are placed in wooden cases containing 10,000 pencils. The wholesale price of slate pencils is only $6.75 a case. Pencils that break in the making are made up into "shorts," measuring 3 1-2 or 4 1-2 inches, and the shorter pencils are made also from small fragments of slate. Pencils wrapped in American flag printed on paper cost $2 a case more than the ordinary standard bare pencil, and pencils wrapped in gilt paper come somewhat higher. It is an easy bit of ciphering to make out that pencils at $6.75 a case of 10,000 are worth about two-thirds of a mill, or one-fifteenth of a cent each.

Pencils imported from Germany sell in the market at about the price of the native product. The American labor is much better paid than the German labor, but the cost of the American pencil is not much greater than that of the German pencil because machinery is so much more used here than abroad. The German pencils are in large part made by hand in the homes of the German work folks, and the price paid for the work is wretchedly small.

Some of Our Proverbs.

The following proverbs are familiar specimens of the Chinese coinage, and in several instances where they harmonize with similar ones in our own language, the English version is given also:

"Virtue is the surest road to longevity; but vice meets with an early doom." [Virtue is its own reward.]

"Time flies like an arrow; day and months like a weaver's shuttle." [Time and tide wait for no man.]

"Let every man sweep the snow from before his own doors, and not trouble himself about the frost on his neighbor's tiles." [Mind your own business.]

"Attend to your farms and mulberry trees that you may have food and sufficient clothing." [Take care of your business and your business will take care of you.]

"To paint a snake and add legs." [Drawing the long bow.]

"Let us get drunk to-day while we have wine; the sorrows of to-morrow may be borne to-morrow." [Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.]

"Abstain from false accusing that the good and honest may be in safety.] [Bear not false witness against thy neighbor.]

"The court is like a ship at sea—everything depends on the wind." [Put not your trust in princes.]

"For him who does everything in its proper time one day is worth three." [A stitch in time saves nine.]

"To cut off a hen's head with a battle ax." [Much ado about nothing.]

"The truths which we least wish to hear are those which it is most to our advantage to know." [The truth is disagreeable.]

"If you don't enter the tiger's den you cannot obtain her young." [Nothing venture, nothing win.]

"One strand of silk doesn't make a thread." [One swallow doesn't make a summer.]

"A thousand chiefs, a thousand plans." [Too many cooks will spoil the broth.]

"There's a time to fish and a time to dry nets." [There's a time for all things.]

"The teacher should not leave his books or the poor man his pigs." [Let the cobbler stick to his last.]

"It thunders loudly, but little rain falls." [Much cry and little wool.]—Sel.

For Mother's Sake.

General O. O. Howard's description of his life at West Point should be an incentive to every young man. He tells how he braved the ridicule of the cadets by going to religious services and doing work in the Sunday School. He said it cost him more to take his stand and run the gauntlet of their scoffs and sneers than it did later to face the cannon and musketry of the battlefield. "But I gripped my Bible, shut my teeth, and went, for mother's sake."

MONEY LOANED.

Local Representatives Wanted.

Our system affords an opportunity to borrow on either personal or real estate security. The plan is superior to building and loan associations. The amount borrowed may be returned in monthly payments without bonus, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum. It affords absolute security to investors, with a reasonable guarantee of an annual dividend of from 8 to 10 per cent. We desire to secure the services of energetic, representative men in every community to act as local secretaries. The position will be sufficiently remunerative to amply compensate for services. If you possess the above qualifications write for particulars. Full information regarding our system of making loans as well as investments and agencies will be furnished by addressing S. S. "OF THEE I SING."

DR. SMITH TELLS HOW OUR NATIONAL HYMN WAS WRITTEN.

First Scribbled on a Scrap of Waste Paper; Sung on July 4, 1832, in Boston, and Since Then in All Parts of the World:

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes once said facetiously that he supposed the three people in the world whose poems were the best known were himself, one Smith and one Brown.

The one Brown he had in mind was the Mrs. Brown who wrote "I love to Steal Awhile Away." The one Smith was his old college classmate and long-time friend, Samuel Francis Smith, D.D., the author of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

Dr. Smith is still among the living, one of the last of that famous class of Harvard '29 men which included, besides the late Dr. Holmes, the Rev. James Freeman Clarke, Prof. Benjamin Pierce, Judge Curtis, Judge Bigelow and a number of others well known in Massachusetts' annals and beyond them.

In October, 1894, Dr. Smith was eighty-six years old. He recently told a contributor of the New York Herald the following story of the birth of the national hymn:

I did not know that I had written a national hymn till the conviction was forced upon me. While I was a student in the Theological Seminary in Andover, Mass., Mr. Lowell Mason, through whose efforts the study of music was introduced into the public schools of Boston and elsewhere in this country, brought me a number of singing books, which Mr. William C. Woodbridge, who had visited Germany to inspect the school system there, had brought home with him and put into Mr. Mason's hands.

Mr. Woodbridge had been much impressed with the German method of teaching music in the schools, and I was asked to look through the books and translate such of the songs as seemed to me appropriate to our American schools.

DR. SAMUEL F. SMITH.

Turning over the leaves of one of the music books I found one song of a patriotic nature set to the tune which England claims as hers because she has so long sung it to the words "God Save the Queen," but which the Danes claim as theirs, and which the Germans claim as theirs, and which the Germans claim as original with them, and of the real origin of which I believe no one is certain.

The music impressed me by its simplicity and easy movement, and I was at once moved to write a patriotic hymn of my own, which American children could sing to this same tune, which I did on a scrap of waste paper, probably finishing it within half an hour.

That was in February, 1832. I gave the hymn to Mr. Mason with others—some translations, others my own—and thought no more of it. The following Fourth of July I happened into Park Street Church in Boston, where Sunday-school children were enjoying a patriotic festival. It was at this children's Fourth of July celebration that "America" was first sung, the words of which I had written a few months before. Since then I have heard it sung all over the world.

As to the story which has been told of the sending of the original of "America" to the Pope, it is not true. An autograph copy was sent, framed, by a friend of mine, as an individual, to be deposited in the Vatican library at Rome; the original is still in my own possession.

It was of Dr. Smith that Dr. Holmes wrote in his poem to "The Boys," composed for one of their Harvard class reunions:

Ane there's a nice youngster of excellent pith
Fate tried to conceal it by naming it Smith;
But he shouted a song for the brave and the free,
Just read on his medal, "My Country, of Thee."

Speaking of the difference between college life to-day and in his own student days, Dr. Smith said the chief difference is the decrease of class spirit owing to the largely increased number of men in the classes to-day. "Our class at Harvard," said Dr. Smith, "numbered sixty when we graduated, and we all knew each other well. We had the chance to measure, mark and weigh each other, and were almost like brothers of one family."

For the last few years of Dr. Holmes's life the remnant of the class of '29 gave up holding their annual reunion at one of the hotels, and dined at his residence as his personal guests. These occasions lasted from 4 in the afternoon till late at night, and the reminiscences exchanged were peculiarly entertaining, saddened only by the dwindling numbers.

Dr. Smith has led too busy a life to sentimentalize over his work, until this year not even taking the trouble to hunt up the manuscript of his famous patriotic poem, to which he always referred when questioned as "scribbled upon a bit of waste paper somewhere."

It Was Very Sudden.

She—Do you think the time will ever come when woman will propose?

He—I don't see why it shouldn't. Suppose you propose to me to-night, and I said yes, what——

She—Oh, Henry, this is so sudden! But never mind; it is just as well, and mother, I know, will be delighted.—Milwaukee Catholic Citizen.

Pedestrians won't know where they're at,
She'll gayly run them down, by golly,
While studying some fair fare's hat.

AT THE BICYCLE ACADEMY.

'Twas at a female cycling school,
Where bloomer costumes are the rule;
And fairy forms in trousers hid,
Essay the bike as she is rid.

A rare and radiant vision she!
A dream! a song! a rhapsody!
To whom none other there was like,
Came forth to tame the festive bike!

She cast about a bashful glance,
Gazed at her wiry steed askance;
They eyed her bifurcated skirt,
And wondered if a tumble hurt.

Then, at the master's stern command,
She grasped her steed with trembling hand;
A gasp, a sigh, with anguish pent,
A bounce, a boost, and up she went.

Prate not to me of dire alarms,
Of fire and floods and martial arms;
For depth of woe there's nothing like
A frightened female on a bike!

She stuck, she strained, she vainly strove
To make that pesky pedal move;
She pumped, she pushed, turned ghastly white,
And worked both feet with all her might!

And now she starts! she seems to feel
A thrill of life along her wheel!
But, oh! a bump! a zigzag slump!
Girl! bike, spokes, legs, all in a lump!
—Evening Sun.

FOR ONE MORE SHOT.

A Short Story of the Civil War Told by an Old Soldier.

"Here was a battle going on," said an old soldier; "nothing very heroic about it nor anything very tremendous, except that more or less men were getting killed and wounded all the time. Patches of woods with open spaces intervening, the line stretched along in the edge of the woods and across the open spaces. Along in front an open space, and on the other side of that the Confederates, in woods like ourselves, where there were woods, but in light earthworks and rifle pits between. That was their position, and we had advanced toward it as a part of some general movement, and our business was to stay there and keep the troops in front engaged.

"Veteran troops, ours were, except for such recruits as were scattered among us and except for a few enthusiastic men that liked to shout, using ammunition sparingly and not shooting much unless they thought they had some sort of chance for hitting something. Thoughtless, sometimes, about themselves, but pretty careful generally, and protecting themselves as much as they could. But even with that, and with the fighting slow, we managed in the course of the day to lose a pretty good lot of men.

"Here, now, was a man in my regiment shot through the body. He crawled away toward the rear. I don't know why he wasn't picked up by the hospital men, but he wasn't. Just back of that part of the line where our regiment was stationed was a little farmhouse. In front of this house was a sort of open yard or space in which there was one tree; it wasn't a very big tree, and I don't remember what kind of tree it was, but I remember that two of its roots ran away from the trunk a little above ground for four or five feet, and between these roots there was a little hollow, just a little sort of depression in the ground. The front yard was maybe eight or ten yards back from the line; that is, it might have been that much back to the tree.

"The man crawled along slowly until he came to the tree, and he crept partly into that little depression; I suppose it looked sort of inviting; it was a place; it wasn't just out doors, but was a sort of place by itself, and the tree gave it a kind of companionship, too. He crept partly into the little hollow and then stopped and raised himself up so that he was half sitting up, propped up on one arm and hand, and he sat up that way and looked at the brigade commander, who was standing in the yard. The brigade commander had been the Colonel of the wounded man's regiment, and he knew every man in it; he knew this man; and, of course, every man in the regiment knew the Colonel—the General he was now—and from knowing him so long and so well the men had all come to rely on him and to look to him.

"Red was creeping out around the wounded man now, and staining the little hollow as he sat there, propped up on his arm looking at the General. There was a sort of wistful look on his face, as though he thought the General could help him, and the General looked down on him very soberly; in fact, with a very great pity. Just a few feet away, more or less, men were being killed and wounded all the time, but that was going on in an orderly, business fashion. This man was just dying, just simply dying by himself, and you could see his life fade as you looked at him, and you could see the red stain spreading in the little hollow, and making scallops here and there where it ran up into little shallow gulfs and bays making off from the main depression.

"He was getting weaker and weaker, and was going fast, but all the time looking up at the General with that look on his face.

"'If I could only have one more shot,' he said. You see, he wasn't thinking of home or friends. He was thinking of the battle; his last wish was for one more shot; and a second later he collapsed, and fell dead."

A Family Reunion of Wives.

William Cox, of Monticello, Ky., ate a New Year's dinner at which sat three of his living wives, and he is only 38 years of age. His first was Miss Minerva Smith, who bore him nine children and was afterward divorced. Mr. Cox then married Miss Julia Stephens, and he was soon divorced from her. No children resulted from that union. He then wedded his present spouse, a Tennessee woman, and seven children have blessed their home.

His first two wives have married again and there is now a feeling of harmony and good will existing between them. On New Year's Day Mr. Cox spread a banquet at his home and invited his two former helpmates to celebrate the event with him. They responded, and the day passed without a ripple of dissatisfaction or unpleasantness. Cox was first married at the age of 14.

Of all sorts of earthly good, the price is self denial. The lower must be sacrified for the greater; the coarse give place to the finer.—R. D. Hitchcock.

Self-knowledge is best learned, not by contemplation, but action. Strive to do your duty, and you will soon discover of what stuff you are made.—Goethe.

If we are ever in doubt what to do, it is a good rule to ask ourselves what we shall wish on the morrow that we had done.

PEERLESS INDIANA.

HER SUPERIORITY OVER ENGLAND'S LATEST BATTLE SHIP.

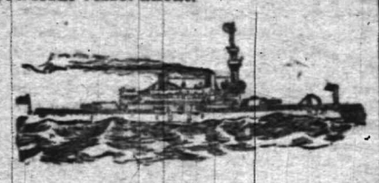
With 4,679 Tons Less Displacement, the Indiana Has the Same Speed, the Same Coal Carrying Capacity and Heavier Guns Than the British Battleship.

Since Dec. 19, when the new first-class battleship Magnificent of the British navy was launched at Chatham dockyard, the experts on ship building of all countries have devoted a good deal of time in commenting upon and criticising the new vessel.

They have almost, without exception, used the French ship Sardegna and the American battleship Indiana as their standards of comparison.

Even the English constructors who have spoken of the Magnificent have agreed that the enthusiastic English constructor who stated that the Magnificent was the most powerful vessel afloat, was wrong, and almost without exception they point to the Indiana, now building by Messrs. Cramp of Philadelphia as one superior to the Magnificent.

The Indiana is not yet afloat, but before summer she will be flying her commission pennant, and some American naval officers say that she will be worthy of the title that the Englishmen bestowed on the Magnificent—that is "the most powerful vessel afloat."



UNITED STATES BATTLESHIP INDIANA.

As a matter of fact a comparison of the respective merits of the Magnificent and the Indiana appears unjust to the latter, for the Indiana was designed and contracted for in President Harrison's administration, and the appropriation for the Magnificent was not made by Parliament until 1893, and so the latter has every reason to be, and is, more modern than her American rival.

Leaving aside, however, the improvements of the last few years for comfort of officers and men and the little details of mechanism, and viewing the Indiana and Magnificent purely as engine of war, the Indiana is, in the opinion of ship builders, the better vessel of the two.

The Magnificent mounts four 22-inch breech-loading rifles, twelve 6-inch rapid fire, sixteen 12-pounder rapid fire, and twelve 3-pounder rapid fire guns, or forty-four guns in all.

Out of this battery the Magnificent can fire eight guns either ahead or astern, and with these eight guns she can throw 1,659 pounds of metal.

Here the Indiana's superiority is demonstrated. Her battery consists of four 13-inch breech-loading rifles, eight 8-inch breech-loading rifles, four 6-inch, twenty 6-pounder rapid-fire guns, making in all thirty-six guns, or eight less than the Magnificent.

With these, however, she can throw 4,964 pounds of metal either ahead or astern, which is 3,825 pounds more than the English battle ship can throw.

In the matter of firing abeam the Indiana's superiority is demonstrated by the fact that with twenty-four guns the Maguificent throws but 3,575 pounds; the American ship, with four guns less, throws 5,660 pounds, or 2,085 pounds more than the Englishman's pride.

BRITISH BATTLESHIP MAGNIFICENT.

It requires three minutes under battle conditions to fire one round from a 12 or 13-inch gun and the ships would be just equal on this point, but in three minutes the American could throw 5,376 pounds either ahead or astern and the English ship could only throw 4,494 pounds.

Firing abeam as fast as possible with all available guns, the Indiana could throw 12,558 pounds, while the Magnificent's score would be but 8,440 pounds.

As regards armor, the thickest part of the Magnificent's is 14 inches, and the Indiana has 18 inches of Harveyized steel at her thickest part. The steel used in both navies is practically the same, and if there is any preference it must rest with the American product, for the Harvey nickeling process is an American invention, and has been longer in use on this side of the water.

A fact which should, in the opinion of steel experts, prove conclusively that American steel is the best in the world is that the Russian Government, after causing an examination to be made of the steel plants of all European countries, awarded its contract for ship armor to the iron and steel works in Bethelem, Pa.

With all of the Magnificent's forty-four guns trained seaward and fired simultaneously she would throw a weight of metal the total of which would be 4,295 pounds, while the Indiana under like conditions, would throw 5,920 pounds, or 1,625 pounds more than the English ship.

Speed is still a matter of conjecture, but both vessels are designed for 17 1-4 knots, but neither one has yet demonstrated that she will fulfill the requirements in this direction. If precedent counts for anything, though, the Indiana will live up to them, for every ship built by Cramp and Sons has exceeded the contracted speed by at least a quarter of a knot.

Some constructors regard it as very remarkable that the Indiana, which has 4,679 tons less displacement than the Magnificent, should have an equal coaling capacity and a heavier battery and yet make the same speed, but this is due largely to the lightness of the machinery.

FOR PLAINFIELD'S PROGRESS.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., FEB. 1, 1895

A Night Battle at Sea.

Feb. 1, 1800, was the date of gallant Commodore Truxton's attack on the French war frigate Vengeance. The Frenchman was more than a match for Truxton's ship, the Constellation, and rated 54 guns against his 38, but she ran before the Yankee, leading him a chase of several hours. It was night when the Constellation overtook the flying frigate. Standing at the lee gangway, Truxton hailed the Vengeance to surrender, receiving for response a broadside in his spars and rigging. But he was all ready, with his battle-lanterns swinging over the gunners, who had been told to "load and fire as fast as possible," alternating round shot with grape. The vessels sailed within pistol shot of each other for five hours, and the American ship planted 180 shots in the enemy's hull. More than a third of the French sailors were cut down, and three times the tricolor dropped in token of defeat, but owing to the darkness this signal was not seen.

Truxton's mainmast rigging had been shot away, and the mast was tottering. In the maintop the young middy, James Jarvis, kept his station throughout the fight with an old tar, who cautioned the boy that the mast must go and carry them overboard in the wreck. The lad was chief in authority there and knew his orders. Said he: "I cannot leave my station. If the mast goes, we must go with it."

The mast did fall, and the boy was killed, the only officer lost in that bloody action. GEORGE L. KILMER.

Surprise Reception.

After the prayer meeting was over in Hope Chapel last night, a surprise reception was given to Mr. Yerkes by his Bible class. A musical and literary programme was rendered by Miss Lizzie Firstbrook, Miss Duckworth, Miss Higgins, and Mr. Lee.

A beautiful chair was presented to Mr. Yerkes by his class; and Mr. Munger, teacher of the Men's Bible class, in presenting the gift, spoke of the faithfulness of Mr. Yerkes's class.

In receiving the gift Mr. Yerkes said that he could n't find words to express his gratitude, but that he was greatly indebted to them for the fine chair, and would spend many happy moments in it studying his Sunday-school lessons.

All then repaired to a side room, where good things were served in abundance.

The pleasant time was largely due to the untiring committee, consisting of Mrs. Bowman, chairman, Mrs. McComas, Mrs. Higgins, and Mrs. Cox.

Lady Cyclers on Their Travels.

The Lady Cyclers of Plainfield went yesterday to Philadelphia, and were entertained by Mrs. Clark Dillenbeck, formerly Miss Morrison of Plainfield.

Arriving at Philadelphia, they went direct to the Mint, and after spending an hour there, and wishing for all they saw, they went to Wannamaker's, where the large organ was played for them, and if some of the Plainfield young men had only been there the happiness would have been complete.

At 12:15 the party took the train for Mt. pleasant, where Mrs. Dillenbeck lives, and where a very fine dinner was served much to the delight of all. After dinner was over, whist was enjoyed, the lucky winners being Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Dillenbeck, each of whom won a bottle of perfume, and Miss Arleen Crane and Mrs. Fred Green, who won a very handsome key ring apiece. The party left Philadelphia at 8, and, much to their discomfort, did not reach Plainfield till nearly 10.

Among those who enjoyed this treat were Miss Arleen Crane, Miss Ethel Green, Miss Minnie French, Mrs. Ned Williams, Mrs. Fred Green, Miss Grace Langdon and Miss Netta Yerkes.

Counselor McCarthy's Obsequies.

The funeral today of Edw. Dorr McCarthy at his late residence 1038 Park avenue, called together a large number of mourning friends from New York, Philadelphia and Plainfield. Many prominent members of the legal profession were noticed in the solemn assembly.

The pallbearers were the Messrs. Delaney, Goodyear and Gove of New York; Mr. Reynolds of New Brunswick and Messrs. Obl, Scott, Whiting, Case and Perkins of this city. A notable feature of the funeral procession was the noble coal black stallion Nero for years his master's favorite saddle horse which with his all trappings on, slowly walked behind the hearse in charge of his groom who carried in his hand the masters ridingwhip. The body was sent to the Germantown Crematory.

Steam, Not Fire.

The alarm from box 152 at 5:10 yesterday called the borough fire department to William J. Buttfield's residence 161 Grove street. The scare was caused by a steam pipe bursting in the basement filling the latter with steam which was mistaken for smoke in the excitement. The water was turned on and in fact Warren Hose wagon did not leave its house at all because the recall was sounded before the horses who were out on street work arrived.

Refunds the Cost.

Edward White has introduced a new principle into the dry-goods business in Plainfield. It is to refund money on all goods that are purchased at his store and are not satisfactory. He says it does n't mean giving a credit check to trade out, but giving back the cash to you as cheerfully as it was received. There are some good trademakers mentioned in his ad that will interest you.

O. W. O. Hardman, sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

PEANUTS AND THE CIVIL WAR.

An Enormous Increase in the Peanut Crop Due to Old Soldiers.

"I don't suppose there are many people who know that the ever-popular peanut came originally to this country with the first cargo of slaves that landed on our shores," said a dealer in nuts and fruits, "but such is the interesting fact. The peanut is a native of Africa, and in its wild state is as full of oil almost as a fat 'possum. Cultivation and change of soil have greatly reduced its oleaginous quality, although the nuts raised in North Carolina secrete enough oil yet to make them in demand in France, where they combine with their African progenitor and cottonseed to make a great deal of the olive oil we find in our restaurants and groceries.

"And I don't believe there are many people outside of those who have it who ever heard of the peanut habit. You don't like raw peanuts, do you? I thought not. No one does until he acquires the habit, and then he wants his raw peanuts just as regular as he wants his tobacco, provided he chews or smokes—and if he has the peanut habit the chances are he is not a tobacco chewer. The funny part of the peanut habit is that it prevails only among veterans of the late war who served either in Virginia or Tennessee or North Carolina. These are the States where the bulk of the peanut crop is grown.

"Perhaps you can remember how things were before the war. If you can't, I will tell you that the peanut then was chiefly a holiday luxury to the great mass of people in this country. The day when the circus was in town, or when the county fair was showing its pumpkins and four-minute horse trots, or when the great and glorious Fourth of July had come around again, were about the only occasions when the popular yearning for the peanut was in any measure satisfied On these memorable occasions the nu' was shucked and masticated until it couldn't rest.

"It was only in the towns and large villages that the favored few could have peanuts with them always. Before the war there wasn't a peanut roaster in the whole country outside of the big towns and cities, and the rural dealers bought their stock already roasted and delivered to them in big, coarse bags. To-day every cross-roads from Maine to California has its peanut stand and its wheezing steam roaster, and the great American nut has no better standing on circus day or Fourth of July than it has on any ordinary day of the year, except that there is greater concentration of energy as to its shucking and chewing on these red-letter days.

ST. BERNARDS IN HARNESS.

The Policeman Was in Doubt Whether to Admit Them to Prospect Park.

One of the strangest rigs that ever appeared on a Brooklyn highway drove up to the entrance to Prospect Park several weeks ago, when the sleighing was good. It consisted of a tiny sledge, built Russian fashion, with low runners and a high front.

In it sat a boy about 12 years of age and a little girl about 10. Both were dressed in the height of fashion for such youngsters, and were muffled up and kept warm by the most gorgeous of fur robes. It was their team, however, which attracted attention.

They were not horses not goats, but huge, shaggy St. Bernard dogs, that had evidently been trained to the work, for they obeyed the "Gee up!" and "Ho!" of the youthful driver, like the gentlest of roadsters. The policeman at the entrance to the park didn't know whether to let them in or not.

He consulted his book of park ordinances but could find nothing there prohibiting the admission of secured dogs to the park. Still, he was doubtful about letting the team in. In the meantime a large crowd had gathered around and were petting the dogs.

The youngsters in the sleigh got more and more impatient as the policeman stopped thinking it over, and finally he stood up and said:

"If you're not going to let me in, say so, and don't keep me standing here."

The crowd was indulging in a good laugh at the boy's indignation, when a sergeant of police came along, and after hearing all about the trouble decided to let the team in. The little fellow thanked the policeman most courteously, climbed into the sleigh beside his pretty companion, raised his hat to the officer, and then swinging his whip in the air, cried, "Gee up!" to the dogs, and was off at a regular trotting pace.

JOLLY PROMENADERS.

Ragamuffin Concert of the Emmanuel Baptist Church.

The ragamuffin promenade concert last evening in Central Hall, given under the auspices and for the benefit of Emmanuel Baptist Church, was a very successful affair, both from a social and financial standpoint. Of course the fun of the evening centred around the grand promenade ragamuffins in costume and mask which began at 10 and continued for fully three-quarters of an hour, convulsing the party with the funny grimaces and queer gestures of those who took part. It was a cake walk without the cake, and it was more fun than a barrel of monkeys to watch the evolutions, revolutions, convolutions, and comical gyrations of the maskers who seemed to get as much fun out of the affair as the crowd who stood around the hall holding their sides from laughter.

Frederick Dunham and Miss Adeline Leek lead the march, and at its close Miss Ella Randolph was crowned queen with a beautiful tiara of paper, having worn in the opinion of the judges the most artistic gown of any of the maskers Her gown was certainly fantastic in the extreme there being fourteen different colors on the skirt and three on the waist, the whole set off with a hat gorgeous with spangles. Mrs. E. B. Maynard wore a very unique gown made of over 500 pieces in every conceivable color of the rainbow with a hat trimmed with old gold and black and it was thought by many in the hall that she would be awarded the prize.

Mrs. M. J. Mitchell was gowned in a dress from Canada, the material of which was over one hundred years old, trimmed with bunting and chintz, while Miss Mitchell appeared in an effective costume of pale blue bloomers and jaunty sailor hat and Miss Doyle was in blue and maroon.

A dozen couples took part in the unique procession and at its close the happy merry makers patronized the cake and ice-cream stand or the soda bar. Very many bright faced Sunday-school children were present and their merry laughter frequently filled the hall. Over one hundred were present during the evening and between $40 and $50 was realized for the church fund.

Guttman's orchestra furnished music during the evening.

BY THE WAY.

—Reserved seats for the concert and readings to be given in the new Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday, Feb. 5, are now on sale at Reynolds's pharmacy.

—Next Thursday evening, Feb. 7, an organ recital will be given in the Presbyterian church at Westfield by W. E. MacClymont, assisted by Walter A. Hudson, basso, Raymond W. Smith of Newark, tenor, and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist.

—The parade of the Thatcher & Johnson Minstrels which will take place on the day of the performance is said to be the most novel and magnificent street demonetrations ever given by a minstrel company. It will take place at the noon hour, and will make a pleasing spectacle which must be seen to be appreciated.

—There was a large attendance at the entertainment in the Sunday-school room of the First Presbyterian Church last evening. Various selections were rendered on an Edison phonograph operated by George H. Bruce of New York. During the evening William McKillup rendered a violin solo which was exactly reproduced a few minutes later.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure.

REMOVAL.

Dr. Lighthill begs leave to give notice that he has removed to

NO. 132 CRESCENT AVE.

(a few doors from his former location) where he can be consulted on all chronic diseases of whatever name and nature.

Dr. Lighthill refers with pardonable pride to the success of his practice in Plainfield and submits below a few of the many testimonials which he has received from grateful patients. A mass of similar ones can be seen at his office.

AN ALMOST MIRACULOUS CURE.

The Statement of Mr. Edward Teel, Jr., of Dunellen, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

From a sense of duty I desire to call public attention to the almost miraculous cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in the case of my wife. For eleven years she had been afflicted with piles of an unusual severe and distressing character. She suffered every day of her life the most intense pain, attended with frequent and profuse hemorrhage. This state of things debilitated her entire system until she became a perfect wreck of her former self.

We made every effort to obtain a cure but they all resulted in bitter disappointment, although a number of physicians of excellent reputations for skill in that direction had treated her case. She grew worse and worse all the time, the pain became perfectly unbearable and I felt she could not bear the strain of her condition much longer. In this extremity, a friend of mine, Mr. W. E. Dilts, a resident of Roselle, N. J., a passenger conductor on the New Jersey Central told me that he had been similarly affected, and had been permanently cured by Dr. Lighthill, after other medical skill had failed. He assured me that the doctor would cure my wife, no matter how severe her case may be, and his prediction proved perfectly correct. In spite of her desperate condition, Dr. Lighthill, I am glad to say, has effected a complete and perfect cure in her case, and has given her new life.

Since the cure has been effected she has gained in health and strength and is so improved in appearance that her friends scarcely recognize her. They all consider her cure as almost miraculous, and Dr. Lighthill's praise is heard on every side. Our gratitude to Dr. Lighthill is unbounded and we only hope that other sufferers may be benefited by this publication.

EDWARD TEEL, JR.

A Flattering Testimonial from Colonel John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE.
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing with which I was afflicted.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly; they were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 132 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOMAS CALLAHAN,

A Card From Mr. T. R VanZandt,

of Nos. 304 and 306 Park ave.,

Plainfield, N. J

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks, but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr J. V. Z Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose flattering testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

A BISHOP'S SALOON.

TO BE RUN ON THE SAME PRINCIPLES AS THE LIQUOR SALOON.

Good Cheer, Free Lunch, Games and Everything but Intoxicants Furnished. The Experiment to be Tried in Wicked Chicago First.

Priest Rainsford of an Episcopal church in New York has for a long time advocated a church saloon, where beer could be sold. Bishop Fellows of Chicago is about to try a saloon experiment, but without liquor.

He will not sell rum or any other kind of intoxicant, for he proposes to compete for the patronage and influence of the liquor saloon with what he calls the "home saloon." He is going to put in practical operation the plan he suggested at the Father Mathew celebration at the Auditorium several months ago.

"What," he said, "has the Church or the temperance movement to offer in a material way in competition with the saloon? Nothing. I have been investigating the saloon business. I have had men at work finding out all about their methods and the business. We propose to apply those principles to the conducting and management of places where we can offer everything that the saloon does in the way of warmth and light and a place to sit down, and a place to get something to eat and something to drink, except intoxicants. I have the figures in my pocket now, and I believe these places can be made both self-supporting and self-propagating.

"For 5 cents we can furnish a hot drink of coffee, tea, or something of the sort, or other non-intoxicating drinks, together with a pretty fair meal of bread, meat, and potato salad, or something of that sort. For 10 cents we can do very much better. It is an experiment that has proved successful in London, Liverpool, Manchester, and other English cities. It promises well for Chicago. It can only be demonstrated by experiment.

"If one proves successful a hundred will, and we want to locate them right where they are needed. Our first one will be opened in the 'levee' district probably, and others wherever they can be made successful. We want them to be as places of gatherings for friends and acquaintances, something like the wine shops of Paris and the Continent. They will be perfectly respectable.

"People want light and warmth and a place where they can feel they have a right to be, and therefore it is not a question of welcome or privilege. I believe such a work as this, if it proves successful, will be worth fifty years of merely intellectual temperance work. The more I study this matter the more I am impressed with its possibilities. One of the features of it is that it shall be self-supporting.

"It will be carried on as a part of the general scheme of the People's Institute, though not necessarily in connection with the institute. They will be planted where they can do the most good, and these places of refreshment where they are most needed. The institutes will be educational, recreative, and broadly undenominational in their work. They will be open seven days and seven nights in the week. If I had the money it would cost to establish one church where, say, 130 worship Sunday, I could establish two or three institutes."

Bishop Fallows will not resign his bishopric nor his connection with St. Paul's Church. He could not, in keeping with the ecclesiastical organization of the Reformed Episcopal Church. He will simply leave the details of parochial work to an assistant or perhaps two.

DR. DEPEW ON FREE LUNCH.

He Believes It an Ingenious Preparation for the Destruction of Men's Souls.

"Free lunches!" exclaimed the doctor. "Well, I did say something about free lunches, didn't I? And if I'm not mistaken I referred to them as ingenious preparations, too. Well, they are. I meant all I said about young men becoming slaves to drink. It's a terrible thing, and I think the free lunch is largely responsible for it. It's a most ingenious contrivance; and do you know," the Doctor lowered his voice, "do you know that it's simply put in a place to make a man thirsty? Yes, sir, I tell you that the free lunch is composed of food of such a character that it keeps a man thirsty and forces him to buy liquor to keep himself comfortable. It is made up of pickled herring, corned beef, fish cakes, salted potatoes, pretzels, cheese, smoked beef, potato salad, and dozens of other dishes the main ingredient of which is salt. And as sure as a man eats free lunch just so sure will he be a drinking man unless he is possessed of rare self-control. Why, I tell you the free lunch is more to blame for the number of drunkards around than anything else. A man takes a drink and a bite; the bite makes him thirsty and the drink makes him hungry, and many a man who would leave a saloon after having imbibed one drink will stick all day as long as the free lunch is there. It isn't the drink that keeps him, but the ingenious make-up of the free lunch; and that's why I say it's a blotch on civilization and should be wiped out.

"Perhaps you wonder how I know all this. I'll tell you. I travel a great deal, and wherever I go I always make it a point to talk with the man next me. I ask him his business and make him tell me all about it. That's why I'm always prepared to address any kind of an audience on almost any kind of a subject. Now, among others, I have talked to many hotel men and liquor dealers, keepers of fashionable cafes as well as German saloon keepers, and, as the free lunch is a sort of hobby of mine I always make them tell me about what they spread out for their customers in the eating line. I used to wonder how they could afford to spread a free lunch, but all liquor dealers tell me that it's the most paying investment they make, and I believe it is."

$10,000 for a Tunnel Kiss.

A peculiar suit has been instituted at Bulla, Ala. Mrs. Sue Robbins was a passenger on the Louisville train the other day; so were Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Lemons, a young couple just married. The train was passing through a tunnel and Mr. Lemons, who had left his wife's seat, just behind Mrs. Robbins, returned to it, as he thought in the darkness, and proceeded to kiss his newly wedded bride. About this time the train emerged from the tunnel and disclosed that his supposed bride was Mrs. Robbins, who is a young widow. She has sued for $10,000 damages for the mistake, and will not admit the act was not intentional.

MAD DOG AT THE PLAINS.

A Neighboring Village Terrorized—One Man Bitten.

Scotch Plains's usual quiet morning solitude was broken today by the appearance of a mad dog. The dog was first noticed at the house of E. M. Johnston where it bit a fine, large Newfoundland dog belong to Mr. Johnston, after which it started toward the village, meeting Edward Dowarth, who was standing on the street. It bit him but fortunately did not bring blood. It next went for Bill Wesler who was on his way to work. Bill made a kick for him which missed the dog but landed Bill and his dinner pail in the gutter. The dog started toward Springfield.

When near the Stout farm it met John Klemser, who was on his way to the city. The dog made a spring at him, tearing his coat. John threw out his arm to ward off a second attack, and the dog bit him in the hand. The dog then started on toward Springfield. John resumed his journey to the city, stopping at Dr. Westcott's to have the wound cauterized. Had the dog made its appearance an hour later it would have been much worse as the streets would have been full of children on their way to school. A number of dogs known to be bitten will be shot by their owners.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Seely Edsall is severely ill.

E. P. Williams of West Seventh street is on a business trip in Connecticut.

Charles B. Morse of Franklin place has recovered from an attack of the grip.

Miss Edith Darby of Alton is visiting Miss Maibelle Force of We t Fourth street.

Miss Lee of Central avenue leaves tonight for a visit among relatives in Corona L. I.

Miss Elfeda Whiting of East Sixth street is visiting at the home of her uncle, George Howell, Chester, Pa.

Mrs. Paul Koch, of East Boston, Mass., is visiting his mother, Mrs. Beck, who is ill, at No. 323 East Second street.

Charles Barlow of Prospect place has returned to his studies in the North Plainfield public school after an attack of the grip.

James E. Martine toasted "The Women", and W. K. McClure "The Union County Bar", at the Peanut Club banquet last night.

A number of the Lady Cyclers who went to visit friends in Philadelphia returned Thursday evening, and the rest of the party returned today.

Mrs. Mary L. Force, mother of the proprietor of this paper, today quietly celebrated her 80th birthday anniversary at her home, 82 Duer street. She is in good health.

Mr. Slevin of Franklin place, who is suffering from appendicitis, is doing so well under the treatment of Dr. Endicott that an operation has not been found necessary.

Miss Anna Stryker, sister of Mrs. Geo. W. Saums of 143 East Second street, accompanied by Miss Ella Randall, also of Trenton, will spend Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Saums.

Swindling by Forged Checks.

Thomas Worth, the Somerset street harness maker, has been victimized by a stout, light complexioned man of 35 or 40, who bought a set of harness and some blankets, presenting a check for $28, signed A. C. Blair, in payment, and receiving a small cash balance in excess of the bill.

He was not as successful in his attempt to swindle Mr. Zimmerman the Front street hardware merchant, from whom he ordered a stove, a keg of nails, and two shovels all to be delivered to A. C. Blair, but his offer to pay was refused until the goods were delivered, so he departed without securing his cash rebate.

—A show will be given tomorrow afternoon at 2 at Harry Hook's house, 337 Watchung avenue. Admission, 2 cents.

—A vicious dog ran after a colored woman on West Front street last evening about 8:30 and catching hold of her dress succeeded in tearing it badly. Her screams attracted the attention of many people in the vicinity who frightened the dog away.

—Chief Engineer Doane has been unable to find the automatic whistle he was searching for to take the place of gongs on fire apparatus. His reason for wishing to change is to avoid confusion with the trolley-car gongs.

Hebrew Christening.

The christening of Louis Goldstein, the eight-day-old son of J. Goldstein of Park avenue, was celebrated today by Rabbi Simon Schnur of New York after the usual rites and ceremonies of the Jewish church, in the presence of relatives and friends of the happy father.

Among those present besides the Rabbi was the child's grandmother Mrs. Silverman, A. Goldstein, uncle of the little fellow, the Messrs. Cohen brothers-in-law of Mr. Goldstein, all of New York, Mr. Byrens of Philadelphia and Messrs. Leichtentritt, Samuel Dreier and B. Guttman of Plainfield.

A pleasant time was enjoyed by all, the child's health being drunk and a feast following. The mother is doing well.

DANCING FOR THE MULTITUDE.

Childish Customs that Justify the Chorus of "The Sidewalks of New York."

A song, very popular just now, is called "The Sidewalks of New York." It has one distinguishing merit, and that is an odd one in songs, brevity. The author and singer of "The Sidewalks of New York" is Charles B. Lawlor. The chorus of "The Sidewalks of New York" is, perhaps, next to the taking music, the best thing about it, for it has a natural rhythm which would make a success of a song written to secure an ephemeral, local popularity. Here it is:

East side, west side, all around the town,
The tots sing "Ring-around-a-rosie," "London Bridge is Falling Down."
Boys and girls together, me and Mamie Rorke,
Tripped the light fantastic on the sidewalks of New York.

There is considerable appositeness to this chorus, for nearly every New York girl or boy knows that the first lessons in dancing of the great majority of the present generation of New Yorkers were gained about a street band or hand organ on the sidewalks of the east or west side of town. Girls, as a rule, take much more naturally to such impromptu dancing than boys. They are more graceful, and their ear for music seems much keener. When some years ago it was proposed to do away with street bands in New York, the strongest protest came from among those who were familiar with the enjoyment which this cheap sort of music gave to many children in New York, better familiar with "Ring-around-a-rosie" and "London Bridge is Falling Down" than anything in the compositions of Wagner or Verdi.

A Mutual Service.

He—I am very unfortunate; it seems I can please nobody.

She—Come, cheer up; I have no one to admire me, either.

He—Tell you what—let's found a society for mutual admiration. I, for instance, admire your beautiful eyes; and what do you admire in me?

She—Your good taste.—Dorfbabier.

Of the Same Mind.

Little Brother (in awful whisper)—Say, Pop, I just peeped into the parlor, and sister Mary was sitting on the music stool before the piano, and her young man was kneeling down in front of her and holding her hands.

Father—By Jingo's! I always did say that was a sensible young man, Mother. I guess he don't like to hear her play the piano any more than I do.—Puck.

Out of Sight.

Junior Partner—I see you have engaged a new clerk. Is he a good salesman?

Senior Partner—Good salesman? Great Scott! I had to send for the police to prevent him from talking me into taking him into the firm.

It generally takes a blockhead a good while to find out what ails him.—Ram's Horn.

—Mrs. Caroline Weiss, mother of Mrs. William J. Allen of Grandview avenue, while going to prayer meeting last evening, had her skirt caught by a vicious dog on Somerset street was thrown to the sidewalk, and dislocated her shoulder. Dr. Van B. Hedges attended the sufferer.

NOW ON HAND,

Diphtheria Antitoxine.

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.

So limited has been the supply of GENUINE ANTITOXINE heretofore, that sales have been made only on condition of immediate actual use. But amid so large a population as ours, an urgent demand for the new treatment may arise at any hour, night or day, Sunday or week-day. And delay in obtaining it might result fatally. I have therefore, with some difficulty, and at considerable expense, provided a complete outfit of Antitoxine Serum (with injector) and am prepared to meet such demand. The cost of an outfit (Serum of two powers and Koch injector) is now about $12 being only one-fourth of the earlier price. At present sales will be made only on the order of a practicing physician.

THE LOSS OF THE ELBE

Search for Victims Made in a Blinding Gale.

No Trace of Boat or Wreckage—Sad Scenes at the Offices of the North German Lloyd Company—Statement of the English Pilot—What the Mate of the Crathie Says of the Collision—The Lost Number 303 Persons.

New York, Feb. 1.—It was a sad ordeal at the offices of the North German Lloyd all day yesterday and late last night. Countless inquiries were made by anxious persons regarding the ill-fated steamer Elbe.

Many women called, some for husbands, others for fathers or lovers. One poor woman, tear-stained and pale, called at the office about daybreak. She approached the clerk in charge and, with voice tremulous with emotion, asked for a list of the cabin passengers. It was handed to her. She scanned it first eagerly and hurriedly, then slowly and calmly.

A sigh escaped her as she finished the list without having seen the name of the person whom she feared might be among the unfortunates reported lost. Before she reached the door, however, her strength failed her, and she had to be escorted to a car.

Reports received by cable last night confirm the statements from Bremen that the steamship carried 149 officers and sailors, 50 cabin passengers, and 125 steerage passengers, or 324 persons in all. There are 21 survivors, the loss therefore numbering 303.

London, Feb. 1.—The offices of the North German Lloyd Steamship company sent out the tug Dispatch to cruise around in search of survivors but the heavy sea and blinding snowstorm drove the boat back.

The lifeboat of the life saving station at Ramsgate returned to that place yesterday morning after having been out fifteen hours searching for possible survivors without having found any trace of either boat or wreckage.

The Broadstairs lifeboat also returned. Upon nearing the station the boat was blown ashore by the violent gale and the crew were dashed into the surf. Several of them were injured.

The survivors of the Elbe, who were brought to Lowestoft by the steam trawler Wild Flower, have nearly all recovered from the effects of their shock and exposure.

Miss Anna Buecker, the one woman who is known to have been saved, is the only one who is not able to be about. She is suffering from nervous prostration, and will be obliged to remain in Lowestoft for several days.

The surviving officers of the Elbe are very reticent in regard to the disaster, reserving their statements pending an official inquiry into the circumstances; but it transpires that an officer of the Elbe saw a green light on the port bow belonging to an unknown vessel, which, it is alleged, was trying to cut across the Elbe's bows.

This light evidently belonged to the Crathie.

Greenham, the English pilot, made the following statement:

"When I came on the deck of the Elbe, Capt. Von Goessel was on the bridge, in charge of the ship. The first order given was to swing the boats out, but not to lower them until further orders. Then came an order summoning everybody on deck and sending the crew to their station. This order was followed by another demand for the women and children to go to the starboard boats, the order giving everybody to understand that the women and children were to be saved first.

"These orders were given by the captain himself and were repeated by First Officer Wilhelm.

"The next order given was for the lowering of the boats. There was no confusion whatever among the crew or in the giving of orders, nor was there any panic among the passengers or crew. A high sea was running and there was a strong east-southeast wind blowing."

A great deal of adverse comment is caused by the fact that of the twenty persons saved from the Elbe, fifteen of them belong to the ship's crew, and that the boat in which they saved themselves contained only one woman and no children.

Attempts have been made by some of the survivors to account for this, but in no case in a satisfactory way. Even the solitary woman who was saved was not originally taken into the boat, but was picked up in the water after the boat had pushed away from the sinking ship, greatly against the wishes of some of the occupants of the boat.

The mate of the Crathie made a statement to the captain, who was below at the time of the collision, that he has no knowledge whatever as to the identity of the vessel with which the Crathie collided. His own vessel was so terribly damaged that its condition called for his undivided attention.

There was, the mate adds, a dense fog at the time of the accident, and the vessel with which the Crathie had collided was lost to view in the mist almost immediately after the crash.

Mr. Carl Hofman, of Grand Island, Neb., who is among the saved, refutes this statement by making the assertion that if the vessel which came into collision with the Elbe had stood by the sinking ship a majority of the passengers might have been saved, as the Elbe remained motionless until the water which was pouring into her hold caused her to lurch violently, after which all was confusion on board.

Prior to this, however, discipline was maintained and there could have been no difficulty in transferring the passengers in an orderly manner.

According to the statement of the Crathie's officers their vessel remained in the vicinity of the wreck for two hours and then returned to Rotterdam, as it was feared that she could not keep afloat.

It is understood that the loss of the Elbe's cargo will fall upon various insurance companies and the loss of the vessel upon the owners.

THEY LUP ... NORTON.

Strikers H... Magnate Arraigned in the Police Court.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Outside of the failure of the general public to patronize the trolley cars in this city, a stranger would never know that only a few days ago the city was over-run with soldiers, and that 7,000 men were on strike. The cars go along as usual, the main efforts of the strikers being to force conclusions with the companies through the aid of the law.

Several cases of violence were reported yesterday on the outskirts of the city, but only one case of wire cutting. The usual accidents caused by green motormen in collisions were reported.

The main feature of the day was the arraignment of President Norton, of the Atlantic avenue trolley system, in the Adams street police court charged by the strikers with having violated the ten-hour law.

He and his superintendent, Daniel J. Quinn, were notified to appear in court at 10 o'clock. They were on hand, and after pleading not guilty, were paroled by Police Justice Walsh in the custody of their counsel, ex-Judge Samuel Morris. The examination was set down for to-day.

The complainants in the case against President Norton and Superintendent Quinn are James Dwyer and Jeremiah Desmond, conductors, and George Layton, motorman, who were formerly employed on the Atlantic avenue road. The offense with which the president and superintendent are charged is a misdemeanor, and if they are found guilty they may be fined $500 and be imprisoned for one year.

This is a test case and, if successful, a thousand similar charges will be made.

THE KEEGAN TRIAL.

The State Finishes Its Testimony in the Murder Case.

Providence, R. I., Feb. 1.—Contrary to general expectation, the state finished its testimony in the Keegan murder case and rested. The attorney general was hampered by his inability to introduce evidence which would go to show a motive for the murder by Keegan.

In the argument of Lawyer McGill, the line of action adopted by the defense was first shown. An attempt will be made to prove an alibi and Keegan's counsel expect to show that the defendant was seen on Westminster street at 3:30, and at 5:10 o'clock, the time that the state witnesses say he was in Scituate. They also expect to prove that the team was seen on the Scituate road between 5 and 6 o'clock, with Mrs. Chambers in it alone, and that two shots were heard at 10 o'clock that night in a large lot a short distance beyond the place where the body was found, and that a small horse attached to a buggy was seen to turn out from that lot soon after that time.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S TROUBLES.

Reported That the Annexationists Will Reconstruct the Cabinet.

St. Johns, N. F., Feb. 1.—It is reported that a reconstruction of the Whiteway cabinet will take place today and that Whiteway, Bond and Morris will replce Greene, Horwood and Scott. It is stated that Harvey will retire from the cabinet because of the confederate tendencies of the government.

It is the general opinion here that the reconstruction of the cabinet will bring about another crisis as members holding their seats temporarily decline to relinquish them while the annexation movement, initiated by the Whitewayites in influential quarters, is being agitated because it is believed that the agitaton will have a damaging effect in England and injure Newfoundland's chances of placing a loan there.

The legislature will reconvene today when the new appointments will likely be announced.

REVOLUTIONISTS KILLED.

Hot Fights with Troops in the Streets of Bogota.

Panama, Feb. 1.—The river boats Colombia, Enrique and Montoya, which have been equipped and armed, are now at Puerto Barrio. A dispatch from Bogota says that all the revolutionary leaders have been imprisoned. An army is hurrying to Girardot and Honda.

President Caro commanded two artillery battalions which had encounters with revolutionists in the streets of Bogota and after a hot fight dispersed them. Many revolutionists were killed.

Dead in a Refrigerator Car.

Olathie, Kas., Feb. 1.—The bodies of two men were found in a refrigerator car on the Kansas City, Fort Scot & Gulf road yesterday. They were plainly dressed, and are thought to be brothers. Death was caused by suffocation. Nothing was found upon their bodies by which their identity could be established.

Right Fielder Tiernan Signed.

New York, Feb. 1.—M. J. Tiernan, the right fielder of the Giants has signed a contract to play with the New York club during the coming season. Burke, Murphy and Westervelt are in the city, and may sign in a day or two. There are now five men under contract.

Miners' Wages Cut.

Pottsville, Pa., Feb. 1.—The wages of the mine workers of the Schuylkill district of the anthracite coal region for the last half of January and the first half of February has been fixed at 11 per cent. below the $2.50 basis. This is one per cent. lower than the previous month.

Judgment for $99,000.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 1.—Judgment for $99,000 and costs on bond and warrant of attorney has been recorded in the Essex county circuit court in favor of the Mercantile National bank of New York against Edwin C. Quigley, the forger.

Philadelphia, Feb. 1.—Application has been made in the United States district court for the appointment of a receiver for the Delaware River & Lancaster Railroad company.

Norwegian Cabinet Resigns.

Christiana, Feb. 1.—Emil Stang, the conservative leader, and his cabinet have resigned their offices.

WHAT GORMAN THINKS

That the Senate Will Not Fail To Meet a Crisis.

His Speech Listened to with the Greatest Attention—Senator Allen's Resolution Went Over Until To-Day Without Action—Speaker Crisp's Reappearance.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Everything of interest that took place in the senate yesterday circled around the financial situation. During the morning hour there was a discussion over a resolution offered some days ago by Mr. Allen (pop., Neb.), as to the reasons why the United States notes were not paid in silver coin, as the secretary of the treasury has the discretionary power under the law to pay them. The resolution went over till to-day without action.

Then the District of Columbia appropriation bill was brought up by Mr. Gorman (dem., Md.) with the purpose, as he afterwards avowed, of shutting out the financial topic; but the purpose failed, because the bill led to a discussion late in the afternoon in which very important statements were made by Mr. Allison (rep., Ia.), and Mr. Gorman, who in the course of his remarks said:

"I believe that this senate, which has met every crisis in the history of the government, this senate which does not take account of the storms brewing outside, this senate which has never yet bowed to a demagogue, this senate which will maintain the credit of the government no matter what it costs, will, before this congress adjourns—if it does not come from elsewhere, as it ought to do—place upon an appropriation bill provision enough to pay every honest obligation of the government that has been contracted and to keep the administration (no matter which party it may be) in a position so that the honor of the government and the credit of the government shall be maintained; and we will continue to stand before the world the foremost nation in the matter of observing obligations."

Mr. Gorman delivered these rapid sentences with great force and earnestness, and his words were listened to with the greatest attention and interest.

Continuing, he said: "I care nothing about these little details. I call it details, though I ought not to use that word. But, in the present emergency, it is a matter of detail whether the money be silver or gold or greenbacks, or national bank notes, so long as the money is as good as any money in the world. It must be supplied to this government; and I appeal to members on the other side of the chamber to come forward in this crisis, for which they are as much responsible as we are. The responsibility is joint. It cannot be escaped by either side. It must be met by you (meaning the republicans) with us; and, before that clock, (pointing to the clock over the main door) points to 12 on the night of the 3d of March next, I believe—I think I know, I shall be the most deceived man in the world if it be not so—this great body will rise up in a way sufficient to meet the case and to save this country from impending disaster because of a want of money in the treasury."

In the House of Representatives.

The session of the house was signalized by the reappearance of Speaker Crisp in the presiding officer's chair, and by the service of Representative Everett (dem., Mass.) in the chaplain's stead. Mr. Crisp was greeted by applause from the score of members present when he called the house to order. Before proceeding with the discussion of the Pacific railroad refunding bill, a house bill was passed establishing a code of regulations governing the navigation of the great lakes and connecting waters; also senate bill fixing the times of holding courts in North Dakota, and providing that the court officials shall receive the same fees as are paid for like services to the court officials in the district of Oregon.

The passage of the refunding bill was opposed by Mr. Harris (pop., Kan.), Mr. Boatner (dem., La.), Mr. Snodgrass (dem., Tenn.), and Mr. Cooper (rep., Wis.), and advocated by Mr. Powers (rep., Vt.) and Mr. Lockwood (dem., N. Y.) The first hour of the session this morning will be devoted to general debate on the refunding bill.

There's nothing So Good as Cottolene

The new vegetable shortening. Wherever introduced, it drives lard from the kitchen, and indigestion from the household. It has been tried by every test, and has met every requirement. It is as much superior to lard as the electric light is to the tallow-dip. The only question now is, will you give your family the benefits which its use bestows?

There's nothing Like Cottolene

in composition, in healthfulness, in flavor, or in economy. Its success has called out a lot of imitations and counterfeits made for the sole purpose of selling in the place and on the merits of Cottolene. Avoid them all. They are made to sell and they are a sell. Get the genuine COTTOLENE.

Sold in 3 and 5 pound pails.

Made only by N.K. FAIRBANK & CO., CHICAGO, and PRODUCE EXCHANGE, NEW YORK.

The New Year's Arrival.

The old is gone, the new is here. It is a fitting symbol of our methods in merchandising. We believe in having the new, the best—never let the stock lag. It is this energy and this constant turning over of goods that enables us not only to offer the best, but the lowest prices as well.

WEI-HAI-WEI IS TAKEN

China's Naval Station Falls Into Japanese Hands.

The Chinese Bolted and Would Not Face the Dreaded Troops of the Enemy—All Her Warships Sailed Away Uninjured—Preparing for the Peace Envoys.

Che-Foo, Feb. 1.—The Japanese captured Wei-Hai-Wei Wednesday after two day's skirmishing.

The Chinese bolted when the actual assault was made. It is estimated that their loss was 2,000 men. Liu-Kung-Tau, an island near the city, on which are workshops and some forts, is still in the hands of the Chinese.

All the Europeans in the city escaped unhurt. It is reported that during the fighting all the Chinese men-of-war and ships in the harbor sailed away uninjured.

Wei-Hai-Wei, China's principal naval depot, is situated in the province of Shantung, about fifty miles east of the treaty port of Che-Foo and thirty miles west of the Shantung promontory. Wei-Hai-Wei was up to the beginning of the war the principal recruiting and training station for the men of the northern fleet.

The Chinese forces there were carefully trained under rules laid down when Captain Lang was the chief instructor of the Chinese navy; they were reported to be not only thoroughly efficient in handling their guns and torpedoes, but excellent marksmen.

The arsenal of Wei-Hai-Wei is one of the most complete in China, and the batteries commanding the bay, which have been constructed under the supervision of European engineers, are heavily armed with Armstrong and Krupp guns. The straits of Pechili, which are about fifty-five miles across in the narrowest part, separate the peninsula of Liau-tong from the northern coast of Shantung, and form the entrance to the gulfs of Pechili and Liau-ton. Pekin, Tien-Tsin and Taku are situated on the east coast of the former.

Washington, Feb. 1.—A dispatch received at the Japanese legation from the minister of foreign affairs, says that preparations are being made to receive the peace envoys, who are expected to arrive at Hiroshima to-day. They will be received with all honors decreed in such case by international law. Minister Kurino, in speaking of the dispatch, expressed the fear that the peace negotiations might fail.

WARD M'ALLISTER DEAD.

The Social Leader of New York Succumbs to the Grip.

New York, Feb. 1.—Ward McAllister died at his home, No. 16 West Thirty-sixth street last night. He had been in failing health for some time and during the past few days had suffered greatly from the grip.

At his bedside at the time were Mrs. McAllister, Heyward McAllister, his son, his daughter and his brother.

The news of his death was received in social circles with surprise, as it was not expected. It was the topic most discussed at Delmonico's and at the Charity ball.

Mr. McAllister was born in Savannah, Ga., about fifty-five years ago, and came to this city, where he married wealthy and soon assumed a leading place in society. He has visited Europe several times, and was well known to the Prince of Wales and other members of the royal family.

DEATH OF JUDGE HOAR.

Passed Peacefully Away After Seven Weeks' Sickness.

Concord, Mass., Feb. 1.—Judge E. Rockwood Hoar died peacefully and painlessly last evening, aged 78 years 11 months and 10 days, of heart failure, after about seven weeks sickness. His death has been expected for some time but his wondrfully strong constitution has prolonged life. He had been unconscious most of the time since Wednesday noon. At his death bed were his sons Samuel and Sherman, and his two married daughters Caroline and Clara D. His son Charles E., whose home is in California, and daughter Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Bowles, of Springfield, were not present.

The bell of the First Parish church was tolled, announcing his death to the people of the village. The arrangements for the funeral will be announced sometime to-day.

Reception to Congress.

Washington, Feb. 1.—A reception to congress and the judiciary was given by the president and Mrs. Cleveland at the executive mansion last night. The night was cold and clear and the attendance large. Mrs. Cleveland was assisted by the ladies of the cabinet, a bevy of young ladies standing behind the receiving line. The mansion was elaborately decorated with flowers, ferns and palms and brilliantly lighted.

Treasury Receipts for January.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The treasury receipts for the month of January aggregated $28,000,000; being an increase over the receipts for December. The expenditures in January amounted to $34,500,000 in round numbers, showing an excess of expenditures over receipts of about $6,500,000.

Their Pay Increased.

Easton, Pa., Feb. 1.—The pay of passenger engineers and firemen on the Lehigh Valley railroad between this city and Wilkesbarre, has been increased. The former will now receive $6.50 instead of $6 and the latter $4.20 instead of $4 per trip.

Philadelphia, Feb. 1.—Charles G. McCloskey, who shot and killed Policeman John Chambers in September last, has been sentenced to eight years imprisonment.

MURDER OF FATHER ROSA.

Details of the Assassination of the Priest in Bolivia.

San Francisco, Feb. 1.—Details of the assassination of Father Antonio Rosa, priest at the Antofogasta Mining company's settlement in Bolivia, near the Chilian frontier, have been received in this city. Father Rosa was a native of San Francisco and went to Bolivia about five years ago.

The settlement was celebrating the feast of the village saint and Father Rosa led in the festivities. Among those present were a body of Chilians of the worst class armed with knives and firearms. Father Rosa returned to his house in the early part of the day and gave himself up to study.

As evening drew near the celebrators retired to a point several miles from the house, where a feast was spread. The Chilians then surrounded the priest's house and attacked him in his room. They tried to force him to confess that he had money hidden on the premises. On his protesting, he was cut down from behind. He fell on his face on a table and was hacked in a brutal manner.

After rifling the place and the little church close by, the murderers fled in haste toward the Chilian frontier. When the feasters returned and discovered that their devoted priest had been killed, every man seized some kind of weapon and started on the trail of the fugitives.

Twenty Bolivian Indians and several miners took the lead and succeeded in running the murderers down at Ollequa, at which place a mob formed and the prisoners would have been massacred had not a body of Chilian troops charged the crowd and rescued the men.

There were twelve of the murderers in all. They were hurried to prison and remained there until Chili turned them over to Bolivia.

PULLMAN MEMORIAL CHURCH.

The Magnificent Gift to the Universalist Denomination Dedicated.

Albion, N. Y., Feb. 1.—The Pullman Memorial church, the most magnificent gift to the Universalist denomination by any one person in the United States, was dedicated yesterday. The gift is by George W. Pullman, of Chicago, in memory of his parents, who resided here.

The church is of the old English gothic architecture and cost $30,000. The memorial window facing the street upon which is the original conception of a life size figure of Christ, by Wilson, cost $5,000. The beautiful organ cost $6,000. The estimated seating capacity of the church is 700. Besides there is a Sunday school room, library, piano, and dining room dishes.

The deed was delivered by Mr. George W. Pullman to the Universalist society, who already have a sinking fund of $5,000. The dedicatory sermon was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Royal H. Pullman, of Baltimore, and prayer was said by the Rev. Dr. Mason, of Buffalo. A choir from Rochester furnished the music. On the east and west sides of the main entrance are oval bronze medallions of Mr. Pullman's father and mother. The Rev. Dr. Charles Fluhrer, formerly of Grand Rapids, Mich., was installed pastor of the new church.

OLD RECORDS RETURNED.

Valuable Books, Which Disappeared Years Ago, Sent Back.

Kingston, N. Y., Feb. 1.—About twenty-five years ago twenty-seven books, being the old Dutch records of Ulster county mysteriously disappeared from the vaults of the county clerk's office and notwithstanding inquiry was made for them all over the county and state nothing could be learned regarding them. Yesterday there came by express from New York a box, which on being opened by County Clerk Sleight, was found to contain the missing records.

The books commence in 1666 and run until 1685. They are mostly written in Dutch, and consist of records of deeds, mortgages, supervisors proceedings, court proclamations, judgments and in fact a complete record between those dates, a period of some eighteen years.

County Clerk Sleight intends to have them bound, and will preserve them with great care. Who had the valuable records is not known as no letter giving name of sender has been received.

A Mother's Fatal Devotion.

Philadelphia, Feb. 1.—Fire at the house of Mrs. Christiana Zindlinger, caused the death of herself and one-year-old twin daughters. The mother left the house, but was horrified to find that her twin children had not been taken out. She rushed back, and was found with her children dead a few minutes later.

Eliot's Statement Exaggerated.

Boston, Feb. 1.—The Harvard Crimson says, in reference to President Eliot's manner of comparison of the football games to bull fights, and the suggestions of the ever present liability of death, is distasteful. "There may be some foundation for such statements," it adds, "but they exaggerate the truth of the matter."

Deserted His Young Bride.

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Eugene Duffy, of Honeoye Falls, has disappeared, deserting his young bride, whom he was forced to marry Dec. 15 last on account of seduction. The girl was a domestic and had saved up quite a sum which her faithless husband took with him.

Gold Withdrawals.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Gold withdrawals yesterday reduced the treasury gold reserve at the close of business to $42,361,966. The withdrawals were: At New York, $2,277,000; at Chicago, $100,000. Of the withdrawals at New York $1,930,000 were for export.

ROBBERS GET $10,000

A Southern Pacific Train Held-Up by Five Men.

Engineer Commanded To Stop at the Point of a Revolver Near Wilcox, Ariz.—Safe in the Express Car Blown Open with Dynamite—The Desperadoes Escape.

San Francisco, Feb. 1.—The Southern Pacific and Wells Fargo Express companies have offered a joint reward of $500 for each of the men implicated in the hold-up of the west-bound overland train near Wilcox, Ariz, Wednesday night, details of which have just been received at this place.

Special Agent Breckinridge of the Southern Pacific has gone to the scene with two Indian trailers, his purpose being to take the back trail and find out where the robbers came from.

From dispatches received it appears that five men were engaged in the robbery, four having been present at the place where the express car was looted, while the fifth is known to have been in the company of those four when they were seen in and about Wilcox previous to the robbery. He was probably not far away when the event occurred.

The actual work of the robbery was done by two men, who boarded the cars at Wilcox, and, when two miles west of the town, suddenly appeared in the cab of the engine with pistols and compelled the engineer to stop the train.

While one of the robbers kept him covered the other made the fireman and brakeman cut the express and mail cars loose from the rest of the train.

The engineer was then made to pull the two detached cars for about two miles to a culvert, where two more of the gang were found holding horses for the entire party.

It was here that the safe was blown open, the men with the horses having brought explosives.

Six explosions were effected by the robbers before they felt satisfied with their work. As a result, the top and sides of the express car were thoroughly shattered, and the express company's safe blown to pieces.

A great deal of money was scattered about and the express agent from Wilcox who visited the scene picked up about 700 Mexican dollars, which the robbers had not been able to collect.

Besides $10,000 in Mexican money there was considerable coin on the train which had been sent to pay railroad employes along the line.

After the robbery the men rode in a southerly direction. Of the two who boarded the train, one is described as being 5 feet 9 inches in height and of dark complexion, the index finger of the right hand being missing. The other was of light complexion and about 5 feet 7 inches in height.

It is reported that Grant Wheeler, known to be a desperate character, was seen in Wilcox yesterday previous to the robbery, and that with him was a stranger, who purchased eleven pounds of giant powder, fifty feet of fuse and twenty giant powder caps. He told the storekeeper that he was mining at De Cabassas, and that he could not take any more, as he had come on horseback.

Grant Wheeler and the stranger are supposed to be the two men who took the horses to the scene chosen for the robbery.

Another man was also seen in the company of Wheeler.

Sheriff Fly and four men have left Wilcox for the scene of the robbery and shortly afterward Deputy Sheriff Howard set out with two men. Scott White also took a posse out from Tombstone with the hope of heading off the robbers.

STRUCK BY AN ENGINE.

Horrible Accident to Lumber Merchant Grout and His Son.

Jersey City, Feb. 1.—George N. Grout and William A. Grout, his 21-year-old son, wealthy lumber dealers of this city and residing at Summit, left their office for their home at 6 o'clock last evening but in crossing the New York, Susquehanna & Western railroad tracks at Westside avenue were struck by a drill engine.

One of Mr. Grout's arms was cut off and the son had both legs severed from his body. They were removed to Christ's hospital where very little hope was entertained for the recovery of either.

Twenty Cars Wrecked.

Emporium, Pa., Feb. 1.—An eastbound freight train on the Philadelphia & Erie road jumped the rail near Kane Hill, east of this place yesterday. Twenty cars of merchandise were badly wrecked. Brakemen Grace and Smith were fatally injured. It required several hours to clear the tracks.

The Holmes College Burned.

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 1.—The Holmes college, erected two years ago by Miss Mary E. Holmes, of Rockford, Ill., for the education of colored girls, was destroyed by fire last evening. The wearing apparel and personal effects of the teachers and 120 pupils were nearly all lost.

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. CHAPTER V.

THE MYSTERY OF NED AMES' BODY.

The Maxwell home on High street was a hundred and forty years old. Little of the original structure remained except the great oak framework, which might stand some generations longer.

It was untenanted. The young physician—the last of his race—had abandoned it about a year before. He had built a modern house and furnished it luxuriously in anticipation of his marriage with Anna.

Dr. Maxwell was a man of considerable means for that part of the country. He was not in the least dependent upon his practice, otherwise he would have gone to a more favorable location for money making. But situated as he was, he much preferred to remain in Williston. He loved the town for its great beauty, and for the quiet which favored his studies.

The old Maxwell place was on High street, about a hundred yards from its junction with a thoroughfare called Broadway, as the Williston people said, because it was the narrowest street in town. The Ames house was on Broadway, which, in its lower part, was the business street of the place. There were three residences on its upper portion, and Samuel Ames' was the last of them in the direction of High street. Clustered about the junction of Broadway and High street were many great trees, some of which extended their branches almost across one or other of the two thoroughfares.

It was more than half a mile from Mr. Warren's residence to the abandoned house in which Frank Ames had found his brother's body. There was courage enough displayed in Anna Warren's visit by night upon that dreadful errand to furnish forth a dozen martyrs.

They avoided the observation of chance passers upon the street. It had been agreed between them that they should make all haste; and, after Anna had been convinced of the truth of her companion's story, they should go to his father's house. There was little chance that the discrepancy in time would ever be discovered. It was much safer than a return to the Warren house would have been.

"When I think of this discovery," said Ames, as they trod the silent street, "I am amazed that it had not been already made. What more convenient hiding-place was possible? No one visits the old house. Had the grave closed over your sister's body there would have been no suspicion, and my brother's corpse could have lain there until its removal was convenient or until time served for its burial in the old cellar.

"If this detective had not been convinced that my brother's death was only a pretense, he would have solved the mystery at once. My belief in its reality made the solution easy. I went to the house this evening. I secured entrance by means of an upper window—"

"All the doors were locked," murmured Anna, shuddering.

"Yes, and you know who had the keys. Oh, Anna, believe me I do not speak heartlessly, nor am I moved by jealousy. The facts are to blame, not I. Some day when you are able to see my conduct in a clear light I believe that you will know it to be good, that you may even learn to love me as one who—"

"Hush! I cannot listen. Tell me how you found him."

"I knew where to look. I put myself in the murderer's place. Where would he hide it? I thought at once of the cellar. There is a great, old-fashioned furnace there in which a human body could be burned. Why he did not do it that night I could not at first understand. Now I know that he must have been forced to attend to his horses—remember he had ostensibly gone driving—and that having done so he dared not return to the house that night.

"My conclusions were correct. My poor brother's body lay on the cellar floor. There was scarcely a pretense of concealing it. Anna, can you bear the sight?"

"I can and will. There is but one difficulty. How can I get into the house?"

"I have unfastened one of the windows on the lower floor. All the doors are locked or nailed up. You must enter that way."

She did not hesitate. When they had reached the house, she made him enter by the window first, and then he drew her in after him. The lantern which he had used on his first search was hidden in the room they entered. He lighted it, and carefully shielding the flame so that it would attract no attention if anyone chanced to be passing, he led the way to the cellar. It was divided into two parts by a partition of brick with a light wooden door. Frank laid his hand upon the latch.

"Summon up your courage," he said. "But why should I say that? You tremble less than I do. No words can express how I admire you for what you are doing this night. Courage is the sum of all the virtues. Yet I must warn you. When I open this door, his body will lie before you."

"Open it," she whispered, awestruck.

He obeyed. The lantern's light flashed into the darkness.

There was a moment's pause. Then, with a hoarse cry, Frank sprang forward.

"It is gone!" he shouted, utterly oblivious of caution. "The body is not here."

"It never was here," breathed the girl. "Why have you brought me?"

"I swear to you that I saw it lying there this night. Bend down!"

He held the lantern to the floor of cement.

"There! In the dust do you not see the outline of his form?"

She saw it. Dust and ashes lay thick upon the floor, and it was possible to trace something like the imprint of a human body.

"In heaven's name, who can have done this?" cried the girl. "Frank Ames, if you have a heart in your breast, answer me: are you speaking the truth?"

If ever a man swore an oath to which credence could not be denied, Frank Ames did it then. It would have been madness to doubt his word. The truth flashed out of him, and there was no gainsaying it.

Hurried search convinced them that the body was not in the old house. Having failed, they went out as they had entered. They reached the street by the little side gate which they had used when they came in.

"I will return and obliterate our foot-prints," said Frank. "Hold! How blind I have been!"

He led the way toward the main gate which admitted to the walk leading to the front door. Two men's foot-prints were visible. They had entered and left the house in that way.

"We are too late!" gasped the girl. "Robert is lost."

"I have convinced you, then."

"No, no!"

"But I have. I know it. Yet the service I would have rendered you is now impossible. I cannot claim the reward."

"Not yet, but work! I shall need a friend. He will need a friend. I do not believe him guilty, but it would be folly to deny that he is in peril. Save him, and I will never forget what you have done."

"That is worth working for," he said. "But it is not all. A man demands more. If I save him, though you yourself believe him guilty, or if he never returns, thus confessing his guilt, what shall be my reward?"

"Urge me no further. I am utterly incapable of thought. Come with me to your father's house. We must be seen there. Then you must take me home."

Seeing that she was indeed yielding to the horrors of that night, he silently obeyed her, fearful that his resistance might actually distract her.

They found the Rev. Mr. Warren at Ned Ames' house, and with splendid self command the girl told him the story that had been agreed upon. She had come to take him home.

Frank insisted upon sharing the walk, and the girl dared not refuse. She wished, indeed, to keep him near her that he might act at her command in any emergency.

A bright fire blazed in the clergyman's cozy parlor, and in its light and warmth stood Robert Maxwell, waiting.

"IT IS GONE!" HE SHOUTED.

Rev. Mr. Warren was surprised to see his visitor, and the feelings of the other two who saw him call for a word that has not yet been put into the language.

Maxwell explained his sudden return by saying that he had found his investigations in Boston so simple as to require only a few hours' search. He had reached that city at six o'clock in the morning and had left on the noon express. In that short time he had convinced himself that Ned Ames had not died; that the pretended death was a ruse to throw the officers of the law off his track, and to facilitate the murder of Charlotte, which, for some reason hitherto undiscovered, had become necessary.

This information greatly interested Mr. Warren, and he would have discussed its bearings at great length with Maxwell, but Anna interposed. She would not permit her father to excite himself further. With gentle persuasion she made him consent to go to rest. But Maxwell and Ames did not leave the house. The situation would be regarded as unusual in any other part of the country; but in Maine the chaperone is an article imported only in small quantities and very little in demand.

When her father had gone, Anna told Maxwell exactly what she had done that evening. She omitted nothing except Frank Ames' declaration of love for her. Maxwell guessed that, and his wrath knew no bounds. Nothing but the presence of the woman they both loved prevented a personal encounter. Maxwell accused Ames of conspiring against him. He scoffed at the idea that the body of Ned Ames had ever been in the old Maxwell house.

"The idea is monstrous," he exclaimed. "I tell you that Ned Ames is not dead."

Before Frank could frame a reply, a new voice broke into the discussion.

"I beg to disagree with you," it said. "Eddie Ames is dead, and I have seen his body."

All turned toward the door into the hall, and there stood Mulligan, bowing apologetically.

"I knocked several times," he said, "but you were so interested that you did not hear me. Can I come in? Thank you, Miss Warren. And what have you to say in reply to me, Dr. Maxwell?"

Frank Ames did not wait for Maxwell's reply. He turned upon Mulligan.

"So it was you who removed the body?" he exclaimed.

"No, it wasn't. I found it, but somebody relieved me of the trouble of removing it. It was there at nine o'clock this evening. It isn't there now. Where is it, I'd like to know? And by the way, Dr. Maxwell, what time did you drive by the house on your way back from the Junction?"

"A little before ten."

"Returned from Boston rather sooner than you suspected, didn't you?"

Maxwell suppressed an oath.

"You know why," he said, angrily. "I was dogged by one of your men. If you want me watched, do it yourself. Here I am."

"Quite so; and I'm pleased to see you. Now, let me briefly state the facts. I didn't believed that Eddie Ames was dead. I believe Horace Riddle's story. But all the same it was my duty to search this town for Ames' body—which might have been in that coffin, you know—and I did search. I found it this evening in the cellar of your old house, doctor.

"From the appearance of the body I have no doubt that he died of diphtheria, as the record said. Now, how did the body get into that cellar? Thank heaven for the hardened snow under the soft feathery stuff that fell in the latter part of Thursday night. I did a little scraping outside the house and found some footprints. They were unquestionably those of the man who brought the body. He wore rubbers, and that's unfortunate. It's in the nature of a disguise. Still by measurements I was able to learn something.

"Will you oblige me with your foot, Mr. Ames? Thank you. Ah, it's much too long. What a long, narrow, aristocratic foot you have, to be sure! Those rubbers never went over your feet. Of course, I knew that before. I'm only showing you my method. Now, Dr. Maxwell. So; a very different foot, indeed. Those rubbers would have fitted you nicely."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

TROLLEY STILL DEFERRED.

FANWOOD TOWNSHIP CONTINUES ITS DISCUSSION.

Action Deferred Because No Route Is Ready—Another Meeting to Be Held Next Week.

Chairman Terry called to order the meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee last night and the special committee on the trolley matter were asked for their report.

T. J. Nichols, chairman of the committee, said the committee could not present a favorable report. They had worked hard to get signers, and had succeeded in getting a number of signatures, but not a majority. He was very sorry such was the case, but the committee had worked for the Forest avenue route, being led to believe they could succeed. If the Town Committee saw fit to defer the granting of the franchise tonight, the special committee would endeavor to secure signatures for that route, as they already had some signers.

Mr. Gaddis said he would like to present to the Committee an application for a franchise for an electric road beginning at a point at the corner of Mountain and Park avenue, running to Midway, to Forest, to the station. He hoped the Committee would grant the application and order it advertised, so the company could go on.

The company had been pledged by bankers $10,000,000 to go on with the work as soon as franchises enough were obtained to guarantee them that the line could be finished. The contract had already been given out, and the work started for a short line between New Brunswick and Raritan. He only referred to this to show the people of Fanwood Township that the company was acting in good faith.

Mr. Miller moved that the application be received and ordered advertised in The Plainfield Daily Press for fourteen days, according to law. The motion was carried.

Mr. Gaddis asked the Committee to grant the application for the franchise for the main line through Midway avenue, so the company would not be delayed any longer in starting the work. The company was not to blame, because the signatures for the loop had not been obtained, and it was unjust for the Committee to withhold that which they were certain to grant at some future date. It was only standing the company off when they were acting in good faith and had done all that they could when they made the application for the short line.

After a heated discussion, Mr. Gaddis promised to give bond to the Committee to build the short line to the station if the signers could be obtained.

Mr. Miller moved that the franchise be granted to the Philadelphia and New York Traction Company, at an adjourned meeting to be held Wednesday, February 6, the company to put up a $10,000 bond satisfactory to the committee. The motion was carried.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Miller that in view of the fact that a mad dog had been running at will through the town that all dogs in the township be chained for 30 days and all dogs known to be bit be killed at once. This was carried. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, the bills were read and ordered paid, the treasurer's report was read and accepted, and the committee adjourned to meet Feb. 6.

—Men who buy their shoes in New York, and those who do not, would do well to peruse Doane & Edsall's ad.

The experience of Geo. A. Apgar, of German Valley, N. J., is well worth remembering. He was troubled with chronic diarrhoea and doctored for five months and was treated by four different doctors without benefit. He then began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, of which one small bottle effected a complete cure. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

Mr. Travell was absent yesterday with a return of the grip, with which he has been suffering for several days. His position as teacher of the Cæsar Class was filled by Ralph Campbell '93, now a student at the New York University, who was visiting his friends in the High School yesterday.

The regular meeting of the Kappa Delta Phi took place yesterday afternoon. The programme was "An Afternoon with the Heroes of the Revolution". The speakers were: J. V. Beekman, Jr., Israel Putnam; A. B. Crane, James Otis; C. B. Morse, Benjamin Franklin; L. H. Rand, Francis Marion; Henry Eggerding, John Paul Jones; J. H. Craig, Thomas Jefferson; E. H. Rapalye, Samuel Adams; E. I. Serrell, Count Pulaski; G. A. Horne, George Washington, Charles Noble, Patrick Henry; H. B. Drake, Anthony Wayne; F. W. Cornwell, Marquis de La-Fayette; J. C. Whiting, The Heroes of the Land of Penn. Several amendments to the constitution were adopted. The programme committee reported the following debate for next Friday: "Should foreign immigration to this country be restricted?" Affirmative, Henry Eggerding, Charles Noble; negative, Carl C. Gallup, Edgar I. Serrell.

"Ladies First."

An apt illustration of the ofttimes ludicrous way in which little people profit by their training was given not very long ago by one of Plainfield's young citizens in embryo. This young man has a sister nearly his own age, and one of the cardinal points of his daily education was that he should always give way to her for "ladies should always be first". That the youth has learned the lesson well was made apparent one afternoon when the disobedience of both youngsters to a request of the parent could no longer be overlooked and they were called up for punishment. Stepping from in front of his sister with a bow which would have done credit to Chesterfield himself, the little fellow gravely said "Ladies first, Mamma!"

Stopped Their Little Game.

(From The Dunellen Call.)

Some of our commuters have been in the habit of getting on the 4:30 express from New York and remaining in the rear car, which is left off at Plainfield and brought here by the shifting engine, thus saving about fifteen minutes and the many stops of the local. Last Saturday two of our townsmen were a little taken back when they arrived at Plainfield, by being informed that they would have to get off and wait for the local, as an order went into effect last Thursday which stops this time-saving scheme.

Thatcher & Johnson's Minstrels.

The whole town is going to see the Thatcher & Johnson Minstrels in Music Hall Monday night. One of the many features of the performance will be the great pony circus, introducing ten of the most beautiful specimens of horseflesh in the world. The company's magnificent orchestra, composed of picked musicians; the inimitable monologues of Messrs. Thatcher and Johnson; entertaining specialties by members of the company; the glittering ensemble of the entire company comprising nearly fifty performers; will, in elegance, novelty, and excellence, surpass all of Thatcher's previous efforts.

Our Authority Was the Fire Department Records.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: In your issue of yesterday, in describing the fire of the previous night, you do me an injustice in ascribing the origin of the fire to a barrel of gasoline near the boiler. This is entirely wrong, as I have not, nor ever had, any gasoline in my establishment, either for general use or any other purposes. I trust that you will make this correction. G. O. Keller.

Plainfield, Feb. 2, 1895.

Midwinter Social.

The women of Union Village and vicinity will hold a midwinter social at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Smith, near Rogers Bros' home, Wednesday evening, Feb. 6. Music, both vocal and instrumental, and a pleasant time for all, are promised. Should it storm, it will take place the first fair evening.

—The Plainfield Tea and Grocery Company will open under the management of H. T. Williams, Saturday, Feb. 9, at 106 East Front street, offering bargains in household supplies for cash buyers.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Diamondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: 'I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c.

END OF THE DEBATE.

AMERICAN WRITES HIS FINAL LETTER ON THE POPE.

Delves Into Volumes of Church Lore to Substantiate His Position on the Romanist Question.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—As I was first attacked, please permit me the privilege of closing the controversy. P. J. Finn in his final letter, writes, 'American rises to the height of supreme absurdity when he quotes Pope St. Agatho as addressing an encyclical to the clergy of the U. S." Mr. Finn deliberately lies. American wrote, "Pope St. Agatho, and Gregory XVI in his encyclical letter to the bishops and clergy of the U. S., etc." And I put the date of Gregory's encyclical, affirming Agatho's position, that, "What Rome once taught she always teaches", in brackets, thus (1832). But, dishonest correspondent that he is, Finn skipped the date in order to get his falsehood in. The gentleman is a living exemplification of the Romish doctrine, "A lie is not sin if it helps the church". American quoted the Catholic doctrine that what the church has once taught she always teaches. Gregory in 1832, affirmed what Agatho taught 300 years before America was discovered; and Mgr. Preston, vicar general of New York, on Jan. 1, 1888, reaffirmed Gregory and Agatho. Preston said: "The infallibility of the pope is unquestioned; he can not teach false doctrines; he can not err. Every word Leo speaks from his high chair is the voice of the Holy Ghost and must be obeyed. To every Catholic heart comes no thought but obedience. It is said that politics is not within the province of the church, and that the church has only jurisdiction in matters of faith. You say 'I will receive my faith from the pontiff, but I will not receive my politics from him'. This assertion is disloyal and untruthful. You must not think as you wish—must think as Catholics." This 19th century theology is authoritative and comprehensive. If our pope is infallible all the popes are infallible; therefore, what one pope taught, all must teach and hold blood, and unbribable history tells what some of the popes taught—readers of The Press don't need Latin to understand this. Now the popes, without exception, have indorsed Loyola's position, giving this doctrine which American quoted authoritative circulation. American quoted Loyola as saying, "What I see white I believe to be black, if the spiritual authorities define it to be so". Finn cries, "The church does not teach it". Mgr. Preston says, "You must not think as you wish—must think as Catholics".

Finn's dishonesty is again exposed. American quoted authors, giving volume, page and paragraph, as teaching, that, allegiance to a Protestant government may be abrogated if it is for the interest of the church. Finn says the quotations are garbled, and the church does not teach it. Mgr. Preston says, "You must take your politics from Rome, the pope can not err"; while Corpus Juris Canonici Leipsicæ (1839) page 1159, says, "No oaths are to be kept if they are against the interest of the Church of Rome". And to cap the climax, Cardinal Manning, speaking in the name of the pope, said: "I acknowledge no civil power. I am the subject of no prince, and I claim more than than this. I claim to be the supreme judge and director of the conscience of men, of the peasants that till the field, and of the princes that sit upon the throne; of the household that lives in the shades of privacy, and the legislature that makes laws for kingdoms. I am the sole, last, supreme judge of what is right or wrong." Now Finn's dishonesty is again exposed.

American quoted Canon Law, giving section and article, which says, "He who kills one that is excommunicated, is no murderer in a legal sense". Finn says: "The doctrine quoted is false—the church does not teach it—oh where is the Latin?" Let us again call Mr. Finn's attention to the decree passed by the Council of Lateran (1215) and declared by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Foley of Chicago, under oath on Dec. 30, 1870, before the circuit court of Kankakee, Ill., is be the law of the church today: "We expommunicate and anathematize every heresy that rears its head against * * the Catholic faith, condemning all heretics, by whatever name they may be known, for though their faces differ, they are tied together by their tails. Such as are condemned are to be delivered over to the secular powers for punishment. If laymen their goods must be confiscated. * * Secular powers of all ranks and degrees are to be warned, induced, and, if necessary, compelled by ecclesiastical censure, to swear that they will exert themselves to the utmost in the defence of the faith, and extirpate all heretics denounced by the church." This is 19th century Catholic teaching, by a bishop, and it just lays out Finn. Today (1895) not a candidate for the bishopric can be consecrated to the high office without first swearing: "Heretics, schismatics, and rebels to our said Lord (the Pope) or his successors, I will to my utmost persecute and oppose." Finn is again exposed in his falsehoods. American quoted Lessius, Bonar and Trail, as teaching that Catholics under certain conditions may commit perjury and utter equivocations. Finn says "it's false; the church does not teach such doctrines". In an official work called "DeAbsolutione", published by P. Donahoe of Boston (1874) and indorsed by ten American bishops, on page 22, par. 26, occurs this: ["Unless there is a well founded hope that by their influence they may render them to a notable degree less harmful], members on the boards of public schools, which are positively injurious, cannot be absolved; but those connected with the boards of other public schools cannot be called by themselves unworthy of absolution, but rather are worthy even of praise, if they accept or retain the office for the purpose of keeping far from the school books and teachers, who might be dangerous to the faith or morals of Catholic children. But this class of men occasions much work to the parish incumbents in some places, and generally brings to the church not a little harm." Here Catholics are instructed to "accept office" or to "retain it", to equivocate, or if necessary take false oaths, for the purpose of juggling with the public schools, teachers, and books, in the interests of the church. Remember this is 19th century Catholic doctrine indorsed by bishops.

In the same book, page 20 par 23, occurs this: "* * * * There are some who secretly substitute the Catholic (or certain leaves of the Catholic) for the Protestant version of the Bible (or in the books which they are compelled to use and which are professedly adverse to religion (Catholic) they either amend the corrupt passages by suitable explanation or omit them) * * * *". Here again, is the "secret" underhanded "substitution." of what the civil law does not admit, for that which the civil law demands. Chicanery, and deceit, and violation of oaths, and civil obligations, to Protestant governments are still taught by Rome. Enough modern Catholic authorities have been quoted to show that American correctly stated some of the doctrines of Rome; and also to prove that as a deliberate falsifier Mr. Finn is a monumental success. Finally Finn accuses American of being intolerant, and attempting to revive old calumies. Let's see who is "intolerant". Let's see who is the "devilish disturber of peace". Finn, just turn to Plain Talk About the Protestantism of Today, indorsed by Archbishop Williams of Boston, and in present circulation, and on page 55 read: "To be a Christian is to be a Catholic: outside of Catholicity you may be a Lutheran, a Calvinist, a Mohammedan, a Mormon, a Free Thinker, a Buddhist, but you are not, you cannot be a Christian". Here is the red hand and uplifted club! No one but a Catholic can be a Christian! American has not misrepresented Catholicism; on the contrary he has exposed its enmity towards Protestantism: and the lying hypocracy of its advocates, like Finn.

Now a brief review of Finn's juggle of war facts. Bigelow and Benjamin establish the very point I made; that the Pope held confidential correspondence with Jefferson Davis during the war; the method of addressing Davis is not to the point at all—but, the Pope did correspond with him. Finn says Booth was not a Catholic. Finn falsifies as usual. Lansing in Romanism and Republic, page 272 says: "It was brought out in the military tribunal which condemned some of them to death, that every person who had anything to do with the assassination of Lincoln was a Roman Catholic". Chiniquy needs no defense—Finn merely uses the exploded charge by which the church sought to minimize the awful proof which Chiniquy parades against Rome; Chiniquy has never been refuted—Finn does n't do it—only calls him names. The same vilification was used to silence Dr. McGlynn—this time McGlynn conquered the church. Finn says insurgents fired the first shot of the war. People's Encyclopedia, page 230, says: "In 1861 Beauregard was appointed by the Confederacy to command at Charleston, where April 11, he commenced the war by the bombardment of Fort Sumpter." General Beauregard was a Catholic.

I close this article, which I have tried to keep as short as possible, with a paragraph from the Rambler, a prominent Catholic paper of England: "The South would never have dared attack the North had they not had the assurance from the Pope, that the Jesuits, the bishops, the priests and the whole people of the church of Rome would help them. Because of this the Roman Catholic Beauregard was chosen to fire the first gun at Sumpter. The Pope of Rome was the only crowned prince in the whole world, who recognized the Southern Confederacy." This is quite enough.

And yet Finn talks of the love of the Catholic authorities for the Republic.

Again Finn's dishonest tactics are seen. The desertion statistics stand—The Citizen of Boston authenticates them. The Sun's late denial, comes too late to offset the result. If they were false The Sun deserves condemnation for printing such a glaring falsehood in the first place.

The colored gentleman in the woodpile is too awfully apparent.

I thank you Mr. Editor for your patience: and only ask the privliege of defending myself from such jugglers of history as P. J. Finn & Co. AMERICA.

—One of the big specials at U. B. Crane's, 120 West Front street, is a dollar laundried shirt with colored front for 49 cents.

A BOROUGH DEFICIT.

MAKING ENDS MEET AT THE CLOSE OF THE YEAR.

Street Railway Company Criticised for Using Salt on the Tracks—To Hunt Out Tax Delinquents.

The North Plainfield Borough Council meeting was called to order at 8:15 last evening by Mayor Needham. Councilmen Lounsbury, Valiant, Winckler and Peck were present. Clerk Arnold read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were approved.

The clerk's report was then read as follows:

Received from T. R. Crosley, fines	$ 25.00
" " Marshal Whitely	1.00
Borough deficit	$1,686.70
Balance
Fire Dept. $629.58
Light Account $656.52
Road Account $1,004 92
	$2,691 61
	$1,285.10
Total deficit	$1,406.52

M. B. Lunger was elected a member of Warren Engine Company some time ago, and the company asked that he be confirmed. It was referred.

A communication was received from Lewis C. Wyckoff and others, asking that a sidewalk be laid on Howard street from No. 10 to 26. It was referred.

A. I. Smalley and others asked Council to remedy the extremely bad condition of Somerset street from Howard to Regent streets. The proper committee was given charge of the matter.

The office vacated by P. M. French on the Board of Health, by reason of the expiration of his term, was filled by the Mayor He appointed E. P. Smith.

Mr. Lounsbury of the Sewer Committee reported progress, and Mr. Peck reported that the fire-gong had been repaired and was now all right.

The monthly batch of claims was presented, referred, and later ordered paid.

Collector Spencer made the following reports:

Received license money, $225 each, from the following: Hipp, Zeller & White, Boyce, Speigel. Total, $900. County Clerk's fees 5 per cent; balance, $855.

1892 taxes collected since the last report:

Borough	$ 32.44
Lights	142.74
Roads	103.81
Fire department	71.39
	$ 356.86
Previously reported	11,679.84
Total	12,036.70

1894 taxes collected since the last report:

Borough	$ 191.86
Lights	920.92
Roads	652.22
Fire Dept	527.21
Sidewalks	36.00
	$ 2,328.21
Previously reported	7,397.82
Total	$ 9,726.13

Clerk Arnold stated that notes amounting to $2,500 would fall due before next meeting and asked that they be renewed to pay bills. The borough, he said, needed $4,799.

Mr. Lounsbury in a resolution asked that Tuesday, Feb. 12, be designated as registry day; and that Feb. 19 and March 5 be designated to alter and revise the lists, and transfer the names of any so desiring. The election will be held March 12. The resolution was adopted.

After a recess of ten minutes, Mr. Lounsbury brought up the question as to the right of the street railway to use salt on the tracks, and claimed they had been doing it. They have, he said, the right to use it on switches, but there is a fine attached to the use of salt along the rails, and he thought the offenders should be looked after.

Mr. Valiant moved that the collector be requested to present a full list of delinquent taxpayers as far back as time goes, so the borough would know its resources. It was adopted.

Messrs. Valiant and Peck offered resolutions renewing for two months the several notes which fall due soon, and have them charged to Road, Light and Fire Department accounts. They were adopted.

Mr. Peck moved that when the Council adjourned it be to meet Friday, Feb. 15. This was carried.

Mr. Winckler moved that the Auditing and Finance committees be authorized to examine the books, accounts and moneys of the clerk and collector, which was adopted. Mr. Valiant thought that the collector's and clerk's book should balance, and he wanted to see the thing done in a business-like manner, so that the borough would know exactly where they stood.

Mr. Lounsbury moved that the council go into executive session, which they did. The matter of sewerage was discussed. Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed and Engineer F. A. Dunham being present to give their opinion when needed.

It Is Not Pi.

Chowfa Maha Vayiravadh! This may look like pied type to you, but it's the name of the King of Siam. That's about the way all printed matter will look to you, however, if you neglect to care for your eyes. They may need attention now. Do not delay calling at Collier's, 103 Park avenue, where examinations are free and reliable advice given.

NORTH PLAINFIELD SCHOOL NOTES.

The subject of the exercise yesterday given by the Juniors was Napoleon. John H. VanWinkle, Jr., gave an interesting sketch of Napoleon Bonaparte; Miss Edith Cooley recited Lord Byron's The Eve before Waterloo; Miss Emma Stevens, "The Death of Napoleon".

The Junior class will hold a class meeting this evening at the home of one of the members.

Miss McCoy, regular teacher of the Seventh grade, has returned after a season of illness.

Miss Petrie is expected to return Monday as teacher of the Junior class.

Photographing the Shooting Scene.

Yesterday at 2:07 p. m. Prosecutor Marsh, County Engineer Quien and his assistant, Cameron, arrived in town from Elizabeth and were escorted by Chief of Police Grant to the locality where Morres Evans was shot. The party was accompanied by Photographer Thorn, who took accurate plates of the surroundings. The pictures are to be used in the Welsh-Kane trial at Elizabeth next Wednesday, and will be invaluable in establishing a clear and correct idea in the minds of the jury as to the circumstances at the time the shooting occurred. County Engineer Quien and his assistant also took a careful survey of the grounds and adjacent buildings and will prepare a large diagram, showing the elevation and the ground plan, which will also materially assist the jury throughout the trial.

Salvation Is Deliverance.

The interest in the evangelistic services in Grace M. E. Church is gaining. Many friends of the church were present last night to help in the good work. Rev. Mr. Kinsey preached an excellent sermon from the words: "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?" Salvation is deliverance from the guilt, power and penalty of sin. It is great in its cost, in its ability to meet human needs, in its universality. Apt illustrations held the interest of all present. In the after-service a number signified their desire to lead a new life. Dr. Barnes closed the service with words of advice and encouragement. Services will be held every night next week except Saturday.

Graceland's Ungraceful Station.

The little railroad station at Graceland that was built a couple of years ago has been almost totally destroyed by boys and tramps. A few nights ago three tramps who wanted to keep warm built a fire on the floor of the station. A man from Fanwood who was passing saw the blaze in the building and went to investigate. The tramps fled, and the fire was extinguished with snow.

Two Sisters Die at Once.

Mrs. Pamelia Smith of Somerville died there Thursday night. She had a sister, Mrs. William Lyons, living in Perth Ambop. The sisters were very fond of one another, and when news of Mrs. Smith's death was telegraphed to Perth Amboy the word came back directly that the sister had also died at almost the same moment.

Socialist Headquarters.

The Socialists of the West End have at last found headquarters. It is the intention of the members who reside in the West End to renovate the store at the corner of South Second street and Grant avenue, and in the future have it for their meeting place. Work on the interior will be begun at once.

BY THE WAY.

—The quarantine has been removed from the house of John Ulrich.

—Mr. Hoffman's incubator, West Front street, has hatched out a 5-toed Plymouth Rock chicken.

—Mrs. L. Coles has taken possession of Room 202, Babcock Building, where she is prepared to do fashionable dressmaking, using the Taylor French system.

—George VanBlake of 320 Richmond street, coachman for J. W. Johnson, was taken from his rooms in the barn to his home, in a carriage, suffering from an attack of the grip.

—The Dachshunde, Mascot, owned by Mrs. U. T. Hungerford of Netherwood, has recovered from his partial paralysis, so as to be able to move around again, through the treatment of Dr. F. C. Herber, veterinary surgeon.

—Mrs. Dr. Edwards had planned to leave Plainfield for Lakewood, but finds that her professional services continue in such urgent demand here that she is compelled to remain at the City Hotel one one week longer. This celebrated clairvoyant may be consulted here until Saturday, Feb. 9 at 7 a. m., when she will positively leave for Lakewood.

—Any woman can be strong minded about a thing she does not want. But it takes a powerful sight of will power to resist the choice and beautiful goods at Peck's.

—Brastus Harris, a colored employe of M. C. Bird at the latter's wood yard on East Fourth street, cut the forefinger of his left hand nearly off between the first and second joints on the circular saw yesterday afternoon at 4.

—A Christian Endeavor service will be held in the First Presbyterian Church next Wednesday evening, at which time Rev. Thornton B. Penfield of the Presbyterian Board of Missions, New York, will make an address.

FOUR LIVES LOST.

The Deaconness' Hospital in Cleveland Nearly Destroyed by Fire.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 2.—Four lives were lost in a fire which almost destroyed the Deaconness' hospital in this city yesterday. The dead are:

Jacob Krause, aged 65, burned; John Allmeyer, 59, burned; Minnie Baumer, nurse, 25, from Chicago, burned; Walter Clark, 6 months old, suffocated.

Several other patients were injured, but none seriously. Rosa Gerber, one of the laundry girls, first discovered flames in the basement of the hospital. There were few people in the neighborhood at the timie. The first arrivals heard screams and saw flames shooting from every window on the second and third floors.

Suddenly a woman's face appeared at one of the windows and she was seen to smash the heavy glass with her fist. Then she leaped out head first, and struck on her face. The fire department was slow in reaching the hospital, the snow and ice in the streets preventing a quick run, but when once at work the fire was quickly subdued.

There are only two exits from the upper part of the building one in the front and one in the rear. The nurses got out safely, almost at the start, with the exception of Minnie Baumer. When her sister nurses called to her that the building was on fire she cried: "No, I will not leave my patient, I will die first."

She was nursing Krause, who was also burned to death. She sat by the side of the sick man until death came to both of them. The injured were taken to the other hospitals of the city.

The Deaconness' hospital is under the direction of the Methodist Episcopal church and has done much philanthropic work. It was opened last October and was nearly filled with patients. The front part of the building is entirely destroyed.

ACCIDENTS AT SEA.

Two Steamers Lost While Others Are Badly Damaged.

London, Feb. 2.—The British steamer Iturni, grounded and foundered off St. Michaels, Azores. She sailed from this port Nov. 29 for Demerara and put into St. Michaels in distress. Repairs were made and she proceeded on her voyage Dec. 16, arriving at Barbadoes on Dec. 28. She foundered on her return trip.

The Times correspondent at Whitby, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, says that a steam collier was wrecked on the rocks at Port Mulgrave. Two of the crew were drowned.

The British tank steamer Beacon Light, Captain Anderson, from New York Jan. 12, arrived in the Downs yesterday in tow for London. The Beacon Light was badly damaged and had lost her propeller.

Bremen, Feb. 2.—The North German Lloyd steamer Fulda, Captain Thalenhorst, which left New York on Jan. 22, grounded in the River Weser, but was floated at the next high tide. She sustained no damage and proceeded to this city.

UNJUSTLY SENTENCED.

Evidence That William Gay, Convicted of Burglary, Is Innocent.

Norwich, Conn., Feb. 2.—A sensation has been caused by the discovery of evidence which indicates that William Gay, now serving out a twenty-one months' sentence for burglary in the Wethersfield state prison, is innocent of the change upon which he was convicted.

Gay was convicted on circumstantial evidence, the clinching fact being that a coat belonging to him was found in the burglarized store at Fitchville. A Preston dressmaker says she received as a present some of the silk handkerchiefs stolen from the store by a young man who waited upon her, who told her he tried to sell, in Jewett City, cigars stolen at the same time and threw a lot of stolen shoes back of a wall. Inquiry and search resulted in a corroboration of the woman's story.

When Gay was tried the woman said she told the burglar he ought to go to court, tell the truth and free Gay. He replied: "Gay is innocent—no jury will convict him." It is probable the governor will be asked to immediately release Gay.

THE BOUNDARY DISPUTE.

Difficulties Between Mexico and Guatemala Not Yet Surmounted.

City of Mexico, Feb. 2.—In her boundary dispute with Mexico, Guatemala relies on the preliminary treaty between the two republics, dating from August, 1882, signed in New York, and containing an arbitration clause, while Mexico rests her claims on the definite treaty of Sept. 27, of the same year, signed in Mexico. In the latter treaty the method of settling the disputed boundary is clearly defined.

The difficulties in the relations of the two republics are by no means yet surmounted. El Universal said last night in an inspired article, that Guatemala has not as yet decided to fully satisfy Mexico's demands. The idea of the organization of a Central American aliance against Mexico, made public a few days ago, is ridiculed by the press here. Jacinto Castellanos, the Salvadorian minister, will be received to-day by President Diaz.

A Colored Swell in Trouble.

Boston, Feb. 2.—Albert J. Hosier, a colored swell, who has been employed in the law office of Henry D. Hyde, in the Exchange building for several years, has been arrested on the charge of forging his employer's name to a check for $100. Hosier's forgeries are believed to have aggregated a considerable sum.

The Adams' Bequest.

Plymouth, Mass., Feb. 2.—By the provisions of the will of the late Frederick C. Adams, of Kingston, which now becomes operative by the death of his wife, the town of Kingston will receive over $50,000 to be devoted to the building and furnishing of a town hall and public library.

$15,000 for the Injury of His Child.

Erie, Pa., Feb. 2.—The jury in the case of Ernest Woeckener vs. the Erie Motor company have rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $15,000. Woeckener's 3-year-old daughter was run down by one of the defendants cars and seriously injured.

PROBING FOR THE CAUSE

Official Inquiry Into the Sinking of the Elbe.

Vivid Description by Hofman of the Steamer's Fate—No News of the Missing Life Boat—Queen Victoria's Sorrow Surviving Passengers Ready To Start for London.

London, Feb. 2.—It is understood that the officers and crew of the Crathie were examined by the British consul in Rotterdam. They will leave the ship and return forthwith to Aberdeen.

Vevera, Hofmann and Schlegel, the Elbe passengers, denied emphatically that the Crathie remained signaling for two hours near the scene of the collision. They say that had she done so, she could have saved many lives.

Vevera, Hofman and Schlegel, the to reach the Elbe's deck after the collision, did not see the Crathie answer any of the Elbe's signals. He noticed a small steamer, apparently the one that had struck the Elbe, steaming away.

As regards the behavior of the Elbe's crew, Hofman says:

"I seized a lifebelt as soon as I got on deck, but a sailor demanded it, saying that it belonged to the crew. I gave it up with the remark. 'Well, I hope you will save yourself,' but he didn't. The crew did their best to keep the passengers out of the boats."

Hofman was greatly embittered by the loss of his wife and child. He talks continually about it, and in each interview makes new charges against the crew.

"I was born among the Indians out west," he said. "I have gone through rough times with my family there. Now it is all over with them and they have been sacrificed by the carelessness of these men. I do not value my own life now; I can think only of my loss."

Hofman's description of the final settling of the ship was vivid.

"I could see her sinking rapidly as we pulled away in the small boat. Her bow went up steadily into the air. The deck grew steeper, and I could see the poor wretches aboard her climbing and crawling toward the prow, until suddenly all were engulfed."

Vevera told a reporter last night: "There was a lot of green hands in charge of the lifeboats. They were so excited they did not know what they were about. They filled one boat and then dumped all the occupants into the water. The crew in our boat were very reluctant to admit Miss Boecker. Hofman and I dragged her in without any aid from the seamen."

Vevera and Hofman also attacked Third Officer Stollberg and First Engineer Neussell. They say that both acted selfishly after the rescue, and that Stollberg made no effort to command the boat, but gave the whole responsibility to the steerage passenger, Boethen, who had been cook on a French steamer.

They speak highly of Boethen's coolness and skill, and give him the whole credit for managing the boat.

The company booked Vevera and Schlegel to sail on the steamship Umbria to-day, and both will start for Liverpool. Each has received $15 from the company for losses on the ship.

Many more smacks arrived at Lowestoft late last evening. They brought no news. Others are due to arrive today and to-morrow.

The skipper of the smack Competitor which returned last night, reported that he saw what he thought was a mail bag and tried to catch it with a boat-hook. He missed it and, knowing nothing of the collision, did not try for it again.

Handbills distributed in Lowestoft say that Consul Bradbeer will pay £50 for the body of Walter Schuell, one of the Elbe's first cabin passengers.

The Shipwrecked Mariners' society has sent a barometer to Skipper Wright, of the Wildflower, and £10 to his men, and the mayor of Lowestoft has opened a fund for their benefit.

A dispatch from Vienna says that among the Elbe's passengers were the Guttman brothers, directors of a steam mill company near Kaschan, Hungary. The Guttmans had fled to escape arrest for forgeries by which they defrauded the company and the peasant shareholders of 300,000 florins. They are said to have given assumed names at the steamship office.

The North German Lloyd Steamship company, owners of the lost steamer Elbe, have libeled the British steamer Crathie by nailing a writ to her mast.

This action is taken preliminary to claiming damages for the sinking of the Elbe by the Crathie. The Crathie is worth £8,000, without her cargo.

Lloyd's agent at Lowestoft has received the following telegram: "The queen is greatly distressed at the terrible disaster to the steamship Elbe, and will be glad to know the condition of the rescued ones and to be informed if there is any chance that there may be other survivors."

To this message the agent replied: "The survivors of the Elbe are sincerely grateful for her majesty's kind inquiry as to their condition. All of them are able to start for London. I fear that there is no hope now that any more have been saved."

O'Donnell and Maher Matched.

New York, Feb. 2.—The Atlantic Athletic club of Coney Island has matched Steve O'Donnell, Jim Corbett's sparring partner, and Peter Maher, the Irish champion, for a twenty-five round contest on March 25.

Sold to an English Syndicate.

San Francisco, Feb. 2.—The Iron Mountain mine, located in Shaste county, has been sold for $300,000 to an English syndicate represented by Frederick W. Fielding, of Fielding, Saunders & Son, of New York.

Rome, Feb. 1.—The Diritto says that Italy will arbitrate the dispute between Portugal and Cape Colony concerning Manicaland and Delagoa bay.

FINANCE IN THE SENATE.

Senator Teller's Vigorous Comment on Mr. Gorman's Remarks.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The consideration of the District of Columbia bill by the senate again involved an interesting financial debate, the principal speaker being Senator Teller, who, referring to Mr. Gorman's remarks, commented rather vigorously upon the assertions of the Maryland senator that there was a treasury deficit of $100,000,000 and contrasted them with the president's message, saying there was a "comfortable balance" in the treasury. Mr. Teller said the surplus was not there and he thought it was the right of the senate to be told by the treasury the truth about the matter.

Mr. Teller's speech was of some length and several interpolations by senators on either side brought out an extension of the Colorado senator's views and drew out as well the explanation from Senator Gorman that, when he (as it might have been) used the word "revenue" measure with the understanding that such would be placed on an appropriation bill, he meant to use the word money.

Mr. Gorman disclaimed any proposition to place on an appropriation bill, a bill to raise revenue.

Mr. Teller said no legislation will go on an appropriation bill with his support. The putting on an appropriation bill, he said, of a provision for borrowing money is very serious and ought to be prohibited by the constitution. Mr. Teller was applauded before concluding his speech.

CAPTURE OF WEI-HAI-WEI.

Further Details of How the Naval Station Was Taken.

Yokohama, Feb. 2.—An official dispatch received here gives particulars of the capture of Wei-Hai-Wei by the Japanese forces, as already announced. The dispatch says that the second army and the fleet attacked Wei-Hai-Wei on the morning of Wednesday last, and by evening all the land forts were captured.

The island forts are still resisting, but the Japanese have obtained command of the east and west entrances of the bay. The capture of the Chinese fleet is regarded as imminent.

Hiroshima, Feb. 2.—Count Ito Hiroboumi, president of the council of ministers, and M. Mutsu Munemitsu, the minister of foreign affairs, gave audience yesterday to the Chinese peace envoys.

Hong Kong, Feb. 2.—General Fung is going to march from Kwang-Tung with 5,000 troops in order to assist Viceroy Chang in the defense of Nanking. General Fung is one of the Chinese officers who fought in Annam against the French.

HAS THE TIDE TURNED?

The Treasury Yesterday Gained Instead of Lost Gold.

Washington, Feb. 2.—A turned tide of gold exports has occurred and for the first day in several weeks the treasury yesterday gained instead of lost gold. The net gain for the day was slight, being only $543,500, but it increased the reserve to $42,915,467.

This increase was brought about by the return of $1,800,000 in gold to the New York sub-treasury by exporters and bankers who had taken it out earlier in the week. The withdrawals, however, continued on a diminished scale, amounting for the day to $1,257,500. Of this amount $1,250,000 was for export.

During January only seven-tenths of 1 per cent. of the customs receipts at New York, which aggregated $12,817,827, were paid in gold coin or gold certificates.

SUIT AGAINST WANAMAKER.

Proceedings Instituted for Violation of the Contract Labor Law.

Philadelphia, Feb. 2.—Edward J. Brooks has instituted proceedings in the United States court against the firm of John Wanamaker for the government to recover $1,000 for an alleged violation by the defendant of the contract labor law.

Brooks claims that on account of an advertisement in a London paper he came to this country and was employed in Wanamaker's silk department; that his passags money was deducted; and that, although the understanding was that he was to hold his position for two years, he was discharged at the end of the first year.

TWO HUNDRED IN PERIL.

The Stranded Steamer Amerique in a Dangerous Position.

Colon, Feb. 2.—The General Transatlantic line steamer Amerique, from St. Nazaire for way ports and Colon, reported as having stranded off Cape Agousta, near Savanilla, department of Bolivar, Colombia, remains in a bad position, and it is expected that she will become a total wreck.

There are two hundred persons on board of her and they are in great peril.

Two steamers have gone to the scene of the wreck to render whatever assistance may be possible.

PREACHER'S BLOODY CRIME.

Cut His Wife's Throat and Shot His Child and Himself.

Aurora, Mo., Feb. 2.—Bud Ellis, a farmer and Methodist preacher living four miles from this city, became suddenly insane yesterday. He cut his wife's throat and shot his little girl through the head, killing them, then going to a farm where he formerly resided, blew his own brains out.

He was a widower until a week ago, when he married a widow named Rickman, who also had a little girl. The latter was saved by being absent at school.

The White Election Contest.

Indiana, Pa., Feb. 2.—There seems to be no doubt now that Judge White will be seated. The visiting judges and the people generally are disgusted with the weakness of the case of the prosecution, and it is evident the entire week was consumed without creating even a suspicion against a vote cast at the recent election.

MUNYON HELPED THEM OUT

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT HIS NEW IDEAS.

The Eminent Professor Always Successful.

Mr. Glenn H. Todd, 136 Munson street, Astoria, says: "I had a very distressing case of catarrh, which grew rapidly worse in spite of so-called special treatment, and made me quite deaf. After taking Munyon's Catarrh Remedies I was completely cured of all my catarrhal troubles and my hearing restored."

Mrs. Marion Graham 295 East Seventh street, says: "I have suffered very greatly from rheumatism; my feet were so sore and swollen that I could scarcely walk. I also had an obstinate kidney trouble that doctors failed to cure. Munyon's Remedies cured me completely of my rheumatism and kidney disease. A friend living in my house, who is over 60 years old, was also cured of rheumatism by Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. Professor Munyon's Remedies act so promptly that I have great faith in their ability to cure the most obstinate cases, no matter what the disease may be."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatics, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Co. of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25c. a bottle.

WILL FORM A CABINET

Whiteway Accepts the Newfoundland Leadership.

Although Recently Freed from Political Disabilities, the Resigning Ministers Advised Gov. O'Brien To Ask Sir William To Resume the Premiership.

St. Johns, N. F., Feb. 2.—Newfoundland's provisional cabinet headed by D. J. Greene, premier and attorney-general, although considered largely representative of the Whiteway party, has resigned, after being in office but little more than a month. It is the third cabinet the colony has had within a year.

The resigning ministers advised Governor O'Brien to ask ex-Premier Whiteway to form a cabinet. Sir William, but recently freed of political disabilities, was sworn in at midnight as a member of the legislative council. Just before this those members of the retiring cabinet who resign office without hope of return, withdrew the opposition they had maintained against Whiteway, permitting him to obtain a seat in the council.

Sir William Whiteway has consented to resume the premiership and will undertake to have his cabinet ready to-day. It is understood that he will re-install in office as many as possible of those who, like himself, suffered political penalties at the hands of the courts. The personnel of the new cabinet will probably be—Sir William Whiteway, premier; Robert Bond, colonial secretary; E. P. Morris, attorney-general; Hon. G. Emerson, receiver general; Hon. H. J. B. Woods, surveyor general, and A. W. Harvey without a portfolio. To these may be added two probable nominees for offices not in the cabinet—J. P. Thompson, for chairman of the board of works, and Mr. Dawe for financial secretary. Ex-Premier Greene is promised the next vacancy on the supreme court bench, while ex-Colonial Secretary Horwood and ex-Receiver General P. J. Scott are turned down.

A majority of the Whitewayite caucus oppose Newfoundland's entering the Canadian confederation, and Mr. Harvey threatens to decline membership in the new cabinet if such action is favored. A royal commission is likely to be accepted. The house of assembly met, but adjourned for a week as the cabinet arrangements were not completed.

It is announced that the imperial government, in view of the prevailing destitution in the colony offers considerable financial assistance to the local ministry and will donate $1,000 weekly to the relief fund. There is much need of substantial aid from some source. The soup kitchens of the city are thronged with applicants for food, and the charitable societies are over-burdened with demands upon their resources.

Baine, Johnston & Co., have compromised with their creditors at 35 cents on the dollar, payable in two years. A period of general compromise has been inaugurated; fully nine-tenths of the business people of the city are compounding with their creditors.

The government is being urged to prosecute the directors of the defunct Union bank, public feeling on the subject being especially strong because the Commercial bank's directors are being vigorously prosecuted. One of the Union bank shareholders has given the government until Monday the option of proceeding against the directors, declaring that if such prosecution is refused, he will himself initiate an inquiry. The liquidators are accepting banknotes, at the government guarantee, in payment of accounts due the bank.

London, Feb. 2.—The Daily News says to-day in a leader on Newfoundland affairs:

"Sir William Whiteway was notoriously a victim of the violence of party feeling. His faults were chargeable to bad political customs rather than to any individual dishonesty. His return to power is singular proof of the general sense of his ability and exceptional knowledge of public affairs."

AFTER TIN PLATE FOREIGNERS.

A Careful Watch To Prevent Their Coming Here Under Contract.

Washington, Feb. 2.—R. G. Horan, of Pittsburg, president of the Amalgamated Iron and Steel Workers' association, reports to the treasury department that he has reason to believe tin workers from Wales and elsewhere are preparing to come to this country under contract to take the place of American workmen.

Mr. Horan states that tin plate works are reducing wages, and this accounts for their efforts to secure new men, as the old men are resisting the reduction.

Immigrant agents have been instructed to keep a sharp lookout for foreign tin workers and see that they do not violate the law in coming into this country.

SCENE IN THE HOUSE

Breckinridge and Heard Attack Each Other.

The Trouble Began Through an Alleged Statement by the Kentuckian That No District Business Was To Be Done—Apologies Made by Both the Congressmen.

Washington, Feb. 2.—An angry gray-haired man, violently struggling in the arms of several men to reach another man, standing facing him, amidst almost indescribable confusion, while epithets of "liar" and "scoundrel" were bandied between the two combatants, was a scene on the floor of the house of representatives yesterday afternoon, those engaged therein being members of that distinguished and honorable body.

Hawaii, which has been the occasion of some of the most tumultous scenes witnessed in the 53d congress, was the indirect cause of the altercation, between Messrs. Heard (dem., Mo.) and Breckinridge (dem., Ky.), surpassing in sensational features anything seen on the floor of the house for years. It was brought about by an effort by Mr. Heard to cut off debate on a resolution reported from the committee on foreign affairs by Mr. Hitt (rep., Ill.), asking information respecting the connection of British subjects with the recent attempted revolution in Hawaii, at a time when Mr. Breckenridge was attempting to get the floor to speak on the resolution. Mr. Heard was anxious to proceed with the consideration of District of Columbia business, for which the day had been set apart, and demanded the previous question. Mr. Breckenridge went over to Mr. Heard's seat and was seen to engage in a heated conversation with him, of which only the words "liar" and "scoundrel" could be heard more than a few feet. Then the burly and venerable looking Kentuckian was seen to lunge forward to strike Mr. Heard, but several members threw themselves upon him, preventing a collision by a severe struggle.

Both gentlemen were ordered under arrest by the speaker, and appeared later at the bar of the house, where they made explanations, which ended the incident for the time being. Mr. Heard's statement was not satisfactory to Mr. Breckenridge, and common friends undertook to adjust the difficulty. The result of their labors appeared later in the day, when Mr. Heard rose and stated that in view of the fact that his friends were of the opinion that he had not withdrawn the language offensive to Mr. Breckenridge, after that gentleman had disclaimed using the language which gave him (Mr. Heard) offense, he would then do so, saying he had intended to do so in the first instance.

Thereupon Mr. Breckenridge expressed his satisfaction, renewed his apologies to the house for creating the scene, and begged the pardon of all concerned. The whole matter was, on motion of Mr. Goodnight (dem., Ky.), ordered to be omitted from the record.

The resolution of inquiry was adopted. Also the following bills:

To pension Maria Davis, widow of a lieutenant in the 9th heavy artillery (to cure a defect in a bill vetoed by President Cleveland); to restore the status of the Missouri militia under the pension act of 1890 (made necessary by a ruling of the pension bureau); to appoint an additional judge for the northern district of Illinois.

Also, a concurrent resolution for the appointment of a joint commission of fifteen, to arrange a programme of exercises in connection with the inauguration of the Chattanooga and Chickamauga national park.

The Reilly bill to refund the indebtedness of the Pacific railways was further discussed by Messrs. Bowers (rep., Cal.) and Bryan (dem., Neb.), in opposition, and by Mr. Caruth (dem., Ky.), in favor of its passage.

The contested election case of Stewart vs. Childs from the Eighth Illinois district was reported from the committee on elections, and Mr. Brown, chairman, (dem., Ind.), gave notice that he would call it up next Thursday.

The new currency bill prepared by the committee on banking and currency was reported by Mr. Springer, and leaves the minority to file their individual views on the measure. The house then took a recess until 8 o'clock, at which time they met and considered private pension bills.

Five private pension and relief bills were considered in committee of the whole and ordered to be favorably reported for the action of the house. Among them was a bill to place at the rate of $30 a month on the pension rolls the name of Julia E. Lock who before her last marriage was the widow of General Daniel McCook, one of the famous fighting family of that name. It was the first bill of this character that has received favorable action in the house at this congress.

French Creek Forge Resumes.

St. Peters, Pa., Feb. 2.—The French Creek forge, near this place, will resume operations on Monday next after eighteen months idleness. Its product is charcoal blooms, made from scrap iron, and the low price of the commodity has kept the forge idle. Four furnaces will be lighted.

National Bank Note Circulation.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The decrease in national bank note circulation during January was $2,560,046, making the total outstanding January 31, 1895, $205,205,944. Circulation based on bonds increased $993,217 during January, and since January 31, 1894, $7,117,487.

Will Dismantle the Plant,

York, Pa., Feb. 2.—The York match factory which was bought three years years ago by the Match trust for $200,000, will dismantle the plant and remove the machinery. The factory cost $50,000 and employed 300 hands.

Will Contest Compromised.

New York, Feb. 2.—Robert L. Cutting's contest over the will and codicil of his father, Robert L. Cutting, has been compromised, and it is said that young Cutting will receive a fair share of his father's estate.

Month When 'Tis Easiest to Regain Health.

Get Strong Before Debilitating Spring Comes Again.

Feed the Worn Out Brain with Paine's Celery Compound.

Let Changing Season Find System in Health.

Take the Great Remedy that Makes People Well.

A perfectly healthy body has its parts completely nourished and its nerves constantly refreshed and stored with energy from the vigorous blood that all the time bathes it.

But to do this important work of conveying sufficient nutrition to the tissues, the blood must be kept rich and full of red corpuscles.

The only trouble with two-thirds of the men and women whom the coming spring will claim for its victims is a pitiful lack of nerve food. What these weak, nervous people need is a more general feeding and storing of their blood and tissues with fresh, highly vitalized material. There is undoubtedly nothing that can compare with Prof. Phelps' remarkable discovery, Paine's celery compound, for restoring health and strength.

The great body of physicians through the United States, England and Canada believe profoundly in it, and prescribe it in all cases of nervous weakness and debility. In preparing this greatest of all nerve tonics and blood-renewers, the eminent professor of Dartmouth college, Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., had in mind the countless men and women with brains overworked and nerves unstrung by worry and lack of proper nutrition.

Clerks, their employers, lawyers, doctors, mothers of families, hard working men and women in every State and country, and hosts of brain workers—the most intellectual part of the community—are today taking Paine's celery compound, with the happiest results, to relieve themselves of rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous exhaustion, dyspepsia, sleeplessness and low spirits. Paine's celery compound cures disease of the important organs of digestion, circulation and excretion, by purifying the blood, by regulating the entire nervous system and supplying the body with strength to combat disease.

Paine's celery compound makes people well. It takes away all the tremor and irritability from the nerves, and gives that calm, strong feeling of assured health that invariably accompanies a perfectly well-nourished bodily system.

Get rid of languor, clear the muddy, unhealthy skin, plump out the body and get back to a normal vigorous condition with Paine's celery compound, and begin now.

Cutting Out a Gunboat.

Feb. 2, 1864, was the date of one of the boldest expeditions of the kind known as "cutting out" a warship recorded in our annals. It was led by Colonel John Taylor Wood of President Davis' staff. Wood acquired unique fame in privateering exploits on the Chesapeake and the sound and river waters. With a party of 100 men in boats and launches he dropped down the Neuse river after midnight and getting abreast of the Union fleet off Newbern pointed out the large sidewheel steamer Underwriter as the object of his foray. The rain was pouring torrents, and the night was dark. Guided by the sound of "four bells," the party rowed silently toward the steamer, pistols, pikes and cutlasses in readiness. At 300 yards a challenge rang out from the Union deck, "Boat ahoy!" No answer. "Boat ahoy, boat ahoy!" was the sharp cry, following. The ship's rattle sprang, and the boarders saw the crew of the gunboat hurrying on deck. "Give way, give way!" shouted Wood, and pulled alongside. The ship lay under the guns of two forts and mounted four of her own. Her fires were banked, and she couldn't move. After one shot from their boat howitzer the Confederates climbed on deck, where they were met with a volley of musketry. Cutlasses and pistols in hand, they rushed upon the Underwriter's men, cheering wildly. In a ten minutes' hand to hand fight 6 boarders were killed and 23 cut down with ugly wounds. The Union crew, headed by Master Joseph Westervelt, fought until overpowered. Westervelt was killed, and 8 of his followers met a like fate. Only 39 surrendered, among them 20 helplessly wounded.

COLONEL WOOD.

The Union forts and the gunboat alongside the Underwriter speedily opened fire on the doomed ship, and, since the cold boilers made it impossible to remove his prize beyond their deadly range Wood, applied the torch.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

Border Avengers In Uniform.

On Feb. 3, 1863, a bloody drama peculiar to the southwest in troublous times was enacted in Mingo swamp, near Jackson, Mo. The heroes of the occasion acted under military orders, though their methods were of the wild border type. The vicinity of Mingo swamp harbored a guerrilla band whose leader bore the lofty title "General McGee." The fastnesses of the swamp served for a lair. By the aid of scouts as desperate as the outlaws themselves Major Reeder of the Twelfth Missouri cavalry tracked the chief members of the gang to the interior of the swamp. The ground was frozen to a solid crust, and inhabitants who knew the treacherous nature of bog lands in winter urged Reeder not to risk the lives of his men where they might be ambushed in the morass, powerless to resist. But the game had been treed; the hunter blood was up, and, although a blinding snowstorm added to the danger of the enterprise, the major and 40 picked men rode on, swimming their horses over the streams and swamp lakes until their hoofs struck solid earth in a farm clearing, where McGee's men held rendezvous. These numbered that day 35, besides McGee. Taken by surprise, the outlaws ran to cover around the farm buildings. Their pursuers kept the saddle, leaping their horses over fences and other obstructions. "No prisoners" was the order of the day, and as it was all a question of quick shooting it took but a few minutes to end it. McGee was shot dead, eight of the band died with him, and 20 others wounded beyond recovery were left to die in peace, while Reeder's band led from the swamp two slightly wounded fellows who had been spared because the avengers hadn't the heart to complete the wholesale sentence of death.

Little People Surprised.

Little Miss Martha Codington, daughter of ex-Judge Codington, was intending to surprise her little brother Albert today by having a party of friends at the house, but last evening Mrs. Codington surprised both the little people by having the party last evening from 5 to 8. Little Misses Margaret Rose, Florence Smalley, Mabel Jenkins, Elsie and Nellie Giles, Aggie and Emma La Boyteaux, Florence Morrison, May Mulford, and Masters David Smalley and Harold Skaden, beside several other little people of the neighborhood were present. Pretty games were played and music and dainty refreshments were enjoyed by all.

The affair was in every way a great success, and no one enjoyed it better than the little host and hostess of the evening

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure.

REMOVAL.

Dr. Lighthill begs leave to give notice that he has removed to

NO. 132 CRESCENT AVE,

(a few doors from his former location) where he can be consulted on all chronic diseases of whatever name and nature.

Dr. Lighthill refers with pardonable pride to the success of his practice in Plainfield and submits below a few of the many testimonials which he has received from grateful patients. A mass of similar ones can be seen at his office.

AN ALMOST MIRACULOUS CURE.

The Statement of Mr. Edward Teel, Jr., of Dunellen, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

From a sense of duty I desire to call public attention to the almost miraculous cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in the case of my wife. For eleven years she had been afflicted with piles of an unusual severe and distressing character. She suffered every day of her life the most intense pain, attended with frequent and profuse hemorrhage. This state of things debilitated her entire system until she became a perfect wreck of her former self.

We made every effort to obtain a cure but they all resulted in bitter disappointment, although a number of physicians of excellent reputations for skill in that direction had treated her case. She grew worse and worse all the time, the pain became perfectly unbearable and I felt she could not bear the strain of her condition much longer. In this extremity, a friend of mine, Mr. W. E. Dilts, a resident of Roselle, N. J., a passenger conductor on the New Jersey Central told me that he had been similarly affected, and had been permanently cured by Dr. Lighthill, after other medical skill had failed. He assured me that the doctor would cure my wife, no matter how severe her case may be, and his prediction proved perfectly correct. In spite of her desperate condition, Dr. Lighthill, I am glad to say, has effected a complete and perfect cure in her case, and has given her new life.

Since the cure has been effected she has gained in health and strength and is so improved in appearance that her friends scarcely recognise her. They all consider her cure as almost miraculous, and Dr. Lighthill's praise is heard on every side. Our gratitude to Dr. Lighthill is unbounded and we only hope that other sufferers may be benefited by this publication.

EDWARD TEEL, JR.

A Flattering Testimonial from Colonel John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing with which I was afflicted.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly; they were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 132 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOMAS CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card From Mr. T. R VanZandt,

of Nos. 304 and 306 Park ave.,

Plainfield, N. J

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks, but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. E. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose flattering testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

—Bridget McCluskey an old offender, who was arrested yesterday for being drunk and disorderly, was given 60 days this morning to sober off, by Judge Coddington.

Mr. Hotchkiss of 30 Rockview avenue will be 67 years of age Feb. 28. He narrowly missed having a birthday only every four years, being born but a few hours before the leap-year 29th.

THE DEFINITION OF A KISS.

'Twas clearly meant for giving,
But 'tis something bought and sold,
And like coffee and potatoes
Is not so good when cold.

It oft appeases anger,
When words have failed to please,
Whether bestowed caressingly
Or given just to tease.

For a kiss will sometimes save one
From doing something worse,
And the lips that taste this sweetness,
Were seldom known to curse.

'Tis the oddest, strangest mixture.
This something made of naught,
Which is not seen or handled,
But yet is often caught.

Constant proximity to danger begets indifference to the situation. Familiarity with peril renders one unconscious of its imminence. Railway operators traverse a line of cars in rapid motion, but display no symptom of fear though the very wheels that whirl beneath them have ground out human life but an hour before. Those who live within the sound of Niagara are said to be unconscious of its roar.

Busier Than the Bee.

How doth the little busy ad
Improve each shining minute,
And gather dollars, dimes and cents
For the merchant who is in it.

Mrs. T. S. Hawkins, Chattanooga, Tenn., says: "Shiloh's Vitalizer saved my life; I consider it the best remedy for a debilitated system I ever used. For dyspepsia, liver or kidney trouble it excels; 75c. Sold by all druggists.

Shiloh's cure is sold on a guarantee. It cures incipient consumption; it is the best cough cure, only 1c a dose; 25, 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

Karl's Clover Root, the great blood purifier, gives freshness and clearness to the complexion and cures constipation; 25c 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

NOTICE.

To the Township Committee of the Township of Fanwood, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey:

The petition of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company respectfully represents that it desires to construct, operate and maintain a railroad, with one or more tracks and necessary turnouts, to be operated by electricity or other motive power except steam, and to erect necessary poles, conduits and wires, power plant and necessary buildings along and upon the following named streets, avenues, lanes, roads, highways and public places in the township of Fanwood, to-wit:

Beginning at the intersection of Park avenue and Mountain avenue in the township of Fanwood, and running thence southeasterly along Park avenue to its intersection with Midway avenue.

Beginning again at the intersection of Forrest avenue or road with Midway avenue and running thence southeasterly along said Forrest avenue or road, to its intersection with North avenue, near the Fanwood station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

And for that purpose prays that the permission of your honorable body may be granted to it, to construct, operate and maintain such railway, to be operated by electricity or other motive power, except steam, upon and along the above named streets, avenues, lanes, roads, highways and public places within the said township of Fanwood.

Attest: FRANK A. MAGOWAN, Pres.
J. H. Darrah, Secy. 2 2 14

NOTICE.

Whereas, It is reported that a rabid dog has been running at large through the village of Scotch Plains and other parts of Fanwood township, and

Whereas, It is common rumor that a number of dogs owned by various residents within the limits of said township have come in contact with and been bitten by said rabid dog, therefore, be it

Resolved, That all owners of dogs within said township of Fanwood be and are hereby urged strenuously to keep such dogs as may be owned by them tied, muzzled or in some safe manner confined for the space of 30 days, and all dogs known to be bitten be killed forthwith.

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.

So limited has been the supply of GENUINE ANTITOXINE heretofore, that sales have been made only on condition of immediate actual use. But amid so large a population as ours, an urgent demand for the new treatment may arise at any hour, night or day, Sunday or week-day. And delay in obtaining it might result fatally. I have therefore, with some difficulty, and at considerable expense, provided a complete outfit of Antitoxine Serum (with injector) and am prepared to meet such demand. The cost of an outfit (Serum of two powers and Koch injector) is now about $12 being only one-fourth of the earlier price. At present sales will be made only on the order of a practicing physician.

NEW YORK CITY MERCHANT.

How His Life Was Saved.

From the New York City Catholic News.

No one would think to look at Richard B. Brown, a commission merchant, of No. 306 Washington street, New York City, that for six weeks he had suffered in agony in his bed and that physicians had said it was impossible for him to regain his health.

But now he is back in his office, vigorous and hearty. He regards Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, as the savior of his life. The story Mr. Brown tells is remarkable.

"For several years," said Mr. Brown to a reporter the other day, "I suffered from inflammation and ulceration of the bladder, a most stubborn disease. My family physician was unable to relieve me. At the advice of friends I consulted specialists, and they all failed to do me any good. All this time I was growing worse. My capacity for work deserted me, and at last I was compelled to take to my bed.

"My mother-in-law had heard of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and she asked me to give it a trial. I had been confined to my bed for five weeks and I admit that I didn't think there was much chance of getting out of it. Well, I tried Favorite Remedy. There seemed to be a change that surprised me. In a week I was able to get out of bed and go around the house, and in a short time I recovered completely. Today I'm as well as ever and what's better yet I feel that I am permanently cured. I can work sixteen or eighteen hours a day now and not be broken up a bit. To Dr. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is all the credit due."

Favorite Remedy ranks, with the medical profession, as the most perfect of all blood and nerve medicines. It restores the liver liver to a healthy condition and cures the worse cases of constipation. It is a certain cure for all diseases peculiar to females, and affords great protection from attacks that originate in change of life. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, rheumatism, dyspepsia, all kidney, bladder and urinary diseases, gravel, diabetes and Bright's disease.

In this last disease it has cured where all else failed. Any druggist can supply it at one dollar a bottle.

The Great Brooklyn Strike Still on in the Courts—Presidents of Companies Busy Answering Charges—Some of the Accidents on the Trolley Lines Yesterday.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 2.—All the militia,—with the exception of a few for guard guard duty in the armories, have been sent home. Mayor Schieren said that a sufficient guard would be kept at the armories to protect property in case of a disturbance. He had not received any complaints, and added that 750 cars were in operation.

The strikers are making many legal fights and it keeps the presidents of the different companies busy answering charges.

United States Commissioner Morle held court in the federal building yesterday to take evidence on the charge of William H. Webber, an ex-motorman of the Atlantic avenue railroad, who charged President Norton, of that company, with illegally using the sign "U. S. Mail" on his cars, according to section 3,979 of the United States statutes. United States District Attorney Bennett appeared for Uncle Sam and ex-Judge Morris for the company. The specific charge was that on January 12 he made eight trips on trolley cars 81 and 64, which carried the sign but no mail.

Mr. Morris pleaded not guilty, and moved for a dismissal of the complaint on the ground that the company had a contract with the government which authorized the display of the signs, and that the company had to hold itself in readiness at any and all times to carry the mails.

President Norton said there were two cars, painted white, which ran regularly between the postoffice and 36th street and 5th avenue, but that the contract with the government was made in June, and was carrier out long before the construction of the mail cars in August. The Washington authorities had approved the system of signs. The practice was general throughout the country, and he did not think the second postmaster-general would commit such a blunder.

The statute was cited by United States District Attorney Bennett, and he claimed that if the postal authorities had authorized such a placing of signs on the cars it violated the law.

David J. Mackie, general manager of the painting department, testified to the fact that red flags were used previous to the sign for designating mail cars.

Postmaster A. T. Sullivan produced the contract between the postoffice department and the company, which was issued by Second Assistant Postmaster Bell, which called for the carrying of mails on the Atlantic avenue route six times a week and as much oftener as may be necessary. He said that every car on the route was under contract to carry the mails whenever called upon. Questions by Mr. Bennett developed the fact that a messenger was also employed to carry mails independent of the government contract. This is a private individual, Slavens, of Kansas City, who paid his fare, who had a contract with the government all over the country.

Then Mr. Bennett accused the company of coming into court and defending itself on false pretenses. Judge Morris objected to the use of the expression, but District Attorney Bennett refused to withdraw it.

Then Superintendent of Mails Lyons testified to the manner of transferring the mail to the regular cars.

Commissioner Morle said he would render a decision when he saw the original contract, which Postmaster Sullivan had written for, and the examination was adjourned until Monday.

Some of the happenings yesterday, which were caused by the green motormen, was the collision with a wagon at the corner of Sands and Adams street, the two occupants escaped with slight injuries. The horse was badly injured and the wagon was wrecked. A Fulton avenue car ran into a light wagon driven by Fireman John Brennan. He sustained a severe scalp wound and was removed to the hospital. The wagon was demolished. Sumner avenue car collided with a sand cart and damaged both horse and cart. Crosstown car struck a team of horses, but they escaped with slight damages. Waverly avenue car ran into a loaded truck and spilled the driver into the street. Driver was taken [illegible]spital with severe contusions [illegible] the wagon was overturned. Meeker avenue car ran into an open switch and threw the special policeman off. He received severe injuries that may prove fatal. The saddest accident of all was the killing of a little boy at the corner of Nostrand avenue and Butler street. The boy was on his way to school and was endeavoring to cross the street when the car knocked him down and crushed him under the fender. The motorman and conductor were arrested.

Rhode Island G. A. R. Elect Officers.

Newport, R. I., Feb. 2.—The State G. A. R., encampment yesterday voted to make all post commanders life members of the department. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Department commander, Daniel R. Ballou, of Providence; senior vice-commander, W. L. Stone, of Providence; junior vice-commander, Livingston Scott, of Woonsocket; medical director, Dr. G. B. Peck; chaplain, Rev. H. B. Cady; inspector general, George H. Woodley; chief mustering officer, George F. Meana.

Remarkable Longevity.

Newburgh, N. Y., Feb. 2.—Thomas Alexander has just died at Forest City, Pa., aged 93 years. Until this death there were living five brothers and five sisters remarkable for longevity, their combined ages being 813 years. The family belong in Little Britain, this county.

Italian Cities Shaken.

Rome, Feb. 2.—Slight earthquakes were felt in the city of Naples and in many towns of Naples and Avellino districts.

DEPUTY MARSHAL WOOD.

A Man Everybody Knows Tells of His Wonderful Cure by Dr. Greene's Nervura. The Strongest Evidence Possible That This Great Medicine Will Cure You.

DEPUTY MARSHAL, A. B. WOOD.

When such a widely-known public man as A. B. Wood, Deputy Marshal of West Indianapolis, Ind., makes a statement, the world knows that it is true—that he means every word of it. Mr. Wood resides at 91 Marion Ave., West Indianapolis, Ind. He has been cured by the great medicine, Dr. Greene,s Nervura blood and nerve remedy, from utter nervous prostration and exhaustion. He deems the cure most wonderful, and the medicine which cured him a most wonderful remedy. He is anxious, therefore, to tell the world of of his remarkable restoration to health, and to thus lead us others to health by the use of the same grand remedy.

"I had been troubled," said Mr. Wood, "for twenty years with nervousness, heart disease and gastric catarrh of the stomach, ending two years ago with complete prostration and was taken to my bed.

"I was under the care of two eminent physicians. Finally through a friend I was induced to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"After taking one bo'tle I began to improve, and after taking three bottles, my usual health was restored. I can now eat anything set before me. I have gained 30 pounds in flesh, now weighing 165 pounds.

"My wife is similarly diseased and is now taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, so far with beneficial results.

"Thus knowing by personal experience the great value of this grand medicine, I write this that other, who have similar troubles, may be induced to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and be cured."

People who are sick or ailing in any way make a serious mistake if they delay a moment longer to use this, without doubt, greatest medical discovery ever made. Even if you have been disappointed because other medicines failed, we promise this remedy will cure.

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. Dr. Greene of 35 West 14th St., New York City. He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone at any time free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Feb. 3. Comment by Rev. Walter J. Yates, A. M. Topic, The Golden Candlestick.

BIBLE READINGS.—Ex. xxv, 31-33; Heb. ix, 2; Rev. i, 12; iv, 5.

The candlestick of the Tabernacle was really a lampholder. The descriptions of it in Exodus, where Moses is commanded to make it, and again where he completes it, seem minute and clear, yet the most careful study of the passages leaves much doubt as to the appearance of the article. Very strange is the omission of all measurements when they are so carefully noted in the case of the other furnishings of the sanctuary. The form of the candelabrum seems to have been that of a central shaft with three branches on either side curved and rising to an equal height. The top of the shaft and of each branch was fitted for receiving a lamp, in which pure olive oil was to be burned with a wick. The seven lamps, with snuffers and bowls for the waste, and the whole stand were of fine gold. The weight was a talent and the value of the whole not far from $300,000. The language of Exodus indicates that it was made with the hammer and beaten out. The words "bowls, knops and flowers," which describe the pattern of the branches and shaft, are somewhat uncertain in meaning. Josephus speaks of them as "knops, lilies, pomegranates and bowls" and says there were 70 in all. He speaks of the seven lamps as being in imitation of the seven planets. He says the candlestick was cast and was hollow, and that it was placed obliquely so that the lamps faced to the east and south. The place where it stood was in the "holy place" on the south side, midway of the room, and opposite the table of showbread.

Every morning a priest cleaned the lamps, trimmed and filled them. Each evening they were lighted and burned till morning. Some think they burned perpetually night and day. In Revelation Christ is represented as walking amid the seven golden candlesticks, which seem to be used as symbols of the seven churches to which the messages are sent. That the golden candlestick was symbolical of some spiritual principle has been quite generally believed, but there has been great difference of opinion as to what it was intended to typify. Some have thought it represents the spirit of preaching, others the light of the law, while still others have seen in it reference to the spirit of the churches and witnesses. If the Shekinah fire on the "mercy seat" over the "ark of the covenant" behind the veil was the symbol of the divine presence; if the incense offered on the "golden altar" represented the prayers of God's people, and the "showbread" was a constant reminder that all food is given by God, then it would seem reasonable that the ever burning light was to serve as an object lesson of the presence of God with men as the "illumination," or light giver. It would then be typical of the work of the Holy Spirit, as the sacrificial lamb was a type of the divine Son.

It also suggests the duty of man as given in the words of Christ, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

What Became of It?

On the arch of Titus, in Rome, erected to commemorate his victories in the east, and especially that over the Jews, there is a marble sculpture in bas relief representing the triumph procession. Borne aloft upon the shoulders of men are the golden candlesticks and table of showbread from the temple in Jerusalem. Though timeworn and mutilated, the form of these articles can be made out fairly well. The base of the candlestick is probably not Jewish, as it has figures of dolphins upon it. This was not the article made under the direction of Moses, but one constructed after the return from Babylon when the temple was rebuilt. The ten made by Solomon for his temple were probably carried to Babylon and never returned. The original one made for the tabernacle in the wilderness may have been in the same building and shared the same fate, or it may have been lost before. No reference is made to it when the other furnishings of the tabernacle are gathered by David and Solomon to the central sanctuary of Zion. Perhaps its light is referred to in the story of Samuel called of God in the temple at Shiloh, but even this is uncertain. What became of it no one knows.

Lessons For the Quarter.

The subjects selected for the first quarter of 1895 have to do with the tabernacle and temple service. The general topic of "Christ In All," suggests the New Testament interpretation of Old Testament forms and rites and a present practical spiritual application of their symbolism. The whole question of the ancient Hebrew worship and its bearing on Christian faith and practice is of deepest interest, and there is no danger at the present of overestimating its importance. All Epworth Leagues should give careful study to the Scripture lessons, both in the literary and spiritual department. Never before has there been such results obtained from explorations of Biblical sites as at present, and every month adds some interesting and valuable discovery to throw new light upon the meaning of some passage of Scripture. The tabernacle and temple, as a whole, should be studied in its construction, history and modes of worship.

January to April.

General topic, "Christ In All;" subdivisions, the laver, the altar, the priest, the golden candlestick, the holy garments, the showbread, the ark of the covenant, the burnt offering, the peace offering, the sin offering, clean and unclean, the Nazarite.

Falsity.

It is more from carelessness about the truth, says Dr. Johnson, than from intentional lying, that there is so much falsehood in the world.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 3. Compent by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Advance, Endeavor!—Ex. xiv, 15-31; xv, 1, 2. (Christian Endeavor Day.)

Another anniversary of the Christian Endeavor movement! The splendid work of this God given movement has still gone forward, deepening and widening with each advancing year, and yet the end is not in sight. There is still work to be done "for Christ and the church," and the topic of "Advance, Endeavor!" is therefore appropriate just at this time. The command of God to the children of Israel at a critical moment in their march to Canaan was, "Go forward!" This is ever and always the command of God to his church and to his people, considered either as organizations or as individuals. The principle of the Christian life is advance. There is to be no standing still and no retreat until the heavenly Canaan is reached, and even then we shall advance.

Let us, then, as Endeavorers advance. Advance in Christian character, in missionary enterprise, in proportionate and systematic benevolence, in labors for good citizenship and in every good work that will advance the kingdom of Christ on the earth.

1. Advance, even in the face of difficulties. The Israelites are in a critical position. The Red sea is before them and the Egyptian army behind them, and there are murmuring and complaint within their own ranks. Yet God says unto Moses, "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." Opposition within! Opposition without! This is characteristic of the advancement of almost every good work. There are always some to oppose noble movements. The Christian Endeavor movement has not been an exception, though the opposition is rapidly dying out. But no work of God is to falter because of opposition. It is to go forward against all obstacles and difficulties.

2. Advance in the way God points out. God not only commanded the people to go forward, but opened up a way for them, and they followed it. God never commands us to do an impossibility. He will point out the way if we will only seek for it and follow it. God's way of meeting opposition is always the best way. Human methods usually increase the difficulties, but all obstacles vanish before divine methods. Amid all obstacles and difficulties to personal, society or church advancement let us search out the way by which God would have us meet them. That way will always be successful. The way that guides God's people will often confound his enemies, as the cloud was a light to the Israelites and darkness to the Egyptians.

3. Advance depending upon God. Moses and Israel did this. It was the salvation of the Lord. We should always depend upon God for success and not upon ourselves. "The Lord is my strength," sang Moses. "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon" should be our battlecry.

4. Advance with praise and gratitude to God (Ex. xv, 1, 2). When the victory had been won, Moses in joyful acclaim sang praises of gratitude to God. Thus should all Christian workers advance.

Bible Readings.—Jer. vii, 24, 32-34; Acts xxviii, 15; I Cor. ix, 24-27; Gal. vi, 9; Phil. i, 9-11; ii, 12, 13; iii, 13, 14; II Tim. iv, 7, 8; Heb. vi, 1, 2; xii, 1, 2; I Pet. ii, 1, 2; II Pet. iii, 18; Rev. ii, 7, 10.

Christian Endeavor Abroad.

Rev. F. E. Clark, president of the United society, has recently returned from a four months' trip to Europe. Though his health was much broken in the summer, he reports himself as quite well and strong once more, having had a few weeks of absolute rest in Switzerland and Italy. Of late, at the request of many Christian people in Germany and Scandinavia, he has been attending meetings in Berlin, Frankfort, Leipsic, Dresden, Copenhagen, Stockholm and Christiania in the interests of the Endeavor society. In all these countries he found much interest in the movement, especially in Germany, where already some societies have been formed since his visit, with a promise of many thousands in the years to come. He also attended special meetings in Great Britain for two weeks, addressing large gatherings of young people in different parts of England and Wales, Ireland and Scotland. In London 5,000 Endeavorers assembled in the Metropolitan tabernacle. While in Bristol no building large enough to accommodate the audience could be obtained, and two simultaneous meetings were held in the American style. So in Edinburgh, Dublin, Cardiff and other centers great throngs of Christian Endeavorers came together with their pastors and older friends.

Christian Endeavor Jottings.

The Brooklyn Navy Yard society recently observed its second anniversary. Nearly 200 sailors were present.

The Admiral Foote Floating society has been organized at the naval training station at Newport, R. I.

At the meeting of the national Christian Endeavor body at Leicester, England, the badge banner was unfurled for the first time on an English platform.

Christian Endeavor is making vigorous advances in Great Britain. One thousand and sixty-seven societies are now registered.

The Methodist New Connection, England, has greatly complimented its Endeavor societies by calling upon them to raise £1,000 for foreign missions as their centenary gift, this church being 100 years old in 1897.

Active steps have been taken to secure the amalgamation of the Christian Endeavor societies and the Epworth leagues in China, with every prospect of success.

It is expected that the 1895 New York state convention to be held in Brooklyn will be the largest yet held by the state union and may equal the international convention at St. Louis.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

CHAPTER VI.

BETTER THAN HE DESERVED.

Anna looked beseechingly at Frank. The time had come when, if he could render any service, he could exact a heavy price. Not that the girl was convinced of her lover's guilt. Far from it. But she was thoroughly frightened, and a frightened woman will take any help that offers.

Behind Mulligan's back Frank formed the word "wait" with his lips.

Maxwell was pale, but he showed little fear.

"Wouldn't it be a good idea to measure my rubbers, they're in the hall," he said.

"Excellent," said the detective; and he went to get them.

He measured them carefully.

"They 're not the ones," he said at last. "The others were wider. I congratulate you."

Anna had taken Maxwell's hand, and had thrown one of her arms over his shoulder. As the detective turned away to replace the rubbers in the hall, the girl drew down her lover's head, and kissed his lips.

Ames trembled with jealousy, but the next instant he recovered himself, and darted a sudden, meaning glance at Anna.

Then he took Maxwell's hand.

"I am heartily glad of this favorable turn in your affairs," he said. "It has been an awful strain upon us all. For my part I am quite worn out. I am going home. Good night. And good night to you, Mr. Mulligan."

The detective had just reentered the room. Anna accompanied Frank into the hall.

"Keep them here half an hour, at all hazards; and remember your promise," he whispered. "I tell you the man's lost unless I save him."

He left the house. Anna, terribly agitated by his last words, returned to the parlor, and tried to carry out his instructions. But for some reason which she could not understand, the detective was determined to thwart her plans. He succeeded in getting Maxwell away from the house some minutes within the time which Frank had set.

They went to the doctor's house. No one lived there but Maxwell and an old woman who acted as his housekeeper. The detective insisted upon going in. He said that he had urgent matters to discuss which he had not dared to mention before Anna.

They entered together. There was only a dim light in the hall, but it was enough to reveal to the keen eyes of the detective the form of Frank Ames, who seemed to have been descending the stairs just as they came in, and also endeavored to avoid being seen by darting into the unlighted parlor.

The detective followed him, striking a match as he did so. He lighted the lamps on the table and turned to Ames.

"Good evening again, Mr. Ames," he said, cheerfully. "I didn't expect to see you so soon."

"I came to have a talk with Robert," responded Ames; "and I'll tell you frankly that I didn't want you to know anything about it."

"Sorry to disappoint you, Mr. Ames," Mulligan replied, "and still more sorry to ask embarrassing questions. What have you got under your overcoat?"

"The remainder of my clothing and most of my body," rejoined Ames; "but I don't know that it's any of your business."

With a movement as quick as a flash, and doubly surprising because of the man's slow and somewhat indolent manner, the detective sprang upon Ames and wrested his overcoat open.

A pair of rubbers fell to the floor. Mulligan seized them and measured them with the minutest care.

"Where did you get these?" he demanded.

Ames sank into a chair. He rolled his eyes appealingly toward Maxwell, who said not a word. He seemed to be stricken dumb.

"It's all over, Bob," groaned Ames. "I did my best for you for her sake."

"Pretty shrewd work, Mr. Ames, but very dangerous," said the detective. "It's a crime, you know. You guessed he'd have the right pair of rubbers in his house and you came to get them. Very good; where are they?"

"In a closet in his bedroom upstairs."

"Well, this completes the case. I arrest you, Robert Maxwell, for the murder of Charlotte Warren."

Ten minutes later, Frank Ames paused for a moment before the house of Rev. Eliot Warren. The lower part of the house was dark, but there was a light in a window of the second story, and, as he looked, a shadow passed across the curtain.

"WHAT HAVE YOU GOT UNDER YOUR COAT?"

"Shall I win her?" he murmured. "Is it possible that my life is to be worth something after all?"

It couldn't have been a very happy life to look back upon, for he shuddered, as he turned away.

At ten o'clock the next morning, Frank Ames received a message from Dr. Maxwell, earnestly requesting him to come to the doctor's house. He lost no time in complying. The physician and the detective sat together. Both were smoking, and both very much at their ease. There was little to indicate that they were prisoner and warden, except the extremely incongruous addition of a large revolver to the articles of luxury with which a little smoking-table at the detective's right hand was laden.

"Dr. Maxwell wished to speak to you," Mulligan said, "or rather he wishes me to do so. You have done the best you could to stave off the inevitable, and you have other claims which entitle you to be the first one to hear the extraordinary history of this crime which will now be laid before you. In the first place, your brother's body has been found again."

"Where is it?"

"In the back room of Capt. Henry Thompson's undertaking shop where it was taken by the captain at my direction last night. You see I was strictly within the facts when I said that I did not remove it.

"Here is another fact: Of course it seemed probable when the body was found in this town, that it had reached here in that coffin, but that is not true. Medical examination has shown that Edward Ames has not been dead more than forty-eight hours.

"Fact No. 3—The mysterious person who conveyed the body to the old Maxwell house has been found, and Dr. Maxwell is not the man. The man's name was Ames."

"What!"

"Edward Ames. In short, he walked there. Those rubbers were his. There is no possible question about it. The prints of nails in his shoes are to be discerned on the inside of the rubbers. Now how did this extraordinary thing happen? Why there can't be two explanations. When a dying man goes to a doctor's house why does he do it? Because he knows that he'll die if he doesn't get treatment. You see Ned Ames didn't know that Dr. Maxwell had moved. He went there to throw himself on the doctor's mercy, and ask his help. I'd like to see you find any other explanation.

"Perhaps you'll say that he might have been simply seeking shelter. That won't answer. He had shelter, and I know it. I worked Horace Riddle's tip down to that. He saw Eddie in the woods. Now, a man can't live outdoors in Maine at this season of the year. Knowing that obvious fact, I asked myself, and also several other people who were better informed, what shelter there was in those woods. And I learned about that hut of spruce logs which you and your brother built so long ago, but built so well that it's weather-proof yet.

"I went there and found traces of Eddie, but I didn't find him. Then I came back to town, and on my way—it was then evening, for I had waited some time in the hut—I happened to see you coming out of the old Maxwell house. Then I went in, and you know what I found. I found, in the first place, that you'd entered by an upstairs window, which was wholly unnecessary, for the lock of the front door had been picked. By whom? Why, a child could answer that question. Your brother was an adept at picking locks.

"Why did he do it? Because he'd rung the bell and failed to find anybody. He must have supposed that Dr. Maxwell was out. He couldn't wait out there in the snow. It was then ten o'clock of Thursday night. I know that by the condition of his footprint in the substratum which was then forming into ice. He preferred to wait for the doctor inside. He picked the lock; got into the hall; fell on the floor and died there.

"You see he'd been sick of diphtheria in Boston. He was getting a little the best of it when he had to skip. The exertion and exposure were too much for him. He was dying in that hut in the woods and he knew it.

"Now, then, if he died in the hall, as the marks in the dust show me, how did his body get into the cellar? Why you carried it there. Nobody else could have done it. Nobody else had any motive. Your motive was to throw suspicion on Dr. Maxwell. How did you know that Eddie was in that house? Why, he must have left a message in some secret cranny of that old log hut. You went there. The snow tells me that.

"Now we've cleared your brother's case all up. He didn't murder the girl because he was too sick to raise his hand against her.

"Don't you dare to move or open your mouth, Frank Ames, till I get through with you. I'm a good, quick shot, and you're fair game.

"It was a slick trick, taking his rubbers off, and slicker still to bring them here, and wait for us to catch you with them. Now, of course all this clears Dr. Maxwell, and if it does what becomes of you? Why, you're my prisoner, that's all. Now perhaps you wonder why I arrested the doctor last night. Well, I did it so that you'd keep quiet and give me a little more time.

"By the way, I've had some slight tips from Boston this morning, and I made up my mind who was the head of the thieves' gang to which your brother belonged. You were the man. I've also found out where that poor girl lived in Boston; and a man who looked very much like you used to visit her.

"Knowing all these things, it is easy enough to see what happened to her down here. But what did she come here for? That's the only point that isn't clear. Of course I can guess at it, but I'd like cold facts, and for that reason I'll make a bargain with you. You'll remember the Lynde street job in Boston. Well, they hang folks in Massachusetts and they don't in Maine. Tou tell me all about this case, and I give you my word of honor that I'll let you be tried here, instead of taking you back. Is it a bargain?"

Frank Ames' white lips moved, but no words came from them.

"Doctor," said the detective, "have you a drop of brandy? It'll do him good."

The wretch swallowed the spirits greedily and revived somewhat.

"It is a bargain," he said, "though I deny that Lynde street job. But I'm done up. There is no hope for me, and I might as well speak out, for at least I wish to deny that I meant to murder that poor girl.

"You are right in all that you have said. It was I to whom she fled. She thought it was simply a secret marriage. I deceived her by the usual stories. I had another wife living and Charlotte found it out too late. She was afraid to come home then. Let me pass over all that. Her story is too common, I suppose. Of course I wearied of her, but I would have provided for her always, and would have kept her near me, if I had not learned to love her sister. That was two years ago, and from that moment I schemed to be rid of Charlotte.

"She was wholly under my influence. I intended to use her to break Maxwell's engagement with Anna. My plan was to have Charlotte come home and refuse to tell her story. Then I would have thrown the blame on Maxwell.

"It suited my convenience to bring her here when I sprung that plot to save my brother from arrest. Charlotte came by means which I provided. She went to her father's house, and looked in upon him through the window. She could not bear to face him. She returned to me at my father's house. I ferred what she would do, and so I drugged my father lest he should see her.

"When she came I took her to the room where lay the coffin. I had removed my father in his stupor to another room. Charlotte and I quarreled. I tried to force her to carry out her intention of going to her father, and somehow—I don't know how—I let her see the real secret, that I loved Anna.

"Her wrath was terrible. In an instant she would have alarmed the house. I sprang upon her to stifle her screams—for I knew that she would scream in a second. She fell with my weight against her, and her head struck one of the heavy metal handles of the coffin. I had no idea that she was much hurt. My horror and remorse were terrible when I found that she was dead.

"Then the scheme of hiding the body came to me. I wrenched open the coffin; I took out the paper books with which it was weighted and burned them in the fire; I put her body in and closed the coffin as best I could. That is the whole story. Do you believe me?"

"I do," said Mulligan, "and I will keep my word. My curiosity, I think, has saved your neck. Is there anything more, Dr. Maxwell?"

"Nothing. May I go to Anna now? I must have her help in breaking the news to this wretched creature's parents."

"My mother is beyond knowing it, thank God," said Ames. "As for my father, he is a man of iron. He can bear anything."

He spoke so calmly that even the experienced detective was deceived, and believed that this was the confession of a despairing and beaten man.

But Frank Ames was not that kind of a man, by any means. He was watching his chance. As Maxwell turned to leave the room the detective's attention was distracted for a moment. It was time enough for the desperate criminal.

In a flash he had leaped upon Mulligan, and had got his hands upon the revolver. There was a struggle, violent, but so brief that before Maxwell could interfere it was over. Ames had secured possession of the revolver; he had pulled the trigger intending to send a bullet through his adversary's heart. But the detective's quickness saved him. He struck up the barrel of his pistol. The weapon was discharged in an almost perpendicular position, and the bullet, striking the murderer under the chin, passed entirely through his head. He was dead before his body touched the floor.

"Which was better than he deserved," observed Detective Mulligan, in relating this adventure to the present writer

Seeing the World at the World's Expense.

Fred Casper of East Front street hospitably entertained Fred Miller and his dog Guess, Saturday. Mr. Miller started in 1893 on a walk for the world's championship of long-distance pedestrianism. His route is San Francisco to New York, to New Orleans, to New York, to Jacksonville, to New York. He has thus far covered 6,200 miles without a cent. Guess has trotted cheerily with him constantly. They reached Plainfield at 3 p. m. Saturday, over the snow-covered road, cold and wet and hungry. Mr. Casper treated them right, and Mr. Miller and Guess went on their way rejoicing, leaving a note of thanks for Mr. Casper at the office of The Daily Press.

Cyclers to Broil and Eat.

The Elizabeth Wheelmen are arranging to give a beefsteak broil next week Tuesday night at their club-house on East Broad street. The committee who have the affair in charge are hard at work, and promise to provide a pleasant entertainment to their guests as well as a delicious supper.

It is the intention of the committee to provide vocal and instrumental music, and there will be speeches and other kinds of excellent divertisement that will accompany the serving of delicious steaks.

Invitations will be sent to representatives of all Plainfield clubs.

Endeavorers Advancing.

The Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational Church held special Christian Endeavor Day exercises last evening. Miss Florence G. Hawkins, secretary of the local union, who led the meeting, made a very interesting and practical address on the topic, "Advance, Endeavor!" During the meeting a violin solo was artistically rendered by Miss Nella Whiton, accompanied by her sister, Miss Mary Whiton, on the piano. The service was much enjoyed by all.

Sheridan Gets a Month.

Philip Sheridan, who had pleaded guilty of an assault upon the Italian shoemaker on Liberty street, was sentenced Saturday in Elizabeth to the county jail for thirty days.

—J. M. Harper, the stationer, of 411 Park avenue, has a complete stock of valentines.

The experience of Geo. A. Apgar, of German Valley, N. J., is well worth remembering. He was troubled with chronic diarrhoea and doctored for five months and was treated by four different doctors without benefit. He then began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, of which one small bottle effected a complete cure. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. THE BLIND HYMN WRITER.

FANNY J. CROSBY HAPPY IN HER AFFLICTION.

She Talks to Three Large Plainfield Audiences of Herself, and of Their Christian Work.

In almost every home throughout the length and breadth of this land Fanny J. Crosby, the blind hymn writer, is loved for her songs, and Plainfield was especially favored in having her present yesterday at several services.

She addressed the Sunday-school of the Congregational Church in the afternoon, and later appeared at the meeting of the Y. M. C. A., where for the first time the handsome large hall was used. The music was a feature of the occasion. A double quartette rendered several pretty selections, all by the gifted blind author. S. W. Waldron of New York and Joseph Moon sang duets, with autoharp accompaniment by Mr. Waldron. Miss Crosby was then introduced, and for nearly one hour her audience listened with deep interest to the spiritual words of this wonderful woman. Many touching incidents were related by her in connection with her work, and the large audience was deeply affected. She said that although blind from childhood she thought it no privation, as the Lord had quickened her faculties and had been so precious to her in many other ways.

After the service many present took the opportunity to meet her, and all found her to be cheerful and happy.

In the evening she was present at the Trinity Reformed Church. Long before the hour of service the edifice was thronged, and when the service began the seats were filled and many had to stand. Here, as well as at the afternoon service, the music was a feature, and the walls of the sanctuary fairly rang with the notes of the whole-souled singing of choir and congregation. All of the hymns were of Miss Crosby's composition.

President Fred Smith of the Christian Endeavor society stated the object of the service to be the celebration of Christian Endeavor Day, and spoke particularly of the home society, of its growth and work, and congratulated all on the success attending their efforts.

He spoke of the honor of having present the author of so many favorite hymns which the society loved so much. He then announced the hymn "Hide me, O my Saviour, Hide me", which was sung by the entire congregation with much spirit and feeling.

The Scripture lesson and prayer were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, after which a very pretty duet, "Cast thy burden on the Lord", was sung by Mr. Waldron and Joseph Moon, with autoharp accompaniment.

After the offertory, "Hark, Hark, My Soul", by the choir, the pastor introduced Miss Crosby, who, he said, needed no introduction as she was known in so many homes all over the country.

She said in part: "Today has been one of the happiest for me, the Lord has been so precious and near to me, and I have enjoyed His presence so much.

"I am pleased to be present with you on this occasion, and to enjoy with you this celebration of Christian Endeavor Day.

"Fourteen years ago tonight this society was launched forth, and the good that has been done is of incalculable value. Previous to its organization something was needed between the church and the Sunday-school, and the Christian Endeavor society was just the thing.

"Dear Father Clark, as we call him, little knew of the vast amount of good this Christian Endeavor army would accomplish. We should go on in this glorious work, strive for larger results, and never be discouraged."

She told how she was led to write the hymn "All the Way My Saviour Leads Me". She was in her office in New York one warm day, and was inclined to worry and be fretful, when a person walked in and out of the goodness of his heart placed a $5 bill in her hand as a tribute to Christianity. The words which are so well known were then written, and, coming from the heart, meant so much to her.

She congratulated the Christian Endeavor societies of Plainfield, and hoped they would make the coming year a far better one than that just ended, though she knew that much good had been done in the past.

For one hour Miss Crosby held the closest attention of all. At the close of her remarks President Smith offered prayer, and after the singing of the hymn "Jesus My All" the pastor pronounced the benediction.

Many introduced themselves to Miss Crosby at the close, and were pleased with the bright and happy spirit of the hymn-writer, expressed in her cordial greetings.

AN ORCHID TEA.

Charming Event at the Home of Councilman Ginna.

About 125 of Miss Ginna's friends assembled Saturday afternoon at the spacious family home, 1107 Watchung avenue, at an orchid tea given in honor of the fair hostess's friend, Miss Hutton of Baltimore. The house was gorgeously decorated with rare and beautiful orchids from the celebrated private conservatories of Stephen A. Ginna, father of the hostess. A novel and strikingly artistic effect was produced on the banquet table by a huge pyramid of orchids in the centre, at the apex of which was a single pale-blue flower of indescribably delicate tracery, which was so rare and perfect as to be well nigh priceless, so seldom does this special variety blossom. The harmony of the exquisite table-setting was enhanced by massive lavender-trimmed candelabra.

Plainfield Toughs Done Up.

The 6:05 New York express from Philadelphia yesterday morning brought from Bound Brook a party of Plainfield toughs who had been carousing with others of their kind at a low Bound Brook resort, and had just liquor enough to be noisy when they took the train. Coming through from the West was a theatrical troupe, and the Plainfield hoodlums began to make sport by insulting several women belonging to this company.

Then followed a little one-act drama not down on the playbills, in which the male members of the company took the part of stars. Several of the Plainfield gang saw "stars" several times in the next few seconds. The gang was most beautifully "done" and would have got much more if the train had not stopped and given them a chance to sneak off. "Two lovely black eyes" and several sore faces, as well as some bloody noses, resulted for the toughs, and they deserved more than they got. Their names are known and will be used should another such disgraceful scene occur.

Yellow and Green Reception.

The Misses Bush of West Seventh street gave a reception Saturday from 4 to 7. The rooms were artistically decorated in yellow and green. Miss Bedford and Miss Rockwell of New York presided at the table, and were assisted by Miss Bowers, Miss Covert, Miss Adele Hunter, Miss Josie Petrie and Miss Woodward of New York.

In spite of the inclemency of the weather over one hundred guests filled the parlors, including some from New York, Brooklyn and New Brunswick. Max Wiertz superbly catered.

Adds to Plainfield's Chances.

Plainfield may win the championship of the Elizabeth Journal Bowling League this season without a series with the Y. M. C. L. A. They have been tied with that club, but Cranford claims a forfeit from the Y. M. C. L. A. which puts the Elizabeth boys one game behind Plainfield. The Y. M. C. L. A. did not appear to roll the scheduled game on the Cranford alleys, so the Cranford boys rolled the regulation 10 frames without opposition. The rule is: "Match games shall be called at eight o'clock. Should either club fail to produce its men thirty minutes thereafter, the captain of the team present may claim the game."

The Loss of the Elbe.

Grace M. E. Church entered on the third week of evangelistic services last night with the largest audience yet in attendance. Mr. Randolph preached a stirring sermon, taking the loss of the Elbe as his subject. He warned the unconverted not to depend on human appliances for their eternal salvation nor past experiences. He exhorted them to come to the Saviour without delay and trust simply in Him. He announced that services will be held every night this week except Saturday night.

Dr. C. S. Ryman, the presiding elder, preached yesterday morning, and the Communion was celebrated.

Dr. Morgan's Visit.

Rev. Brockholst Morgan, general agent of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, assisted at the services of the Church of the Redeemer Sunday morning. He preached from the text found in the 9th and 10th verses of the 18th chapter of Acts, and gave an interesting account of the work of the society among the destitute, outcast and suffering population of the great city. A large congregation was present, and a generous contribution in aid of his work was taken up at the close of his address.

Perils of Mountain Travel.

Stonewall Jackson, a horse-trader of Martinsville, drove off the river bank into the Passaic river, near the home of Thos. Terrill, Wednesday night. His horse was drowned, and the wagon wrecked, but Jackson escaped.

Receiving Pasteur Treatment.

Chas. F. Carter and John Kelmeer, victims of the Scotch Plains mad dog, have been admitted to Pasteur Institute for treatment. The brain of the dog is being examined there.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. John Flannery Get Married Over Again as They Were 50 Years Ago.

Mr. and Mrs. John Flannery of Scotch Plains celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday evening, by inviting a number of their friends to witness their re-marriage. Rev. Dr. Parks performed the ceremony, and the answers of both were given as clear and happy as they were 50 years ago. A number of handsome presents were given to the bride and groom. Among those present were: Mr and Mrs Oliver, Mrs Riley and daughter, Mrs Dobbins and daughters of Kearney, J E Flannery, Frank Flannery and Miss Herring of Plainfield, Mr and Mrs E L Hand, Mr and Mrs Noble, Rev J H Parks, W B Noble, George Johnston, Harry Flannery, Miss Grace Robison, Miss Nellie Flannery, and others of Scotch Plains.

All left near midnight with best wishes for the happy couple, and that they might live to celebrate many more anniversaries.

Smallest Pony in the World.

One of the most gorgeously costumed and magnificently appointed street parades ever attempted was given by George Thatcher & Carroll Johnson's Minstrels today in Plainfield and Westfield. Their performance this evening in Music Hall will fulfil all promises which the parade suggested, the management laying particular stress on the strength, novelty and refinement of the performance, and the ability, merit and excellence of every individual member of the company.

The parade included, as will the performance tonight, the great pony circus, in which 10 of the most beautiful specimens of horseflesh in the world appeared. The young people took great delight in seeing "Madison Square", the smallest horse in the world, weighing only 45 pounds, and but 27 inches in height.

Y. M. C. A. Tomorrow.

The programme to be presented at the new hall of the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow evening will be one of great merit and exceeding interest. The Verdi Ladies Quartette of Brooklyn is a first-class musical organization, the members having well-trained voices and singing in perfect harmony. The quartette is received with great favor wherever it sings. Miss Addie Parker Jackson is too well known in our city to need particular mention. Suffice it to say that her readings are very delightful indeed.

Getting Ready for Wheeling.

A meeting of the wheeling clubs of the county has been called for the evening of Feb. 18, to be held in the Elizabeth Daily Journal office. The time, course and arrangements for the Journal trophy ten-mile team road race will be the subjects offered for the consideration of the clubs, and it is desired that every club in the county be represented.

Every wheeling club in the county being eligible to compete in the race is invited to send a representative to the meeting.

Excellent Scholarship.

The following pupils of the Mt. Pleasant school reached the standard of excellence during the second division of the school year:

Florence DeForeest.
Sadie Terry.
Helen DeForeest.
Hattie VanNest.
Mamie Applegate.
Edith Rouch.
Sadie McClennan.

Benefit for Wash's Widow.

A benefit game of base-ball is being arranged by Ted Coyne of Elizabeth for the widow and children of Washington Berriman. Those interested in the affair are T. H. Keller of Plainfield, President J. E. Sullivan of the N. J. A. C., and Messrs. Codding, Whalen and Mack.

The game will be played in Elizabeth, and many Brooklyn association players will give their services for the benefit.

Pigeon Shots Matched.

Articles of agreement have been signed in Elizabeth in the presence of a number of Elizabeth and Plainfield sports for a match between Neaf Apgar of this city and Aaron Woodruff of Elizabeth for $125 a side, winner to take all, best in 100 birds, match to be pulled off Tuesday, Feb. 26, at Jack Bennet's traps on the Fanwood road.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE

—Harry Jenkins left Edsall's employ Saturday evening.

—Valentines to suit every taste are supplied at Rand's.

—Westfield is still considering its branch of the trolley trunk line franchise.

—A not uncommon sight yesterday was an occasional cycler spinning over the snow.

—This is pension day, and this morning Justice Nash was very busy making out papers.

—The Ladies Aid Society of Hope Chapel hold their weekly meeting Wednesday afternoon at 2:30.

—The thermometer registered 4 degrees below zero at 6 a. m. Sunday, the coldest thus far this season.

—Mrs. T. J. Gillies has rented her store on Madison avenue to the West Front street Chinese laundryman.

—VanBuren & Timpson's handsome new sign was put in position on top of their building Saturday night.

—The attendance at the Communion service in the First Baptist Church yesterday morning was very large.

—Grand Dictator Schierf and staff will install the recently-elected officers of Senate Lodge next Thursday evening.

—F. E. Richards and a friend went Saturday night to New Brunswick on a pleasure trip behind Frank Hedden's highstepper, "Dandy."

—A meeting of the Young Ladies Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2, in the lecture room.

—Ivanhoe Council, A. L. of H., will have an important meeting and supper tomorrow night at 8:15. Members are urged to bring fair company.

—Woolston & Buckle are to have elegant gold, silver and pearl signs on the windows of their North avenue stores. The two Ikies are doing the work.

—The 2:08 west bound passenger train, in charge of Conductor Annese and Engineer Hartsell, came in yesterday minus her pilot and head light, having lost them in a collision with a freight.

—A few of the suits ordered by members of the Sons of Veterans arrived Saturday, and the wearers are very well pleased with them. There will probably be another order sent off this week.

—The business men's class at the Y. M. C. A. is now fairly started, and good work is being done. The baths will be finished this week, and better satisfaction will then be given in the work.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational Church will hold a sociable next Friday evening in the church parlors, to which the congregation is invited. An interesting programme is in preparation.

—The sociable which was to have been held tonight in the East Third Street Mission has been postponed to Feb. 12, when P. Ludwig Conde and orchestra will be present. There will be several other features.

—The Local Branch of the New Jersey Building Loan and Investment Company will meet for the election of officers and other business tomorrow evening, Feb. 5, at 8, in Republican Association Hall, 120 East Front street.

—Grocer Rockfellow finds his business growing so greatly that he is trying to secure the rear portion of the adjoining store to give him more space. He purposes cutting an archway in the partition, and making his store L-shaped.

—The Plainfield Common Council meets tonight. The liquor-license applications will be received, the Mayor's police nominations submitted, and the trolley-road extensions considered, in addition to much other business.

—Saturday evening at 6:30 a cutter struck the dangerous ridge in the centre of West Ninth street left by the sewer company near Prospect avenue, and the driver was spilled out on the frozen ground while the horse started at a lively pace down Ninth street chased by the former occupant of the cutter. He was caught without accident several blocks down the street.

Up in the World.

The cat which Telephone Inspector Herbert Chamberlain rescued from the top of an electric-light pole some weeks ago, has again taken refuge at the top of a pole on South Second street near Plainfield avenue. A dog chased it there Friday night, and up to this afternoon it was still huddled on one of the crossbars. The cat is owned by Peter Linzer.

BANKERS HOARD GOLD.

Omaha Banks Have $3,000,000 To Be Paid on Specific Demand.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 4.—It has developed that Omaha banks are hoarding gold closer than ever. The local banks hve nearly $3,000,000 and paying it out only on specific demand. Henry W. Yates, president of the Nebraska National bank, when asked about it, said: "I do not know of any organized intention of Omaha bankers thus to force a premium on gold. In fact, the people seem to prefer currency to coin when checks are honored.

"There is more gold now in the west than in the east. The agitation for free silver will certainly have a tendency to increase the value of gold and put it at a premium."

Another rumor is to the effect that the Omaha banks are hoarding their gold in order to get a good-sized pile of it to send to the treasury in exchange for currency and thus protect the gold reserve in a manner similar to that performed by the Denver bankers two years ago.

A SQUIRE IN DANGER.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., Feb. 4.—Squire Robbins, justice of the peace in Union township, is in danger of white-capping for almost incredible cruelty to his children. A few days ago he left his two little children alone without food or fuel, telling them he was going to Cole's Corners and would soon return.

He did not, and Albert Brush, a farmer, has just found the children in a pitiable condition. They were nearly dead from starvation and cold, and only prompt medical attention saved them. The youngsters told a horrible story of their suffering.

The only food they had in four days, says the oldest, a boy of 6, was a dead rat that the cat brought into the house. They tore the rat to pieces and ate the fragments raw.

The indignation in the neighborhood is very bitter, and white-capping is the best the squire may expect if he returns.

THE CZAR ABSOLUTE.

His Speech Creates a Bad Impression in Liberal Circles.

London, Feb. 4.—The Berlin correspondent of the Daily News says:

"Advices from St. Petersburg show that the czar's peech declaring himself absolute has made a bad impression and has caused great excitement in liberal circles. Eleven arrests were made yesterday. Copies of hand bills were found in St. Petersburg university recalling the fact that March 1 will be the anniversary of the murder of Alexander II."

The Daily News correspondent in Vienna learns that the students of St. Petersburg university were about to send a petition to the czar, but were warned not to do so. The promoters of the plan, he says, are the eleven men under arrest.

THE WHITEWAY CABINET.

Sir William Unable To Satisfy Those Clamoring for Office.

St. Johns, N. F., Feb. 4.—The new Whiteway cabinet has not yet been formed, the premier being unable to arrange the positions to satisfy those clamoring for office. The difficulties have been increased by the knowledge among these that they must face reelection within the next few months. The confederation question is also a stumbling block. St. Johns is emphatically against any union and will defeat any confederate nominees. It is reported on good authority that the Whitewayites are willing to enact a bill recognizing the rights of the French fishermen along the treaty coast if in return they are guaranteed a loan from the imperial government.

Sanitary Manufacturers Dissolve.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 4.—The announcement is made that the Sanitary Ware Manufacturers' association of the United States has been dissolved. The association was composed of all the leading producers of sanitary earthenware and was organized five years ago to fix and maintain a scale of prices for sanitary ware; to limit the sale of goods to jobbers, and to control the trade generally.

Buried the Marshal of France.

Paris, Feb. 4.—All military and official Paris attended the funeral of Francois Certain Canrobert, the last marshal of France. The ceremonies were the same as at the state funeral of Marshal McMahon, almost a year and a half ago, but the crowds in the streets were smaller and the signs of mourning less numerous among the people.

Drowned with Their Plunder.

London, Feb. 4.—The Daily News correspondent in Vienna says that the three Guttman brothers of Kaschau, Hungary, who absconded with 300,000 florins, obtained false passports and sailed on the steamer Elbe as Moritz, Franz and Eduard Moscowitz. Their sister, who fled with them, he says, gave her name as Esther Goldner.

Played in Confidence.

Norwalk, Conn., Feb. 4.—George E. Hawkins, of Setauket, L. I., played a confidence game on Theodore Olsen, a shoe dealer, J. P. Frances, a clothing merchant, and A. Dicerman & Son, dry-goods dealers. Hawkins secured nearly $100 in cash and goods. He was captured by Sheriff Toner and will be arraigned to-day.

Lost a Life and Fortune.

Berlin, Feb. 4.—The German American Hahn, who went down with the steamship Elbe, had come to Berlin to secure a fortune recently bequeathed him. The amount is said to be 500,000 marks. He had taken most of the necessary legal steps and was returning to America to obtain the final affidavit.

Sanford's Deficit $14,972.

Concord, Mass., Feb. 4.—The selectmen of Concord, the town auditor, a representative of Sanford's bondsmen and Prescott Keyes held a meeting yesterday and announced Sanford's deficit, as shown on the tax books, as $14,972.42.

Secretary of War Visiting.

Niagara Fall, N. Y., Feb. 4.—Secretary of War Daniel S. Lamont accompanied by his family and private secretary, John Seager and Mrs. Seager, spent yesterday here visiting friends.

KEEP WATCH ON ALBANY

Morton Rejects Bills for Typographical Errors.

Will Give Hearing to the New York City Tenement House Bill—May Regulate the Price of Electric Light in New York and Brooklyn. Lexow Committee and the Seventy.

Albany, Feb. 4.—Much important legislation will be up for consideration in the legislature this week. Most of the work, however, will be done in the committees. More care is taken in the preperation of bills than at any other session, as Gov. Morton insists on returning bills, even for slight typographical errors.

The New York city power of removal bill, which has passed the assembly will come up for final passage in the senate this week. The bill, as it stands, gives the mayor six months in which to make removals, and confines the power of removal to an elected mayor.

May Pass Bills.

Bills providing free passes for state and municipal officials will come up in both houses. It is not expected they will receive favorable action. It is not unlikely that a bill will be introduced in the senate prohibiting railroads issuing passes to any persons other than their employes.

The anti-sparring bill will come up on third reading in the assembly.

Hearings will be given before the assembly cities committee to-morrow afternoon on Mr. Miles' bill, incorporating the New York Zoological society; Mr. Brush's, providing for eight local inferior courts in Brooklyn and Mr. Lawson's, New York city dock department re-organization bill.

The senate cities committee will give hearings to-morrow afternoon on the New York tenement house bills, and on Senator Owens' bill, regulating the price of electric light in New York and Brooklyn.

The ways and means committee will give a hearing to-morrow afternoon on the capitol appropriation bill.

On Wednesday afternoon the Lexow committee will give a further hearing to the committee of seventy and other reform organizations of New York city on the New York city police bills. On the same afternoon there will be a joint hearing before the judiciary committees of the two houses on the ballot reform bills.

Mr. Friday's bill, providing for the licensing of motormen and the appointment of electrical examiners, will have committee Thursday.

a hearing before the assembly cities

Will Govern the Speed.

On Wednesday there will be a hearing before the assembly railroads committee, on Assemblyman Wieman's bill, prohibiting cars on electric railroads in New York, Brooklyn and Buffalo, from being operated at a speed greater than six miles an hour.

Senator Coffey's bill fixing the price of gas in Brooklyn at $1 per 1,000 feet will have a hearing before the senate committee of miscellaneous corporations some day during the week.

There will be a hearing before the committee of the two houses to-morrow afternoon on telephone bills.

On Thursday afternoon there will be a hearing before the senate railroad committee on the Buffalo grade crossing law amendments of Senator Persons.

Jail Birds Captured.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 4.—In response to a telegram from Chief of Police Anderson, Captain Freeburger and Detectives Hussey and Ward, came here from Baltimore with warrants for William Hall and Charles Johnson, who after terrorizing part of Cumberland county and throwing this city into excitement, were landed in prison, for robbing the house of Mr. Watts, at Pikeville, Mr., of jewelry on December 22. Hall is also said to be wanted for breaking out of the Westminster jail and for shooting a policeman near that town when under arrest for vagrancy. The men are also charged with a number of robberies committed in Baltimore and Carroll counties, Maryland. They will likely be taken to Baltimore to-day.

A Deserter Wanted.

Buffalo, Feb. 4.—George W. Fane, a private in Company A, Thirteenth United States infantry, recently transferred from Fort Reno to Fort Porter, this city, has deserted. He was an important witness for the prosecution at the recent trial of Sergeant Marriott, at Albany, for the murder of Sergeant Schuler. Fane's close connection with the case makes his capture very desirable by the government and deputy marshals are looking for him in all directions.

She Preached to the Multitude.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 4.—Three thousand people heard Rev. Anna Howard Shaw preach yesterday at the closing of the National American Woman's suffrage convention. Half an hour before the services began the doors were closed to the public, the crowd was so large. She spoke for an hour and a half. She said the suffragists asked nothing that was not perfectly natural.

Was It the Chicora?

Chicago, Feb. 4.—An object resembling the hull of the ill-fated Chicora, has been seen off South Chicago, hemmed in by ice. Agent Van Sickle, of the Baltimore & Ohio, at Milting, Ind., saw the hull float by, only two miles from shore. Darkness prevents any attempt being made to reach the wreck. Tugs have been sent in search.

Wreck on the Rock Island.

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 4.—Rock Island train No. 2, east bound, was wrecked at Willard twenty miles west of Topeka yesterday. A broken rail was the cause. Two chair cars and four Pullmans left the track. Several were injured.

Died in Search of Gold.

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 4.—It is reported that eight men have perished in the unexplored gold regions along the Seine river. The party left here in January and according to a letter received fom a survivor, eight of them have fozen to death.

A STEAMER IN DISTRESS.

Finding a Body at Sea—Was He the Elbe's Unfortunate?

London, Feb. 4.—The crew of the fishing smack Tara, which arrived at Lowestoft last night, report that between 5 and 6 o'clock on the morning of the 30th, about fifty miles from Lowestoft, they saw rockets. They had just hauled up their trawl. They bore down on the signalling vessel, but lost sight of signals and steamer when about 700 yards distant. They saw another steamer burning blue light and then, a few minutes later, steaming east. They cruised about, but saw nothing more.

The crew of the fishing smack Industry passed the body of a foreign seaman, with a lifebelt attached to it, about thirty-five miles off Lowestoft. They did not bring it ashore because recently after landing a body they had been forced to pay the funeral expenses. Crews of other smacks report having seen wreckage and a body.

BANKERS PLEASED.

William Connell Says Cleveland Has Done the Right Thing.

Buffalo, Feb. 4.—The Bankers' association has wired New York representatives at Washington to help forward prompt action on the part of congress to avert disaster to the nations credit. "The duty of every business man in the United States," said Banker William Connell who enjoys a national reputation as an authority on finance, "is to bring to bear upon congress all possible influences that will aid the passage of the measure recommended by the president. In arranging for a $100,000,000 loan abroad, President Cleveland has again done the right thing and at the right time. But this can only be a temporary expedient. Permanent relief can come only by adopting the measures so earnestly recommended in the president's message."

OVER AN EMBANKMENT.

A Wreck on the Indiana & Illinois Southern Railroad.

Newton, Ill., Feb. 4.—By the wreck on the Indiana & Illinois Southern railroad which was caused by decayed ties and a defective joint, five cars, including a passenger coach, tumbled down a fifteen foot embankment. The Ford Dramatic company was on board. Following is a list of the injured:

C. G. Ford, arm hurt; G. M. Adams, injured internally; D. W. Seecrist, badly bruised; T. H. Hand, injured about head; C. W. Jackson, left foot crushed; Harry Fahrnes, head bruised and arm injured.

It is miraculous that nobody was killed. All of the women were badly shaken up, but none sustained injuries of a serious nature.

LOOKS DARK FOR PARE.

After Five Years in Jail Is Again Arrested—Canadians Want Him.

Concord, N. H., Feb. 4.—George Pare, alias Bowland, was discharged from state prison here September 10, after serving five years for burglary in in Cheshire county. Pare was wanted by Montreal officers to answer a charge of burglary. It was the officers intention to take him to Canada on the completion of the sentence, but for some unaccountable reason the papers did not arrive in season and Pare disappeared.

Concord officers located him in Manchester, where he was living under the name of Howard. He was arrested and brought here last night and will be held awaiting extradition papers.

THEY ARE AFTER HIM.

An Elopement with a Man of Family. Both Parties Arrested.

Halifax, N. S., Feb. 4.—Among the passengers on the steamer Mongolian from Liverpool booked to Vancouver, were John Brown, aged 50, and Gertrude Bentley, aged 18, registered as man and wife. They were arrrested here on instructions from the girl's father, a wealthy Liverpool manufacturer.

Brown, who is a graduate of Oxford and Miss Bentley's tutor, left a wife and five children behind. He was subsequently liberated and engaged counsel in an endeavor to obtain the girl's release.

Norton's Body Found.

Providence, R. I., Feb. 4.—It is believed that the body found in the small black sloop anchored in the Indian river, off South Rockledge, Fla., was that of William Norton, who came to this city from Illinois during the past year. Norton came here for the purpose of coaching the Brown university foot-ball team last fall and about Thanksgiving he announced his intention of taking a trip south during the winter.

Herr Most a Prophet.

Waterbury, Conn., Feb. 4.—Herr Most addressed 200 people at Quigley's hall yesterday. His address was temperate in tone. He condemned the Brooklyn trike and called the strikers foolish, declaring that the time was not ripe. He denounced the relations between capital and labor, and advised workingmen to organize. He predicted an industrial war at an early day.

Three Cowboys Killed.

Hermosillo, Mex., Feb. 4.—Fifty renegade Yaqui Indians who evaded the detachment of federal troops made a raid on Jose Gonzelez's ranch in the river valley west of here, killed three cowboys, robbed the ranch of a considerable sum of money, and carried off a large amount of grain. Settlers are arming themselves and organizing to go in pursuit of the Indians.

The Castine for Africa.

New York, Feb. 4.—Commander Thomas Perry started the gunboat Castine on her trip to the east coast of Africa yesterday, and the waters of New York are for the first time in many months without a representative of the new navy, except for the Vesuvias, which is supposed to go hunting for derelicts along the coast.

It is characteristic of the Wren that it will sneak in and occupy the nest made by another bird, in preference to building one of its own. This same trait is often seen in business. It is shown by the imitators of

COTTOLENE

No sooner has the wonderful merit of this new vegetable shortening, so much better than lard, created for it a remarkable sale and popularity, than the business wrens are ready to move upon the market with many worthless counterfeits. Any housekeeper can be easily and cheaply convinced of the value of COTTOLENE by simply giving it a trial. They will then be unwilling to go back to lard, or go down to fraudulent imitations.

JAPANESE WANT PEKIN

Japan Will Exact a Cession of Territory.

Chinese Empire May Involve the Intervention of European Powers—Japanese Iron Clad Sunk—European Officers in Command—Liu-Kung-Ti Arrives at New Chwang.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The dispatch from Hiroshima stating that the Chinese peace envoys had been sent back under escort because of the insufficiency of their credentials, exactly accords with anticipatory advices by Minister Kurino, the Japanese minister to the United States. It has been the expressed opinion at the Japanese legation from the beginning, that the Chinese government was simply pursuing its customary policy of delay in this matter.

Their first attempt was to place Japan in the atttitude of suing for peace, by giving the proposition made at the suggestion of the United States by Minister Dun, at Tokio, precedence over the proposition made by Minister Denby, at Pekin. This subterfuge being rejected, and Japan insisting that China must take the initiative in asking for peace, China next requested an armistice. This being refused on the 8th of December, China appointed Chang Hin Huan, and Shac, governor of Formosa, as peace envoys. Japan served formal notice on China that unless these envoys came accredited with plenipotentiary powers, they would not be received, and for the time being, Japan, in the interest of a peaceful settlement, waived its objection to the personality of Shao, who had set a price on the head of every Japanese captured or slain. Although the Chinese envoys were appointed on the 8th of December, it was not until the 7th of January, that Shang Hin Huan took leave of the emperor and started on his mission.

In the meantime came the selection of ex-Secretary J. W. Foster as advisory counsel. This again was looked upon by Japan as an attempt at delay. It was apparent that Mr. Foster could not be admitted to the peace negotiations except in the capacity of a secretary to one of the Chinese envoys, and that was a position his high rank as a diplomat and an ex-secretary of tate of the United States would of necessity debar him from taking.

Two months ago Count Ito, Count Inonye and Field Marshal Yamagata were all in favor of peace upon the basis of an indemnity, and the recognition of the independence of Korea. Now it is said these terms will be impossible, and that Japan will exact a cession of territory.

Just here, as viewed by experienced diplomats of other legations than the Japanese, the element of danger comes in. There is nothing now left for the Japanese to do but to pursue their advantages until eventually Pekin falls into their hands. The inevitable results of this, it is thought, will be the fall of the present dynasty. Then there will be no one to treat with for peace and complications will occur which will threaten the total dismemberment of the Chinese empire and involve the almost certain intervention of European powers. The outcome of such a complication would be difficult to foresee and its contemplation is giving much uneasiness in diplomatic circles here.

Nothing had been received at the navy department as to the progress of the great battle between the Japanese and Chinese fleets in the harbor of Wei-Hai-Wei. The fact that some of the Chinese warships are commanded by European officers makes the outcome less certain than any previous engagement. Unofficial advices seem to confirm reports that the Japanese have sustained the loss of one iron clad and several torpedo boats in their two venturesome assaults. Naval officers believe the Chinese fleet will fight to a finish and that the most deadly naval battle of modern times is now in progress in the harbor of Wei-Hai-Wei.

Secretary Gresham up to a late hour last night had received no dispatches as to the progress of events, but it is confidently expected that Secretary Herbert will hear news from our fleet of observation to-day.

London, Feb. 4.—The Central News correspondent in Wei-Hai-Wei telegraphs under date of Feb. 1, via Talien-Wan:

"The Chinese warships were much damaged in yesterday's fight. After the Paichiyaso forts capitulated, the Japanese turned the captured guns against the Chinese warships, hitting them repeatedly and forcing them to change their position. A violent snow storm in the afternoon of Jan. 31 compelled the Japanese fleet to remain inactive and thus frustrated the Japanese plan to bring on a general naval engagement. The Japanese still hold the entrance to the harbor."

A Central News dispatch from Hai-Cheng says that Viceroy Liu-Kung-Ti has arrived at New Chwang and will assume supreme command of the Chinese operations in Manchuria. Gen. Nodzu, the Japanese commander, expects to be attacked to-day or to-morrow. His spies report that there are about 50,000 Chinese troops in the neighborhood of Yeng-Kow and New Chwang.

England's Liberal Whip.

London, Feb. 4.—An urgent liberal whip has been issued. It summons the members for 4 o'clock to-morrow afternoon when questions of privilege are likely to be raised, taking precedence over the address, and important disvisions are expected.

Hon. Joseph A. Linscott Dead.

Montreal, Feb. 4.—Tom Eck said last evening that he would soon start for Europe with Johnson, the skater and bicyclist, and John Neilson, of Minneapolis, who made such a good showing here Saturday.

THE STRIKERS PROTEST

Awaiting Decision of the City Fathers.

Non-Union Men Deserting—Strikers Orderly—President Lewis Satisfied with the Outlook—Commissioner Welles Will Let Norton Do the Talking—Motorman Assaulted.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 4.—It is expected that when the meeting of the board of aldermen takes place in the city hall this afternoon more than 20,000 persons will be standing on the plaza outside waiting to see what action the city fathers will take in regard to the petition and resolutions to be presented to them by the members of the executive committee of District Assembly No. 75. The petition was sent to all labor unions throughout the different parts of the city. The petition asks that the franchises be taken away from the Brooklyn Heights Railroad company, the Atlantic Avenue Railroad company, and the Queens County & Suburban Railroad company. The petition and resolutions will be presented at the aldermen's meeting by an alderman whose name will not be divulged by the members of the executive committee.

Master Workman Connelly when seen said that he was not anxious to have the strikers at the city hall but he desired to have all of the other laboring men in Brooklyn there. "We will surely have 20,000 men there," he said, "without our own 6,000. I would rather see our own men stay at home. From the reports that I have received every man, woman and child of this city is anxious to go to the city hall and stand in the plaza for one hour or a dozen hours if necessary."

When asked if he had secured a permit for the demonstration he replied that he had not.

"I don't see," he said, "that there is any occasion for getting a permit. A man has a right to walk along the street, he has a right to stand in one spot for an hour, or two hours, if he wants to do so. If one man has the right to stand so has 20,000 or 25,000 men."

He said the men would not go there in a body; they would go there in twos and threes and stand in front of the city hall. They would be a quiet and orderly crowd. When he was asked if it was true that Mr. Debs, the president of the American Railway union, was in town, he replied that he had been in town but had started back for his home again. When asked as to the reason for Mr. Debs' visit, Mr. Connelly refused to answer, other than to say that Mr. Debs came here to see how the situation stood. "After getting the information he wanted," Mr. Connelly continued, "he started back for his home again."

A number of desertions from the railroad companies were reported yesterday.

The same number of cars were run yesterday that have been running for the past few days. Collisions and small accidents were reported from various parts of the city, but nothing serious resulted. The companies claim they are getting all of their cars out on schedule time and that is all the people want them to do.

President Lewis, of the Brooklyn Heights company, when seen said that all of his cars were running on schedule time. He had all the men he wanted and was perfectly satisfied with the outlook. He said he would not make any application to Police Commissioner Welles asking him to allow his motormen and conductors to carry revolvers.

Allan Hoagland, a motorman, in charge of car 2,144 of the Greenpoint line, was held up by two men during the afternoon at Franklin and Huron streets. He was dragged from the platform, thrown into the street and beaten about the head and body. While lying on the ground he managed to pull a revolver from his pocket and fired two shots at his assailants. The bullets went wide of their mark, however, and the two men ran away on the arrival of a special officer. The latter took charge of the motorman and had Ambulance Surgeon Thall summoned from St. Catherines hospital. Hoagland's injuries consisted of bruises about the body and cuts on the face and head. After his wounds had been dressed he was sent home.

While the car from which Hoagland had been ousted stood on the tracks, a large crowd amused themselves by throwing stones at the windows. The conductor was hit in the head with a stone, receiving a slight scalp wound.

Andrew Brennan, William Cosgrove and John Mitchell were arrested yesterday, charged with cutting wires at Fifteenth street, near Third avenue.

Special Officer Quinlan reported that car 1,938, of the Flushing avenue line, in charge of Motorman Healy, was held up by a mob of 100 persons at Flushing avenue and Spencer street. The motorman was assaulted, the trolley rope cut and all the car windows were broken. In addition, Quinlan was assaulted and his club taken away by the crowd who used it on his head. He is cut in several places. Healy was also cut about the head and face. Finally a squad of police from the Thirteenth precinct arrived, and, after fifteen minutes' work, succeeded in dispersing the crowd.

Trolley car 2,506, of the Tompkins avenue line, in charge of Motorman Farrell, collided with car 1,212, of the Reed avenue line, at Roebling street and Broadway. Both cars were badly shattered and had to be laid up for repairs. No one was injured. Two cars also collided in front of the Nostrand avenue depot with such force as to break all the windows in both cars. Both motormen were thrown into the street, but escaped injury.

BISMARCK'S BIRTHDAY

Final Preparations for Its Celebration.

Count Willie Fails To Produce Proofs of His Divorce, Yet Wishes To Marry Miss Barrison—Police Raid an Anarchist House and Find a Complete Cartridge Factory.

Berlin, Feb. 4.—The final preparations for the Bismarck birthday celebration began early in the last week. The universities and high schools of the empire have been making their arrangements since November. On Wednesday the seniors of all the student corps in Germany met at Koesen to consider the subject of a permanent memorial to the old chancellor. They decided to erect a monument to him on the Rudelsburg, near Koesen, where for years has stood a shaft to the memory of the students who fell in the Franco-German war. The corner stone is to be laid on April 1. The plan of the monument has not been determined but it will be designed especially to indicate the veneration and affection felt by the academic youth for the most famous of German corps students and statesmen.

The Anhalt deputation who recently visited Bismarck report that he looked well and was in good spirits. Several times during dinner he offered choice bits to his big dog Rebecca. She ate everything greedily until she came to a piece of pork which she refused to touch. Bismarck patted her and remarked laughingly:

"You see, even dogs have, I will not say their religions, but their ritual prejudices in eating."

Freiherr von Hammerstein, minister of agriculture, caused a panic on Tuesday among Count Kanitz's Agrarian group, when he spoke in the reichstag of the government's attitude to the Kanitz grain monopoly bill. The faintness of his praise is supposed to forecast the complete rejection of the measure. The Agrarian leaders call this part of his speech a funeral sermon. Nevertheless, the Agrarian newspapers clamor still more loudly for the nationalization of the grain trade. The Landeszeitung in Lippe says:

"If the monopoly cannot be accomplished otherwise than by tearing up the commercial treaties, let them be torn up, even if war follow. A good brisk war would be a thousand times better than the stagnation of the last few years."

It is said that, with a view to gilding the bill which he presented to the Agrarians, Freiherr von Hammerstein applied on Tuesday for admission to the Berlin branch of the Farmers' union.

Count Willie Bernstorff, who ran away with a variety actress named Barrison about three weeks ago, has been unable to patch up a marriage in London as the German embassy there was warned not to give him a license. The trouble is that the proofs of his divorce from his first wife are not clear. Count Willie could not produce the proofs upon demand. He clung tightly to Miss Barrison, however, and Count Percy, his brother, found them together upon his arrival in London a week ago. The brothers and the family lawyer, who had been summoned from Berlin, had a long conference which resulted in Count Willie's promising not to marry Miss Barrison on the condition that his family indemnify with a liberal cash payment. The payment was made and although Miss Barrison has the elderly count and a snug fortune, she will not get the title of countess. The Berlin newspapers handle the scandal in a very gingerly manner as the Barnstoffs are an old court family with no end of influence and considerable wealth.

The police raided the cellar of a house in the Wallner-Theatre Strasse last evening in a search for anarchists. They found a complete factory in full working order. They confiscated more than fourteen hundred weight of powder and arrested eight laborers. It is said that similar factories are in operation in several city districts, but the police have been unable to find them. The anarchist theory was given up at once as false. It was announced at first that a German contractor fitted out these factories o fill an order from China. He had ready some 20,000 cartridges and 17 cases and 24 casks of powder. The materials that the police seized were removed to a fire-proof magazine. The police say that the contraband contractor's name is Knaak and that he had received a large order from a Hamburg exporter who wished to send war materials to Montevideo. Knaak divided the order among four workshops, the police say, and gave no notice to the authorities that he was handling explosives in such great quantities inside the city limits. The factory closed was said by Knaak to be the last of the four in operation. The police are still at work on the case.

The provincial authorities of Prussia have issued orders to local food inpectors to examine carefully for impurities all American lards.

Guns and Cartridges Seized.

Melbourne, Feb. 4.—Mail dispatches dated at Apia on Jan. 27, say that all is quiet in Samoa. A large quantity of guns and cartridges had been seized from the Savaii houses of Trings and Spatz, who were charged formally with importing arms and ammunition on the New Zealand steamship Upolu. Trings pleaded guilty and was fined $100 by the municipal magistrate. Spatz declared himself innocent, but he was fined by the German consul.

Died from Exposure.

New York, Feb. 4.—Captain Frank Roosevelt, of Company E., Twelfth regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., is dead of pneumonia in this city. The attack was the direct result of fatigue and exposure endured by the officer while doing strike service in Brooklyn.

Miles Will Case Declared a Forgery.

Doylestown, Pa., Feb. 4.—The celebrated Griffith Miles will case, which has occupied the attention of Bucks county courts since last Monday, was brought to a close, when the jury declared the will a forgery.

TOWN AND HOME FAVORITE.

Ante-bellum Heroes.

On Feb. 4, 1847, 400 regulars and border volunteers dashed into Pueblo de Taos, N. M., to punish the insurrectionary Mexican and Indians for the massacre of Governor Brent and party three weeks before. In the old mission church and several five story pueblos near it 600 "greasers" and redskin allies received the onslaught of the whites. Their citadel had been loopholed for defense; besides a strong wall inclosing it, served as a rampart.

The Americans belonged to Colonel Doniphan's famous expedition. Their leader was Colonel Sterling Price.

Two hours' steady battering with four cannon proved simply a waste of good powder and shot. Then five companies of the First dragoons charged up to the wall with ladders and axes. Through holes cut in the church firebrands were thrown in, and in the confusion resulting a party of stormers got up to the door. Although every assault failed, the valor in Price's ranks knew no limit. Captain Burgwin headed the attacks until he was killed, and many other officers as well as intrepid dragoons fell under Mexican bullets. At last a six pounder, rushed by valiant hands to within 30 yards of the wall, knocked a hole through large enough to admit four soldiers abreast, and in that way the stormers entered.

The melee inside admits of no description. It was a combat for revenge, a double revenge at that, and for every one of the 54 white soldiers cut down in the assault three of the turbulent, tawny Mexicans paid with their blood.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

"The Postman", a lively song sure to be popular, is published in this issue of The Daily Press. The music printed in The Press from time to time, if preserved makes a valuable portfolio.

In its campaign against the Mayor, Council and Police Department, the Republican organ got into such an entanglement of misrepresentations that on Saturday it was forced to begin to explain, and among other acknowledgments of its errors its issue contained the following humiliating admission:

The Courier-News was in error the other day when it said that the Mayor had asked the advice, by letter, of local business men regarding whom he should appoint to the police force for the position of captain. We hear that the Mayor says he has written no letters on the subject. The Courier-News was misinformed on this point and desires to correct the statement.

David Wechsler, who has entertained readers of The Daily Press with several stories in the copyrighted short serial series, today contributes the first instalment of a new tale, "The Two Highwaymen". This clever bit of fiction will be concluded tomorrow, and followed by a three-day serial from the same fascinating pen, entitled "The Ocean Graveyard: A Mystery of the Atlantic". Following so closely the lamentable loss of the Elbe, the story is particularly interesting. It takes the reader on a thrilling exploration of a submarine valley of death, and he participates in the destruction of the rock which sunk so many stanch vessels.

Chimney Fire.

The alarm from Box 43 at 6:28 Saturday evening called the department to a chimney at Third street and Plainfield avenue which was subdued by extinguishers, no water being turned on although Alerts had their hose laid. Little damage was done, though the colored family who occupied the house were thoroughly frightened.

HELD THE TRAIN FIVE MINUTES.

Conductor Phillips Searched for a Policeman to Eject Two Passengers All That Time.

Elizabeth, Feb. 4—J. E. Stricker and B. A. Peltier, two well-dressed business men of Perth Amboy, purchased tickets last night at New Brunswick on the Pennsylvania Railroad for Amboy. The train did not stop at Amboy Junction. The men were carried to Elizabeth and refused to pay fare between the two latter places.

A scene occurred on the train. Conductor Phillips held the train at Elizabeth to find a policeman, who arrested the men, and they were locked up. This morning Police Justice O'Neill, after rebuking the conductor, ruled that he should have stopped the train at Rahway. He discharged the men, who declare they will at once commence a suit for damages.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Burr of Kensington avenue is seriously ill.

Miss Addie Weaver is ill at her home on Grove street with the grip.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Zeller of Jackson avenue this morning.

The death of Dr. P. J. Zeglio's aged mother is announced just as this issue goes to press.

Mrs. Stead of Washington Valley, who is in her ninety-seventh year, is very low, and her death is hourly expected.

Mrs. L. J. Denton of Hillside avenue is confined to her bed with the grip. Mr. Denton is slightly improved of his severe illness.

Miss Laura Emmons of Jackson avenue entertained a number of her friends at her home Saturday evening. The evening was pleasantly passed with cards and dancing.

Mrs. S. P. Craig of College place went Saturday to Hartwick, New York to spend a few days. When she returns tomorrow she will escort her daughter, Miss Beatrice.

Nathan A. Scribner, brother of the late Isaac Scribner, died at his home near Evons this morning of the grip. Decedent was an old resident of Plainfield, and for many years was connected with his brother in the brick manufacturing business on Maple avenue.

The case of appendicitis from which Andrew G. Slevin suffered, terminated fatally early Sunday morning. The death of Mr. Slevin is particularly sad, coming as it does so soon after his brilliant wedding, and bereaving not only the young wife but a family of whom he was a most worthy son. The entire circle of friends is deeply grieved over his untimely end. The funeral arrangements are announced in another column.

Good Horsemanship Saved Him

Mr. Dryden of West Seventh street had a narrow escape from an accident while driving in his cutter down Front street yesterday afternoon. In turning the corner of Sandford avenue the horse slipped, and, regaining his feet, started at a lively gait toward the bridge. Mr. Dryden's good horsemanship was the only thing that saved him from taking an involuntary ice-water bath in the brook, as the horse was not under control until the brook was reached.

Another Defeat for China.

A colored man whose name is not known went after his laundry Saturday night at the Chinese laundry on North avenue. He laid down a $5 bill and the Chinaman counted out his change which was $4 66. The customer very quickly grasped his money, also the $5, and made a hasty exit. The Chinaman ran after him, but his peculiarly made shoes prevented him from making much headway on the ice, and the colored fellow got away with the money.

Games, Music and Song.

Miss Laura Emmons of Jackson avenue gave a party Saturday evening to which many young friends of the fair hostess were invited. The evening was passed with games, music and song.

A dainty repast was discussed during the evening and the pleasant party did not disperse until a late hour, at which time the parting friends did not fail to congratulate the fair hostess on the pleasure attending the occasion.

TEXAS LAW FOR TEXANS.

How Judge Culberson Once Won a Case That Seemed Hopeless.

Congressman Dave Culberson, as he is familiarly known in Texas from the Rio Grande to the Red river, is one of the most entertaining members of the house. He is always ready with a witty reply to any law or political question propounded to him by his associates and is the subject of more stories than any member of congress except Thomas B. Reed.

"In 1860, just after Lincoln had been elected president," said an old friend of Judge Culberson the other day, "there was a neighborhood quarrel between two citizens in Upshur county, Tex. The southern question was at fever heat, and the feeling was very strong on both sides. Each side of the case, of course, was anxious to get the verdict. The defendant went to Jefferson and engaged Culberson, who was then rising to distinction as a bright lawyer. Dave's client didn't have any case, the evidence being all against him; but, true to his trust, as he always is, Culberson determined to make the best fight he could for him. When the trial came off, it turned out that the other fellow had employed a smart young saddlebag lawyer from Maryland, just located in Texas.

"Culberson had the opening speech and made a good defense for his client under the circumstances. When the Marylander replied in behalf of his client, he produced a vast array of authorities, from which he read in support of his case. When the young man closed, Culberson picked up one of the books from which the opposing counsel had been reading and said: 'If your honor please, this young brother of the profession has been reading for your instruction Massachusetts law. This book is printed in Boston. It is "Greenleaf on Evidence." We don't want Massachusetts law to govern us in Texas. I have been giving you genuine Texas law, made by our own people.'

"'What's that?' asked the judge sharply, 'been imposing on the court with Yankee law?'

"'Yes, sir, your honor,' said Culberson; 'he has been reading from this book, which was printed in Boston, Mass.'

"'Pass it over this way,' said the surprised court, looking at the fly leaf. Then he said:

"'Mr. Culberson, the court finds that you are correct. It is a Boston print, and we don't want any of it here. No abolition law for Upshur county, and the court will be d——d if we will have it.'

"To the supreme disgust of the young lawyer the court continued as follows: 'Sir, upon the evidence of the case I dismiss the suit against Dave Culberson's friend and fine the plaintiff $1 and costs and his lawyer $5 for contempt of court. Now, young man, let that serve as a warning to you how you try to practice abolition law in this state!'

"Culberson's client set up the dinner, and the young Maryland lawyer was one of the first men to enlist in the war. He wanted to whip Massachusetts for the loss of his first case."—Washington Post.

REMOVAL.

Dr. Lighthill begs leave to give notice that he has removed to

NO. 132 CRESCENT AVE.

(a few doors from his former location) where he can be consulted on all chronic diseases of whatever name and nature.

Dr. Lighthill refers with pardonable pride to the success of his practice in Plainfield and submits below a few of the many testimonials which he has received from grateful patients. A mass of similar ones can be seen at his office.

AN ALMOST MIRACULOUS CURE.

The Statement of Mr. Edward Teel, Jr., of Dunellen, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

From a sense of duty I desire to call public attention to the almost miraculous cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in the case of my wife. For eleven years she had been afflicted with piles of an unusual severe and distressing character. She suffered every day of her life the most intense pain, attended with frequent and profuse hemorrhage. This state of things debilitated her entire system until she became a perfect wreck of her former self.

We made every effort to obtain a cure but they all resulted in bitter disappointment, although a number of physicians of excellent reputations for skill in that direction had treated her case. She grew worse and worse all the time, the pain became perfectly unbearable and I felt she could not bear the strain of her condition much longer. In this extremity, a friend of mine, Mr. W. E. Dilts, a resident of Roselle, N. J., a passenger conductor on the New Jersey Central told me that he had been similarly affected, and had been permanently cured by Dr. Lighthill, after other medical skill had failed. He assured me that the doctor would cure my wife, no matter how severe her case may be, and his prediction proved perfectly correct. In spite of her desperate condition, Dr. Lighthill, I am glad to say, has effected a complete and perfect cure in her case, and has given her new life.

Since the cure has been effected she has gained in health and strength and is so improved in appearance that her friends scarcely recognize her. They all consider her cure as almost miraculous, and Dr. Lighthill's praise is heard on every side. Our gratitude to Dr. Lighthill is unbounded and we only hope that other sufferers may be benefited by this publication.

EDWARD TEEL, JR.

A Flattering Testimonial from Colonel John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing with which I was afflicted.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly: they were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 132 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOMAS CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card From Mr. T. R. VanZandt,
of Nos. 304 and 306 Park ave.,
Plainfield, N. J

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks, but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. E. V. E. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose flattering testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

VOWELS AND CONSONANTS.

A Close Look Into the Way They Are Formed and Used.

A. Mellville Bell of Washington, in his note on "Syllabic Consonants," read at the second session of the American Oriental society in this city, said:

"What is a vowel? What is a consonant? What is a syllable?

"A vowel is defined as a nonfrictional emission of the voice or of unvocalized breath through an oral channel, with momentarily fixed configuration. Vowels therefore run smoothly into one another by merely altering the shape of the oral passage without interrupting it.

"A consonant is defined as an interception of the breath or voice by oral stoppage, or by emission through side channels or through narrow chinks. The change from one consonant to another thus involves a motion of the articulating organs, producing, with more or less audibility, a puff, a flap or a sibiliation.

"The two classes of elements meet in ee, y, oo, w. A syllable is any vocal element uttered with a single impulse of voice. All the vocal elements in a syllable must be clustered together without admixture with nonvocals, but any number of nonvocals may precede or follow the vocal cluster without affecting the syllabic unity.

"The consonants l, m, n, when they are final after consonants, frequently form syllables without vowels, as in bottle.

"The test of good pronunciation is to give each syllable its own distinct sound, so that in the most rapid utterance the ear can trace the boundaries of every syllable. But the syllable sounds must be true to customary pronunciation.

"The name consonant, if held to imply an element that cannot be pronounced without a sonant or vowel, would be a misnomer, and its use should in that case be discontinued in scientific menology. Vowels are the soft and plastic substance of speech. Consonants are the articulations or joints on which vowels and syllables turn. Their proper name is, therefore, 'articulations,' not consonants.

"Phonetic elements make syllables. Syllables make words. Words are to be considered as the syllables of clauses. Clauses must be carefully individualized, for they are the syllables of sentences. Divide your sentences into their logical units or clauses, and indicate within the clauses all their phonetic units or syllables, and you will fulfill the grand fundamental precepts of delivery."—Philadelphia Record.

KIPLING'S KIND ACT.

A Story About the Famous Author That Is Not Unpleasant.

It has become the fashion of literary paragraphers to print whatever stories of a disagreeble nature concerning Rudyard Kipling they can hear or find. Incidents showing the other side of the man—the true side, in fact—are rare, but that this wonderful author is not quite the literary barbarian which he is so generally made out to be finds but stronger evidence in a little story which I heard quite recently.

Not long ago an ambitious young writer composed his first story. He was rather skeptical of its merit, and being a great reader and admirer of Kipling's work determined to send his literary firstborn to Kipling for criticism. His friends tried to dissuade him from the idea, telling him that he would never see his story again. But his faith in his favorite author was strong, and the story went to Kipling. A week passed by, and finally nearly a month had elapsed. The young writer suffered keenly from the ridicule of his friends in the meantime, and, truth to tell, his faith began to waver. During the fifth week, however, a letter came postmarked "Brattleboro, Vt.," and the young writer opened it with feverish haste.

There was his manuscript, true enough, but scarcely could he recognize it. Kipling had evidently put days of work upon it, making corrections, suggestions and interlineations until the story contained more of Kipling than of its original author. With the manuscript came a letter, in which Kipling said that he was not "in the habit of doing this sort of thing, because it took so much time." But in this case he saw a good chance to make $5 for a particular fresh air fund in which he was interested, and if Mr. —— thought the work he had put on this manuscript was worth that sum he would be glad to receive it for his fund and would send a receipted bill!

The $5 was sent.—Philadelphia Times.

No Doubt About It.

"Do you play by note?" inquired one of the summer residents of Blueville of the violinist of the "Berry Corners' orchestra," which had been discoursing ear piercing strains at a lawn party.

"Nivver a note do Oi play by, sorr," replied Mr. Flaherty, mopping his heated brow with a handkerchief of sanguinary hue.

"Ah, by ear, then?" said the summer resident, with a smile of gracious interest.

"Nivver an ear hilps me, yer honor," responded Mr. Flaherty, returning his handkerchief to his capacious pocket.

"Indeed! May I ask how you—what you do play by, then?" persisted the inquirer.

"By main strin'th, be jabbers," said Mr. Flaherty, with a weary air, as he plunged his ancient instrument into its green bag. "An it's moighty dry wurrk, an that's thruth, sorr."—Youth's Companion.

BODIES FROM THE ELBE.

Lowestoft, Eng., Feb. 4.—The fishing-smack Verena has landed here today the body of Friedrich Ernst of Magdeburg, Prussia, one of the drowned passengers of the Elbe, and some mail-bags, one of which was marked "Stockholm". The body of Ernst presented a shocking appearance, with its hands clenched across the chest and the mouth wide opened. It was found forty-five miles southeast of this place.

London, February 4.—The Dunkirk correspondent of the Standard says that the master of a Danish steamer that has arrived at that port reports that he saw a number of bodies with life-belts on them floating off the Dutch Banks.

TROLLEY PASSENGERS DROWNED.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 4.—A trolley car loaded with passengers ran into an open draw on the Russell avenue line of the Milwaukee Street Railway line this morning at the Kinnickinnic bridge. The passengers were all dumped into the icy water.

Thousands of persons were on the spot at once, and the people in the water were fished out as fast as they appeared on the surface.

One woman, the motorman, and one passenger were taken out drowned so far.

Four passengers are still missing, and it is supposed they were fastened in the car at the bottom of the river.

Want to Work for Uncle Sam.

Twelve applicants appeared before Geo. C. Godown of the Board of Examiners Saturday afternoon to take the Civil Service examination as provided by the Post-office Commissioners at Washington, to take place on that day.

The examinations were for the grades of clerk and carrier and were open for all citizens between 25 and 40, without regard to their politics.

The papers were forwarded to Washington, and an announcement of the successful contestants will be published in The Press.

Memorials for the Dead.

During all the Winter L. L. Manning, the dealer in marble and granite, has kept his men at work, and has a large and elegant assortment for purchasers of monuments and headstones to select from. Prices were never so low as now, and those thinking of ordering should take advantage of the bargains Mr. Manning offers in high-grade and artistic work. A lasting memorial to departed friends is thus within the means of all.

Death of Edwin H. Mead.

Edwin H. Mead, a well-known and prominent citizen of South Orange, died last night at his home after a short illness. Her Reward.

A well known character in Paris is an old woman whose breast is literally covered with crosses and decorations, and who is now peacefully engaged as a flower seller. Her name is Jane Bonmere, and her honors were gained in the Crimea, at Rome, Gravelotte and at Orleans. On one occasion she rendered valuable service to her country by swallowing a military dispatch of great importance and so prevented its falling into the hands of the enemy. A woman who has swallowed so much for her country with dispatch should not be allowed to sup sorrow in her old age.—Chicago Herald.

AN ECCENTRIC PAINTER.

Turner's Studio and Methods a Curiosity to Visitors.

Broderip and Sir Richard Owen, says the latter in his "Reminiscences," walked together to Turner's residence, which was slightly dingy in outward appearance. When they arrived at the door, they waited some time before their ring at the bell was answered. At last an elderly person opened the door a few inches and asked them suspiciously what they wanted. They replied that they wished to see Mr. Turner. The door was immediately shut in their faces, but after a time the person came back to say that they might enter. When they got into the hall, she showed them into a room and forthwith shut the door upon them. They then discovered, with some dismay, that this apartment was in total darkness, with the blinds down and the shutters up. After a prolonged interval they were told they might go up stairs. Upon arriving at the topmost story they perceived Turner standing before several easels and taking his colors from a circular table which he swung around to get at the paints he required. He was painting several pictures at once, passing on from one to the other and applying to each in its turn the particular color he was using till it was exhausted.

After showing them all that there was to be seen Turner vouchsafed the explanation of the treatment which they experienced upon entering the house. He said that the bright light outside would have spoiled their eyes for properly appreciating the pictures, and that to see them to advantage an interval of darkness was necessary. At this stage of the interview Broderip had to leave for some engagement, and then an event took place which Owen declares that none of his artist friends would ever believe. Turner offered him a glass of wine. It was while they were coming down stairs that he first discovered the symptoms of an inward struggle going on in Turner's bosom. When they were passing a little cupboard on the landing, this struggle reached a climax. Finally Turner said, "Will you—will you have a glass of wine?" This offer having been accepted, after a good deal of groping in the cupboard a decanter was produced, of which the original stopper had been replaced by the cork, with the remains of some sherry at the bottom. This Owen duly consumed and shortly afterward took his leave, with many expressions of the pleasure this visit had afforded him and a disturbing conviction that the sherry might lurk indefinitely in his system.

Diphtheria Antitoxine.

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.

So limited has been the supply of GENUINE ANTITOXINE heretofore, that sales have been made only on condition of immediate actual use. But amid so large a population as ours, an urgent demand for the new treatment may arise at any hour, night or day, Sunday or week-day. And delay in obtaining it might result fatally. I have therefore, with some difficulty, and at considerable expense, provided a complete outfit of Antitoxine Serum (with injector) and am prepared to meet such demand. The cost of an outfit (Serum of two powers and Koch injector) is now about $12 being only one-fourth of the earlier price. At present sales will be made only on the order of a practicing physician.

SMASHING TRADITION

WILD ANIMALS IN CAPTIVITY ARE NOT DANGEROUS.

James A. Bailey Says Any One Can Safely Enter and Leave a Cage Full of Lions and Tigers, and Any Man Who Knows the Cues Can Put Them Through Their Acts.

Said Mr. James A. Bailey recently: "It is the general belief all over the world that a man who goes into a den of wild carnivorous beasts takes his life in his hands, and that each time he does so and escapes unharmed he has won by a lucky chance. Some persons believe that if the trainer who handles the animals in their acts were to turn his back upon them for a single instant they would leap upon and devour him. Others again believe that the lions and tigers only wait an opportunity for concerted action to destroy their keeper, while there are still others who declare that it is only through the power of the human eye that the beasts are held in subjection. To all of these opinions and beliefs and as a final answer to all questions on the subject I wish to state here and now that there is no danger whatever to any person entering a cage of wild beasts. Such a statement, however, will scarce be believed without some further explanation and proof.

"It is a fact that many men have been maimed and some killed by lions and tigers in menageries and zoological gardens throughout the world, but in every case, I venture to say, the causes leading to such accidents and deaths were of their own making. Unmerited or too severe punishment is the most frequent cause. Nearly all animals, no matter how small and insignificant, will turn and fight when cornered and in fear of their lives. A cat will make a desperate and determined fight if so placed that it cannot escape from what it believes is a dangerous enemy. Just so with larger cat animals. And nearly all of the accidents that have occurred have been brought about by the brutality of trainers who, having lost temper, have pursued to extremes an animal that did not understand what was wanted of it. Trainers of the present day, however, have come to realize this, and accidents are of rare occurrence. And I maintain that any man or woman, an entire stranger to the animals, can go in with them and in perfect safety.

"A case in point comes to my mind. A few years ago I employed an innocent sort of German to work in the menagerie, and one of the first tasks assigned to him was cleaning the lions' den. Instead of taking an iron scraper and working through the bars as customary, he took a broom, opened the iron door, went in the cage and began to sweep the floor. When a lion got in his way, he would punch it with the broom and tell it in German to got away, and it did so. The man repeated his experience every day and was never harmed. I now make this positive statement—that in both the handling and training of these animals there is no more danger than attends the training of a domestic animal. The snarling and growling of the beasts are no more indicative of a desire to claw and devour than is expressed in the bark or snarl of a canine house pet or the hiss of a sleek tabby when its tail is stepped upon. The big brutes may growl and crouch about their cages, look dangerous and act ferociously and all that, but I contend, and experience has taught me that my belief is correct, that it is only through a desire to escape from the man rather than to attack him.

"It takes time and patience, more than any one not in the business can imagine, to perfect the training of these animals, and every trainer has a method of his own. I would further explain that trained animals will not perform the tricks taught them until the cue is given them. Even trained horses, which are supposed to have great intelligence, will only go through their performances when the ringmaster supplies the cue, whatever it may be. Sometimes it is a motion of the whip, at others a step backward or forward, when instantly the animal will respond. Now, all that is necessary for any one to put through his performances any kind of trained animal or number of them is for him to know when to give the proper cue.

"I do not believe the animals know one trainer from another unless one has been with them for a long time, for when some of my trainers have been taken sick, been discharged or for other causes have left my service the trained animal part of my show has not been interrupted, but has gone on just the same, a new man having been substituted, and it is safe to say that the animals never knew the difference between the men. I have changed the men as often as five times in a season, and one man has put the beasts through their tricks quite as well as another. Any person who will enter the arena fearlessly and confidently can take the trainer's whip and make the animals perform as well as a person who has handled them for months, provided always he knows what tricks the beasts are required to do and can supply the cues.

"I am aware that this statement may appear to most people extraordinary, because it is at variance with their preconceived notions concerning the brutal nature of all wild beasts, but I am firm in my belief and have no hesitation in making it public."—New York Sun.

A Judicial Reproof.

A Warrington justice once reproved a would be suicide thus: "Young man, you have been found guilty of attempting to drown yourself in the river. Only consider what your felings would have been had you succeeded."—Green Bag.

There is no rigid line between duties to self and duties to others. They melt into one another; they act and react upon each other, and when the right balance between them is destroyed neither can be perfectly fulfilled.

HER MIRROR.

A Japanese Story of Its Influence on a Motherless Girl.

At Y. M. C. A. hall Yeataso Okano, a Japanese, told the following story to a large audience:

"Once upon a time there lived in a little hamlet in Japan a young couple. They had one child—a beautiful little girl whom both loved very dearly. It came to pass while the child was still a baby girl that the father was obliged to take a long journey to the far distant city. It was too far for him to take his wife and child, so he left them at home and traveled alone.

"In that great city he saw many new things which, having lived in the peaceful little hamlet up among the mountains all his life, he had never seen before. He desired to take home to his wife some of these new things which seemed to him so wonderful. And the most wonderful gift he could take, it seemed to him, was a mirror. He wished to take home to his wife the pleasure and surprise he had experienced when he first looked into a mirror. So he took one home to his wife.

"When he arrived home he gave the present to his wife, and for the first time she looked into a mirror. 'What do you see?' her husband asked. She replied: 'I declare! I see a very pretty woman. She wears her hair just as I do mine, and she smiles and moves her lips as if she were talking to me.' Her husband told her that the mirror was a present for her, and he hoped she would use it every day. But the wife thought it far too beautiful and rare and costly a gift to use every day, so she put it carefully away and never spoke about it to the little daughter, who grew more beautiful and more like her mother every day.

"By and by a great misfortune fell upon that little household. The wife and mother fell sick, and it was soon evident that she must die. As she lay upon her deathbed she called her little daughter to her and told her that she was going to lose her mother forever. She could point to no future life after death in which they should be reunited, but in the love and simplicity of her heart she did the best she could. She told her little daughter about the wonderful mirror. 'After I am dead,' she said, 'take down that box and look into the mirror that it contains. There you will see my face. And I want you to look into the mirror every day, that you may never forget your mother, and that you may grow like me more and more every day.'

"So the mother died. The little girl did as she had been told, and in the wonderful mirror she thought she saw her mother's face, young and beautiful—not as she had seen her, pale and ill as she lay dying, but fair and fresh as she had looked before the fatal illness. And the little girl looked into the mirror every day and thought of her mother and her many lovely ways, and so it came about that she grew to be more and more like her mother as the years went by."—Rochester Post-Express.

PICTURESQUE ECONOMY.

A Style of Laundry Work Said to Prevail In Boarding Houses.

A peculiar appearance in the front windows of an aristocratic boarding house on one of the leading avenues caused a discussion among passersby. In each pane was a square of white muslin, with embroidered edges, which was apparently glued to the pane.

"That's a queer way of keeping out the light," observed one citizen to another.

"Must be some new method of decoration," remarked another.

"Don't you know what that is?" said a young woman to her husband. "That's a window laundry."

"And what may that be?"

"It's the way ladies who board wash their fine handkerchiefs. You see, it dries and irons them at the same time."

"I see," answered the young man, "that they adhere like postage stamps. How do they do it?"

"Oh, you first catch your window; then you wash the panes and place the handkerchief against them, wringing wet. They stick like a plaster, and when they come off are as smooth as satin. In that way every woman can be her own laundress."

"I see," said her husband thoughtfully, "why so many families board."—Detroit Free Press.

Women Can't Hold Office In Washington.

Judge McClinton of the superior court of Clallam county has virtually decided that under law women cannot hold office in this state. The case which came before him was that of Charles Russell, relator, against Ella Guptill. Miss Guptill was in November elected superintendent of schools in this county, and received the largest majority of any of the successful candidates, but on the strength of an opinion received from the attorney general it was decided to contest her election, with the result that Judge McClinton overruled the demurrer of the complaint, which decides the case as far as the superior court is concerned. Miss Guptill's attorneys say that they will appeal the case to the supreme court.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Knew His Business.

"That's the seventh time this morning," said the shoe merchant as a customer left the store, "that you told me in a tone of voice that couldn't escape being overheard that a woman reminded you of 'Trilby.'"

"Yes," replied the new clerk, "and that's the seventh woman that I've sold a pair of shoes to."—Washington Star.

MONEY LOANED.

Local Representatives Wanted.

Our system affords an opportunity to borrow on either personal or real estate security. The plan is superior to building and loan associations. The amount borrowed may be returned in monthly payments without bonus, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum, it affords absolute security to investors with a reasonable guarantee of an annual dividend of from 8 to 10 per cent. We desire to secure the services of energetic, representative men in every community to act as local secretaries. The position will be sufficiently remunerative to amply compensate for services. If you possess the above qualifications write for particulars. Full information regarding our system of making loans as well as investments and agencies will be furnished by addressing S. S. CHAPTER I.

I began at last to think that the ball would never come to an end. I had looked forward to it with absolute dread, for I was well aware of the plan which my uncle and Madam Trelawney had devised between them. I had already recognized that the lady's son was charming in his boyish frankness, but I had seen from the first that it was intended he should propose to me before the night was ended—this night of all nights in the year!—and I was resolved on my part that he should do nothing of the sort.

Truly, he was a gallant boy; I can fancy (for an old woman may surely tell her grandchildren she once was beautiful) that we made a pretty couple as we danced together; I know that madam treated me with quite unusual consideration, and once I caught her watching us with an altogether delightful air of satisfaction. Frank, too, did his dutiful best to offer me such attentions as are proper in a lover; and though I was resolved to thwart his mother, and to keep him from courting rejection, I could not but enjoy the little play in which I was acting. I pictured the surprise of all the good folks who were now watching me, when the news of the morrow should reach them. And, though I longed for the end of the ball, and the more serious adventure which was destined to follow, I found the situation vastly amusing.

Perhaps it was this fact which chiefly helped me to keep poor Frank at a distance.

"You are always laughing at a man," he said, reproachfully, during an interval between two dances; and upon my soul I was hard put to it to find an answer. I could scarcely say that for him I had only pity; and yet this would have been the truth, even though I was well aware that his disappointment would be only for a week or two.

At any rate, when the hour of our departure had come, his devotion was still undeclared, and madam looked upon me a shade less kindly, I thought, when I went to take farewell of her. But, in truth, I was by this time too completely overcome by excitement to notice little details in the comportment of these people. They were all conspirators against my happiness and Dick's. I knew they would be checkmated within the hour, and already I could have laughed in their faces.

My uncle was a great gamester, and never known to lose his coolness. On this night he had gained a large sum at the cards. But, for all that, I fancy he had taken a goodly quantity of liquor during the evening. I noticed that his voice was a little thick. No sooner were we seated in his coach than he lay back in a corner and slept peacefully. Soon he was snoring.

I was thus left alone. Indeed, I could not have talked with him had it been otherwise; yet I now wished I were compelled to try, for the excitement I was in came near to being unendurable. I could see nothing through the windows of the coach; nothing but the dim reflection of my own pale face against a background of utter darkness. Had I been able to take note of the landmarks as we passed them, I might have been calmer; as it was, we had hardly been gone from the house five minutes when I began and continued to feel passionately assured that the very next moment would be productive of the event to which I looked forward so eagerly.

The drive appeared interminable. I began to think that Dick must have come early and grown tired of waiting, and I knew that if he did not keep tryst, my heart would simply break. And then, frightening me despite my eager anticipation of it, came the first sign.

I saw a sudden blackness move past the window. A pistol cracked, and as the carriage ceased to move I heard a man's voice speaking sternly to the coachman and his companion on the box. It struck me the sternness was singularly well acted; for the coachman had been in the plot from the first. He happened to have a fancy for my maid Genefer, and Dick's bride was a superfluity once she had undertaken to make sure of him.

My uncle stirred in his corner, muttering incoherently, but he was still more than half asleep when the door of the coach was opened, and a tall, graceful figure (how well I knew it!) stood dimly outlined against the darkness. The newcomer was masked, and put a pistol to my uncle's head.

"You ride late, sir," he said; and I wondered at the skill with which he disguised his voice. "I presume you carry firearms, and must ask that you will trust them to my keeping."

I can hardly report my uncle's words. Indeed, they were not coherent, so great was his indignation. But he gave up his pistols and the highwayman straightway flung them far into the darkness.

"Your purse," he continued, politely. Then which he had received this also. "Sir Richard Courtney's luck at the cards has passed into a proverb. Tell your friends, sir, that you have given their I. O. U's to one who will never ask for payment, for I have no doubt I shall find them here."

He put the purse into his pocket. "There is a diamond ring, too," he said, "and a watch," and these things he also received and pocketed.

All this time my uncle had been cursing him for a thief, and swearing he would see him hanged within a month upon the highest point of the moorland. As for me, I had enjoyed the proceedings to begin with, but now I began to be afraid. Precious time was being wasted. There were others who must use this road in returning from the ball, and there was the risk of their coming to the rescue of my dear uncle, and spoiling the plans on which so much depended. Moreover, I conceived that my uncle would be hugely angry when he discovered how prettily he had been deceived; it was possible he might be carried by his resentment as to make it appear that this mock robbery was real, and so bring Dick to serious trouble. It was with great relief I saw that it was ended.

The highwayman spoke again. "You have a lady in your company," he said. "I must trouble her—"

"Scoundrel!" said my uncle, angrier than he had been at all. "Do you rob helpless women also? Oh, but you shall hang high!"

"'Beauty,' quoted the highwayman—'and I am sure the lady is beautiful—'Beauty unadorned is best adorned.' I must ask the lady to step from her carriage a moment and give me the jewels of which she surely has no need."

My uncle would have hindered me, but I was past him in a moment, and stepped out of the carriage.

"Your necklet," said the highwayman, holding forth his hand.

I took the pearls from my neck, and pressed his hand in passing it to him. "Be quick!" I said, in a whisper. "Where is your horse?"

He paused a moment. "I saw the gleam of a bracelet," he said. "I must relieve you of that, also."

Again I obeyed him, but the fear that others would come while he still stopped fooling became more urgent. "I'm ready," I whispered, so eagerly that I wonder my uncle did not hear. "Why do you wait?"

Again there was a pause. He appeared a little disconcerted. "And I think you are wearing a ring," he went on.

I took the ring from my finger; as I gave it to him I clutched his hand, secure in the protecting darkness. "Take me!" I said. "Take me!"

Again he was silent for a moment. When he spoke it was in a curiously altered voice, and with a little delighted laugh.

"Dost mean it, sweet?" he cried. "Come, then!"

I gave a scream of alarm (a portion of the play we had arranged together) as he caught me round the waist and landed me upon his horse. A moment later I was clinging to him for dear life as we dashed headlong into the black night and went forward across the moorland. I heard him chuckle as my uncle roared his indignation after us.

Refined Cruelty In France.

The humanitarian lady who will not wear birds in her bonnet or eat flesh meat or permit down pillows to soften her lot in life should turn her attention to a refined cruelty that is at the moment a vogue in certain districts in France. For the manufacture of a certain superfine cloth called zibeline rabbits are plucked alive, and the long fur thus obtained is woven into the aforesaid texture. A particular breed of rabbits is only suitable, and these hapless creatures are carefully tended after the plucking process until their fur grows again. The thing is inexcusably cruel, and no woman would surely encourage the sale or manufacture of such cloth if her heart, not to say sensibility, is in the right place.—Chicago Post.

A Poison Bottle.

A new style of bottle for poisons that is described by The Lancet has the neck on one side and is of such a shape that it will not stand up. Lying on a table, the word poison and the label would always be in view, and by reason of its peculiar form it would not be mistaken for the ordinary bottle.

Dozens of cows' heads in terra cotta, bronze, gold and silver were found at Mycenæ. They are believed to be the symbol of the goddess of the city.

Pocomoke, the designation of a Maryland stream, means "broken by islands."

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dismondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

NOTICE.

To the Township Committee of the Township of Fanwood, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey:
The petition of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company respectfully represents that it desires to construct, operate and maintain a railroad, with one or more tracks and necessary turnouts, to be operated by electricity or other motive power except steam, and to erect necessary poles, conduits and wires, power plant and necessary buildings along and upon the following named streets, avenues, lanes, roads, highways and public places in the township of Fanwood, to-wit:
Beginning at the intersection of Park avenue and Mountain avenue in the township of Fanwood, and running thence southeasterly along Park avenue to its intersection with Midway avenue.
Beginning again at the intersection of Forrest avenue or road with Midway avenue and running thence southeasterly along said Forrest avenue or road, to its intersection with North avenue, near the Fanwood station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.
And for that purpose prays that the permission of your honorable body may be granted to it, to construct, operate and maintain such railway, to be operated by electricity or other motive power, except steam, upon and along the above named streets, avenues, lanes, roads, highways and public places within the said township of Fanwood.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY. $5 A YEAR.

AWARDING THE PLUMS.

Councilmen Distribute the City's Official Patronage.

SOME OF THE SALARIES RAISED.

City Clerk Particularly Favored by an Increase of $300—Corporation Counsel to Be Paid for Extra Work—Complete Refutation of the Republican Organ's Libel on Councilman Frost—It Is Shown that the Editor of that Organ Himself Audited the Bill Which He Denounced as Irregular—Council Determined to Investigate the Water-Supply Rights—Liquor-License Applications—Capt. Grant Still on Top—Much Other Important Business.

Every member attended the session of the Plainfield Common Council last night, and much important business was transacted. A protest was received from property-owners against the pond-hole on Clinton avenue, and that matter was referred to the Board of Health with a request for immediate action. A petition for electric light on West Fifth street between Central avenue and New street was referred to the Committee on Police and Public Lights; one for electric light at the westerly corner of Watchung and North avenues was referred to the same committee with power. Varian & Sohl applied for reduction of the Music Hall license; their plea was referred to the Committee on License. The Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company and Samuel P. Dunn asked for the return of the assessments they had paid on the abandoned project to open Peace street to the brook; on investigation the Clerk was directed to refund the amounts they had paid. A petition for more light at the far end of Arlington avenue was referred to the proper committee.

LIQUOR LICENSES.

The following applications for liquor licenses were received and referred to the License Committee:

Saloon—Charles Smith, Alexander D. Findley, John Rafferty, James Conecily, James Day, John Sullivan.
Wholesale—Frank Linke.
Hotel—John Beerbower, Fred Caspar, John Goff, Jacob Blimm, Wallace Miller.

PLAINFIELD'S HEALTH.

The annual report of the Board of Health was received and filed, showing the following record of deaths:

Feb., 1894, 10; March, 8; April, 13; May, 17; June, 25; July, 24; Aug., 21; Sept., 17; Oct., 17; Nov., 14; Dec., 22; Jan., 1895, 22; total, 210, of which 8 were from accident.

Thirty-six of the deaths had been of persons 70 years old and upwards. Sixty-five had been of persons 5 years old and under. One hundred and nine had been of persons between 5 and 70. Eleven deaths were caused by scarlet fever and diphtheria. From Oct. 1, 1893, to Oct. 1, 1894, Plainfield recorded 90 marriages and 307 births; the births were 155 male and 152 female.

The Board reported that the matter of dumping was restricted to one locality, and that none but licensed scavengers was permitted to operate. The number of deaths was less than for the year before, and the death rate compared favorably with that of other cities.

A STRING TO THIS APPROPRIATION

The Council of 1893 having appropriated $2 000 for a quarantine station, which money was never used by the Board, the Board declared its intention of making use of it during the year in establishing a pest-house; and $1 250 was asked for as this year's appropriation for operating expenses.

Messrs. Fisk and Dumont declared that the pest-house appropriation was for one year only, and that its privilege expired at the close of '93. The Clerk was on their motion directed to notify the Board to that effect, and the report of the Board was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Reports of the Collector, Treasurer, and City Physician were received and filed.

NOMINATIONS BY THE MAYOR.

The following appointments made by Mayor Gilbert were unanimously confirmed:

Corporation Counsel—Craig A. Marsh.
Street Commissioner—Robert A. Meeker.
Overseer of the Poor—Andrew Vanderbeek.
City Physician—M. S. Simpson, M. D.
Chief Engineer of the Fire Department—Thaddeus O. Doane.
First Assistant Engineer—James A. Martin.
Second Assistant Engineer—J. W. Murray, Jr.
Members of the Board of Health—George W. Rockfellow, H. Otis Newman.
Pound Keeper—Fred Wenzel.
Regular Police—George W. Grant, Christian Frederickson, Thomas McCue, Joseph Cooney, Patrick Kiely, Patrick Flanagan, William J. Mattox, James Saunders.
Special Police—S. R. Hope, Taos. Clarkson, Wm. Mundy, John Flynn, Geo. R. Rockafellow, Jacob Kriney, Wm. Dagnall, Chas. Laing, Cadwallader Jones, Morris Higgins, Vincent W. Nash, David F Stewart, Andrew Muir, Edward Maynard, Dennis Carney, William W. Robinson, Joseph Galbraith, Edward Martin, Wm. H. Hillman, Henry P. Pugh, Nathan Pollard, Piney Yetman, Chas. Post, Edwin H. Dobbs, Chas. Giese, James E. Totten.

The nominations of John Hartpence and Nicholas Meyers to be regular policemen and Martin Vanderweg to be special policeman were rererred to the Committee on Police and Public Lights for investigation, their names not having been considered by the Police Board. No special comment was made except in the case of Vanderweg, who was reported by Mr. Fisk as having been expelled from the Fire Department for insubordination.

NEW POLICY AGAINST TAX ADJUSTMENTS

Chairman Dumont of the Committee on Finance reported that the committee advised against granting the application of James E. Martine and others for the apportionment of taxes on the Martine estate. He said that taxes were 12 years delinquent, and that the lands which had been taxed on $175 and $250 an acre as farm lands were now being offered for sale as building lots at $4 000 an acre. He felt that this sort of apportionment was bad policy, and his recommendation that the petition be not granted was adopted. The Committee on Finance was on his motion authorized to confer with the Assessor concerning similar matters, with a view to securing to the city without evasion full payment of taxes of farm lands turned into building lots.

Mr. Westphal of the Committee on Laws and Ordinances reported that in the matter of the encroachment of the Edison Electric Light Company's poles on Plainfield streets the company had been consulted and had asked for a few days grace; this had been granted, and the committee would report later developments.

STREET RAILWAY EXTENSIONS NEXT SESSION

Mr. Fisk of the Committee on Streets reported progress in the matter of street-railway extensions. Several conferences had been had with the company, and the negotiations had been favorable. He would be prepared to report definitely and in full Monday night, Feb. 18, and he therefore moved that when the Council adjourn it be to meet again on that date. This was carried. A meeting is likely to be held also Feb. 25, for the consideration of the liquor-license applications.

A resolution was adopted for the advertising for bids for crushed stone and similar supplies.

The rules of order were adopted as by-laws.

A new ordinance to govern the cleaning of snow and ice from sidewalks was adopted on second reading and ordered engrossed and advertised preparatory to final passage. It is the intention of the Council to have the sidewalks within the prescribed limits kept paved substantially and maintained in perfect passable condition.

It was stated that the commissioners were about ready to report on the Madison avenue opening, and that at the next meeting that matter would be taken up.

LEAVE YOUR RAZZOR TO HOME.

Mr. Westphal introduced an ordinance designed to prohibit the carrying of concealed weapons and to prevent the discharge of firearms in public. Its provisions included that no one could carry razor, butcher knife or other deadly weapon concealed, and it was pointed out that this would prohibit a man from carrying his razor to the barber's to get it sharpened, or his carving knife to the grinder's. Nevertheless the ordinance was adopted on its second reading, and ordered engrossed and advertised, Messrs. Dumont, See and Stockton voting No.

Mr. Dumont reported that Landlord Coward had agreed to add a story to the fireproof vault for the use of the city, at an additional annual rent of $50 The Committee on Finance was instructed to have this improvement accomplished.

MR. FROST VINDICATED.

Mr. Dumont called attention to the publication in The Courier-News of an editorial attacking Mr. Frost. The article said:

There is one very interesting bill on file for printing done by the Engineering News Company of which Mr. Frost is Treasurer. The bill was sworn to as correct by Mr. Frost as Treasurer of the company, and a little later at a Council meeting Mr. Frost as a committee member passed judgment upon it and affixed his name in approval to it. This particular sort of proceeding is specified as irregular by the laws of the State in no ambiguous terms. Would the Plainfield public like further details of this particular transaction? The Courier-News can furnish them.

Mr. Dumont said that it was due to Mr. Frost to explain that this particular piece of work was the publication of the sewer maps, a matter which his house had taken charge of as an accomodation to the Council. He submitted the original bills, showing the actual expense attached to every part of the work, and those bills were from workmen merely employed under the management of Mr. Frost's company, the aggregate bill being just what those workmen had charged for the actual labor and supplies. Mr. Frost's company had no interest in the work whatever, and had not profited thereby. The bill had been endorsed by Messrs. Frost, Erickson and See of the proper committee, and audited by Frank Willetts Runyon, City Clerk and City Auditor. Mr. Dumont moved that in justice to Mr. Frost the copy of the attack be filed with the City Clerk with the original bills attached completely refuting its insinuations. This was adopted.

Six cuspidors and a water cooler were ordered for the city offices.

SALARIES.

The salaries of the city officials were fixed for the year as follows:

Corporation Counsel, $1,000, and in addition such amount as the Council should decide for extra work on the sewer matter, such extra pay to come from the sewer fund. City Clerk, as such, $800, and as City Auditor $400. Treasurer, $700. Assessor, $1,000. Collector, $1,500. Judge, $800. Street Commissioner, $1,700. Captain of Police, $90 a month. Regular police, $60 a month. Special police, 25 cents an hour while on duty. Overseer of the Poor, $500. City Physician, $365. Chief Engineer, $700. 1st Asst., $300. 2d Asst., $100. Drivers, $55 a month to the two who have been in the service more than three years, and $50 to the others.

These salaries are the same as before, with the following exceptions:

Corporation Counsel, hitherto $1,000 without extra. No opposition to the extra allowance.

City Clerk, hitherto $700 for the clerkship and $200 for auditing. Increase advocated strongly by Mr. Fisk, and voted against by Messrs. Dumont, Erickson, Frost and Ginna as too great a raise.

Overseer of the Poor, hitherto $400. Mr. Ginna highly commended the work of Mr. Vanderbeek, and said that that officer by his careful services saved the city each year more than double his salary. The extra $100 should be considered as his due for office rent.

Two three-year drivers, hitherto $50 a month. Mr. Dumont protested that $50 ought to be the top figure for all drivers, as plenty would be glad to get the job for that money. Mr. Erickson said the drivers were on duty all the time, 24 hours a day, and Mr. Frazee said they ought to be paid fully $55.

STILL AFTER THE WATER SUPPLY COMPANY

On resolution of Mr. Fisk, and without debate, the Corporation Counsel was directed to prepare an opinion and submit it to the Council, stating what territory was covered by the charter of the Plainfield Water Supply Company in the language "the township of Plainfield and adjoining towns", what right the Plainfield Water Supply Company has to sell to other companies water from the Netherwood wells, and what right the Plainfield Company has to obtain from the Plainfield watershed water to be delivered to the Union Water Company and the Elizabeth Water Company for consumption in Elizabeth. These, held Mr. Fisk, were important questions which ought to be settled now, once for all.

PURITY OF THE SUPPLY UNQUESTIONED

Mr. Fisk requested that Mr. Frost explain the portion of the Water Committee's recent report on the water-supply investigation referring to the possibility of contamination from surface water.

Mr. Frost said that the Plainfield water was as pure as any on earth, and that the committee had only pointed out the possibility which would result if the pumping were forced in an effort to supply too large a population. The point was that the Plainfield water should be kept for home consumption, and that if a strain were kept up on the wells in the endeavor to send water to the whole county or more the natural filter of the earth contributing to the wells would be damaged and open waterways would be established, admitting water and its impurities without the saving intervention of natural filtration. It was a remote possibility, not a present actuality. No alarm need be felt, and the water could safely and happily be used so long as the capacity of the wells was not overtaxed, which overtaxing was not likely to produce results for years to come.

The ordinances for the regulation of the construction of buildings and for the establishment of the office and duties of the inspector of buildings, were taken from the table and referred back as on second reading for further consideration.

After paying its monthly batch of bills, the Council adjourned.

Euchre Prizes and a Supper.

A delightful progressive euchre party was given by Mr. and Mrs. C. Arthur Baynon of La Grande avenue, Saturday evening. Those present were: Mr and and Mrs Kleinecke, Mr and Mrs John Drayton, Mr and Mrs William Pelletier, Mr and Mrs Louis Ross, Mr and Mrs Joseph Sandford, Jr., Mr and Mrs James Hallock, Mr and Mrs L W Sertell, Jr.

Mrs. Kleinecke won first prize, and Mrs. Hallock second, while Mrs. Drayton secured the consolation.

Of the men, Louis Ross captured first, Mr. Sandford second, and Mr. Pelletier consolation.

A bountiful supper was served by Plainfield's own caterer, the incomparable Max Wiertz.

Teachers Want the Spring Vacation.

Superintendent Maxson of the Public Schools called a meeting recently of all the teachers, to get their views concerning the Spring vacation. Forty were in favor of having the week off, and two were not.

One teacher remarked that the Board ought to pay the doctors' bills if the time was not allowed.

—The meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., will be called at 7:30 sharp this evening, and every member is urged to be present at that time.

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm and that she has also used it for lame back with great success. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

AGAINST THE TROLLEY.

School Trustees Afraid for the Children's Lives.

CAR NOISE ALSO OBJECTIONABLE.

Supt. Maxson Says He's Overworked, and Is Granted an Assistant at 12½ Cents a Day—Only Progress in Fire Escapes—A Schedule of Terms Adopted.

President Probasco called the February meeting of the Board of Education to order last evening at 8, Messrs. Lovell and Finch being present.

Superintendent Maxson, in the absence of Mr. Clark, acted as clerk.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. In that connection resolutions on the death of the late L. E. Clark were read and ordered spread on the minutes and a copy sent to the family.

The budget of monthly bills was presented, approved and ordered paid.

The six-months interest on the notes falling due March 1, was ordered paid.

City Treasurer Illsworth's and Collector Johnson's reports were received and filed. The usual appropriation from State Superintendent Holmes was reported received.

Principal Maxson stated that his time was very much occupied, and that he needed an assistant. He could get a young woman from the High School, and the cost would not be over fifteen cents a day, she to work about an hour a day.

The Board gave him the power to secure the assistant.

Mr. Maxson also stated that efforts were making to secure a passage of the trolley near the school, and that enough signers had been secured for the extension.

The Board thought it advisable to put themselves on record as being opposed to it. The danger to the children should, they held, be considered paramount, though the noise from the cars also would be objectionable.

A motion was made by Mr. Lovell, and adopted, that the Common Council be acquainted with the opposition of the Board, and their objections.

A communication was received from Dr. Whitford of Dunellen in regard to the arrangement of primary scholars attending the schools in Dunellen and Plainfield. It was moved by Mr. Lovell and carried, that the matter be spread on the minutes for reference.

The following schedule as presented by Mr. Maxson was adopted:

Winter term ends March 22, Spring term begins April 8, Spring term ends June 21, Fall term begins Sept. 9, Fall term ends Dec. 20.

Mr. Lovell reported as chairman of the text-book committee, that thus far $2 850 had been expended for books.

Progress was reported by Mr. Lovell for the by-laws committee.

Mr. Finch reported progress for the committee on fire escapes.

The Board adjourned at 8:40.

Euchre in the Park.

Mr. and Mrs. William O. Worth gave a delightful progressive euchre party last evening at their home in Park place in honor of their guest, Miss Pollion of Brooklyn. The first prizes fell to Miss Griffin and Mr. Hebert and the progressive prizes to Miss Murphy and Mr. Griffin. Among the players were: Mrs George F Brown, and the Misses Grace Brown, Lydia Colton, Margaret Long, Sarah Long, Kate Miller, Blanche Miller, Anne Murphy, Jeanette Bryan, Catherine Vail, Edith Harold, Miss Griffin, and Miss French; Messrs Charles E Faber, William Faber, George C Worth, Clarence L Murphy, Frederick Hebert, George Taggart, Eli Long, George Brown, William E MacClymont and Gerald Griffin.

Death of Mrs. Zeglio.

Mrs. Josephine Zeglio of Mt. Bethel, mother of Dr. Zeglio, passed away Monday morning at 2:40, in her seventy-fourth year, as briefly recorded in The Press of yesterday. She had been ailing two years, and last Saturday was taken severely ill.

Mrs. Zeglio was born in Switzerland, and had been many years a resident of Mt. Bethel. Her husband, John Zeglio, died 29 years ago.

Dr. Zeglio has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in his sad bereavment.

The funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2:30, from the Mt. Betnel church.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

KILLED AT THE TANKS.

EDWARD MURPHY DID N'T LOOK FOR THE FAST-FLYING TRAIN.

And When He Stepped from Behind the Freight He Was Hurled to Death Against a Box Car.

Edward Murphy, a ditcher and general laborer, for the past eight years a resident of Dunellen, was struck and instantly killed at the Greenbrook water tanks, a mile and a quarter west of Dunellen station, yesterday afternoon at 2:40.

A standing freight train which was taking water at the Tanks shut off his view of Conductor Dodwell's train No. 33, the westbound local for Bound Brook; and, starting to cross the tracks, Murphy stepped directly in front of the pilot, which picked him up and hurled him through the air until his body struck a car on the sidetrack.

So great was the concussion that death must have been instantaneous.

The remains were taken on board the train, and carried to Bound Brook, being brought back to Dunellen on No. 56 (Conductor Dodwell's east-bound train) which reaches there at 4:40.

The body was fearfully mangled, the head being cut badly, and the left leg almost severed from the body.

John McFadden, with whom decedent had boarded for some time, identified the body; and Middlesex County Physician Carroll of Dayton was notified. Murphy owned a horse and several wagons, but as far as known no other property. He was unmarried, and had but two living relatives, a brother and sister, whose places of residence are unknown. Though no fault attaches to Conductor Dodwell or his crew, yet he seems all unnerved by the sad event.

An Excellent Preacher.

(From The New Brunswick Home News.)

Rev. Mr. Braker of Scotch Plains preached in the Livingston Avenue Baptist Church yesterday to large congregations. The text for his morning sermon was from Psalm 42:5, "Why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me? Hope thou in God." The sermon was replete with comforting thoughts, beautiful illustrations, and earnest solicitations for a closer walk with God. Mr. Braker has a fine pulpit presence and is a most pleasing speaker.

The evening service was in charge of the Christian Endeavor society with special singing and address by Mr. Braker. Miss Addie Kent, the president of the society, led the meeting.

Ex-Congressman Horr to Toast.

The banquet of the Lincoln Association of this county will be held Tuesday evening, Feb. 12, in Lyceum Hall, Elizabeth. The programme that has been arranged assures an occasion of unusual interest. The toasts will be responded to as follows: "Abraham Lincoln", ex-Congressman Roswell G. Horr; "Lincoln and the People", Dr. William Lloyd; "Republicanism of Lincoln", Congressman Fowler; "Democracy of Lincoln", R. V. Lindabury, Esq.

The dinner is for all patriotic citizens who desire thus to honor the memory of Lincoln, and those who desire to participate should remit immediately their name and $6 to M. W. Halsey, 81 Broad street. The list closes tonight.

Studying Other Worlds.

The Astronomy class of the High School went to Bound Brook last evening to examine the moon and stars through a large telescope, the use of which was kindly given by O. P. Loomis, the electrician at the American Engine Works, who resides in Bound Brook. The party that braved the cold to study the heavens consisted of Miss Mabel Force, Miss Etta Raybert, Frederick Corlell, Edgar I Serrell and H. Oscar Nightingale.

Death of John Collins.

John Collins, age 27, died in St. Joseph's Hospital, New York, Monday morning. His father was for years engineer at the Scott Printing Machine Works, and this is the sixth death in that family in three years. The body will be brought to Fanwood by Undertaker Casey tonight, and the funeral will be from St. Mary's Church at a time to be announced in The Press tomorrow.

To Tell of Their Youth.

Mrs. Elizabeth Powell Bond, Dean of Swarthmore College, will give the third lecture of the Friends entertainment course in the old meeting-house, Watchung avenue and Third street, Wednesday evening, Feb. 6, at 8, on "The Youth of Some Eminent Americans." All are cordially invited.

Crushed His Fingers.

John Kriney, a machinist in the Potter Press Works, had a hand badly bruised in the shop, and had to have the crushed fingers dressed at the Muhlenberg Hospital. Amputation was not necessary.

They Sing Here Tonight.

One of the most delightful features of the Pouch Mansion last evening was the singing of the Verdi Ladies Quartette, the audience demanding a recall of each number.—Standard-Union, Brooklyn.

GREENGOODS GANG.

The Swindlers Operating in This Vicinity.

A VICTIM FROM THE SOUTH.

Julius Olfred, a Practitioner from Louisiana, Is Relieved of $300 at the Fanwood Clubhouse—Was Promised $3,000, and Got a Wad of Paper.

The Plainfield police were visited by a stranger yesterday afternoon who complained that he had been robbed by greengoods men.

His name he gave as Julius Olfred, and his home Redwine, La., where he said he was a medical practitioner.

In response to greengoods circulars and letters he had journeyed thither to receive $3 000 for $300. He was met at South Bethlehem yesterday by a heavy-set, dark complexioned young fellow of about 21 years. This chap took a seat behind him in the train to Plainfield, and they were met at the Plainfield station by a Fanwood hackman.

Driven to the Van, or Fanwood clubhouse, on the county road, they were, he says, met at the door and admitted by the proprietor. He says that he was shown into a room where were two elderly men, and that the proprietor locked them all in there, laughing as he turned the key.

$3,000 was counted out to Olfred by the two old men, and he was given a box into which he thought he had seen them place the pile of bills. He paid over his $300, and was escorted to the Fanwood station by the young man from Bethlehem. A ticket was bought for him to Bound Brook, and he was cautioned not to open the box till he got well away from the neighborhood. As soon as he was aboard the train, however, he went to a toilet room, and found the box contained nothing but a pile of paper with a dollar bill on top. He left the train at Plainfield, and Captain Grant and Sergeant Kiely promptly investigated his story.

The strangers had gone on a train to New York, and the proprietor of the Van disowned all knowledge of them and their game. He said they had merely used his place as a meeting place just as any of the traveling public might use it.

Detective Charles W. Dodd of the Jersey Central took the fleeced stranger in hand this morning, because there have been several other just such cases at the Van during the past month or more, and gleaned what information he could in addition to that which he has been carefully gathering for weeks back.

Olfred left for home at 5 this afternoon.

THE CAT SAVED AGAIN.

Kind-Hearted Inspector Chamberlain Rescues Fussy from the Icy Pole-Top.

The cat which was rescued from its lofty perch at the top of a telegraph pole several months ago by Telephone Inspector Herbert Chamberlain, is still alive, thanks to Mr. Chamberlain's kindness of heart. E. H. Clevely, who probably knows more about cats than any other man in town, noticed the cat shivering at the top of a pole on South Second street near the Potter Press Works, and mentioned it to his friend Chamberlain, who went without his dinner to save the animal. A dog had frightened the cat, and as before she had gone to the top of the pole, working her way up through the wires but being unable to come down.

Mr. Chamberlain accomplished the humane feat of rescuing her last night.

Calliope Fire Attachments.

Chief Doane has had designs submitted for a whistle attachment for the fire apparatus, to take the place of gongs on the rolling stock of the department. A set of three chime whistles will be sent for his trial, and they will be tested in use on the Plainfield streets. The idea is to obviate confusion of the fire gongs with those on the trolley cars.

From Hawaii.

The regular meeting of the McAll Auxiliary will be held in the Public Library tomorrow morning at 11. Rev. Thomas L. Gulick, Representative Secretary of the McAll Association, will address the meeting. Mr. Gulick is a native of Honolulu, was a missionary in Hawaii and also in Spain. A large attendance is desired.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Mayor Gilbert is to preside and deliver the opening address at the opening of the new Y. M. C. A. Building Feb. 12.

There were 46 in the gymnasium class last night. Three of the Directors of the Association were among the number who exercised in the afternoon class.

A Fit at the Show.

Lot Marshall had a fit in his box at Music Hall last evening, during the first part of Thatcher and Johnson's performance, and had to be carried to the street, where the fresh air revived him quickly, yet left him so weak that he was taken home in a hack.

THE NEW BOND ISSUE

Foreign Gold, It Is Said, Will Take One-Half.

Negotiations Practically Concluded. No Extra Session of Congress—Mr. Cleveland Says, with the Issue of Bonds, "Confidence" Will at Once Be Restored.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The amount of bonds which the administration contemplates issuing and may give notice of at any time now is $100,000,000 of 4 per cent. to run thirty years. Arrangements, it is believed, have been practically concluded, assuring the government that these bonds will be paid for with foreign gold. It is said that a London syndicate has agreed to take $50,000,000.

The officials are extremely reticent on the subject and decline to either affirm or deny any of the rumors brought to their attention. One rumor which had an apparently good basis was that the bonds for the new issue were already being printed at the bureau of engraving and printing, but like the others, it could not be confirmed.

Bankers Complain.

It is stated that there is much complaint among the New York bankers, who say they have not been fairly treated, especially in view of the way in which they have stood by the treasury in past emergencies. There has been a suggestion that the issue be made $150,000,000, or even $200,000,000, to give them a chance, but according to the very best authority the issue will be that originally contemplated, $100,000,000.

The president has practically decided not to call an extra session of congress. He has said several times in his talks with visitors that the present congress has done more to destroy confidence than anything else. Besides, with the silver men in control of the senate, the president says that nothing could be accomplished. If there should be an extra session the silver men would immediately destroy confidence again and injure our credit abroad.

Will Restore Confidence.

He believes that with the issue of more bonds, which it is expected will be disposed of this week or next, public confidence will be restored, and then when congress adjourns there will be a general revival of business. It is understood that Senator Sherman agress with this view.

Congressmen Disappointed.

Several congressmen-elect who have called on the president naturally asked him about the chances of an extra session, so that they could make their arrangements. The president was very candid in saying that he did not expect to call one.

A PITIABLE SCENE.

Strikers Sent to Jail—Mothers Weep, While Children Cling to Papa.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 5.—The court of special sessions was crowded with hatters from the "Hill," all anxious to learn the fate of four men who were convicted of assault and battery on so called "scabs," who took their places during a recent strike. They heard Judge Kirkpatrick lecture the prisoners in scathing terms and then saw the latter locked up.

The judge said that sooner or later strikers would learn that they could not assault men who wanted to make their living in a lawful manner. Every man had the right to stop work and starve to death if he wished to, but no one might assault another with impunity. The judge then called Victor Sorcossi to the bar and sentenced him to two months. Benjamin Hyman and James Ball each got six months, and Samuel Jacco was also sent up for six months.

The wives of the convicted men, with their children, gathered in one of the jury rooms and a pitiable scene followed. The women screamed and cried, while the forlorn-looking children added their voices to the uproar. Through the kindness of the officers the women were permitted to see their "lords and masters," and then there was another scene of grief. The women are poor and have no means of support, while one of them who seemed to be almost overcome had several small children hanging to her skirts.

Blighted Hopes.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—All hope has been abandoned that the object sighted off South Chicago yesterday morning will prove to be the hull of the lost steamship Chicora. There was little interest shown in South Chicago during the day and only a few persons braved the extremely cold weather to visit the lake shore. Those who did go were unable to see anything on the lake which resembled a disabled boat.

St. Patrick's Alliance.

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 5.—The national convention of St. Patrick's Alliance of America began a two days session here, John P. Lee, of Orange, N. J., presiding. A banquet was held last night at which the city and county officials were guests.

Earnings Decreasing.

Montreal, Feb. 5.—Canadian Pacific railway earnings for the week ending January 31, were $332,000 against $384,000 for the same period last year, a decrease of $52,000.

DELAY SAVES LIFE.

Could Not Sail on the Steamer Elbe. A Father's Joy.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 5.—Edmund Nebeling, a jeweler of this city, has learned that his wife and three-year-old child, who were to have sailed on the ill-fated Elbe, did not do so on account of a delay in the money order department. They sailed on Saturday in the steamship Scandia, from Hamburg.

Nebeling has been in this country about six months. Almost as soon as he arrived he secured work, and had saved enough money to send for his wife and child and provide a home for them here. Nebeling wrote to his wife about three weeks ago enclosing a foreign money order for the amount of passage money, telling her if she hurried, he supposed she might catch the Elbe.

Having heard nothing from her, he supposed she had received his letter and money and had sailed as suggested. Accordingly, when he heard that the Elbe was lost, he was frantic. He could not find his wife's name in the Elbe's sailing list, but could not be persuaded that she was not among the missing. Finally he cabled to friends in Hamburg, and to his great joy the dispatch has been answered by his wife, explaining why she could not sail on the Elbe. There had been delay in forwarding the duplicate money order, and the postal authorities had refused to pay the order till they received the duplicate. When they got it it was too late to catch the Elbe, and Mrs. Nibeling had to stay in Hamburg till last Saturday.

Nebeling's fellow-employes say that from the time he knew the Elbe was lost, until he received his wife's cablegram, he behaved like one bereft of reason. This morning, however, when interviewed, through an interpreter, Nebeling was all smiles. He expects his wife and child early next week.

CHEERS FOR PRESIDENT DIAZ.

Workingmen Satisfied with Their Government.

City of Mexico, Feb. 5.—About 4,000 workingmen marched through the streets of the city yesterday and eventually gathered in front of the National palace. They greeted President Diaz with loud cheers and presented to him an address praising the government's attitude in the boundary dispute with Guatemala. In his reply the president said that the diplomatic controversy presented no new features as would render war inevitable. The enthusiasm with which he was received gratified the president greatly and in private conversations he told the workingmen's committee that he should always feel bound to them for their demonstration of loyalty.

It is stated semi-officially that the outlook for peace is more hopeful than ever, Guatemala having in the main agreed to Mexico's demands. The general opinion now is that there will be no war. The reports in several papers that war would be declared were mere guesses. Moreover, war can be declared only by congress, and that body has not even been convoked. Stories of Central American alliances against Mexico are discredited here, although it is probable that Honduras, Costa Rica and Nicaragua agreed to lend moral support to Guatemala.

WHOLESALE ARREST.

Non-Union Men in Trouble Charged with Riot—Attempted Murder.

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 5.—All of the non-union employes of the Buckeye Glass works were arrested on warrants sworn out by union men, charging riot as a result of the shooting several days ago. An attempt to assassinate Manager Humphreys, of the works, was made by an unknown man, two shots whizzing by Humphrey's head. There is great excitement and fears of serious trouble at the hearing of non-unionists, which is set for this evening.

A Cold Day for Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—The official thermometer registered 13 degrees below zero yesterday—the coldest day of the winter by four degrees. The cold wave froze many ears, hands and feet, and the police found M. Carmody frozen to death at 132 West 18th street during the morning. Prof. Moore, the chief of the weather bureau here said the wave covered almost the entire country, the northwestern states and Canada getting the worst of it. Fifty-two degrees below zero was reported from across the border.

Presented with a Gold Watch.

Ansonia, Conn., Feb. 5.—Through Supt. Beach, of the Naugatuck division, N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., the latter road presented a handsome gold watch to Robert Dover, night watchman, at Wallace & Sons' factory. The latter gentleman, on the morning of Nov. 2 last discovered the canal washout on the tracks, and notified the railroad officials. The watch is inscribed to Mr. Dover, for "his thoughtful kindness and his word of warning in the hour of peril."

C. B. L.'s Elect Officers.

Baltimore, Feb. 5.—The Catholic Benevolent Legion of Maryland held its twelfth annual session yesterday and elected officers for the ensuing year. Delegates were prsent from all parts of the state and an interesting contest developed over the presidency. Joseph S. Hevisler was the successful candidate. Annual reports were read and the new officers installed.

Carpenters Organize.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 5.—A new union of contractors has been formed in this city in opposition to the Amalgamated branch, an English organization. The latter body refuses to join the trades council of this city and trouble is caused thereby. Labor men of this city watch with interest bills in the legislature to amend the mechanics lien law.

Glass Factories To Shut Down.

Patterson, N. J., Feb. 5.—It is said that all the window glass factories are preparing to shut down for six weeks, in order to raise prices. Not a thought is given about those who are thrown out of employment for this time in midwinter or how they can raise food—Give us this day our daily bread.

General Manson Dead.

Frankfort, Ind., Feb. 5.—Gen. Manson died here yesterday. He was a veteran of the Mexican war.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS

The Omnibus Claim Bill Before the House.

Agricultural Measure Passed with a Total Appropriation of $3,277,150—The District of Columbia Bill Occupies the Senate's Attention But Did Not Reach a Final Vote.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The week opened with a refusal on the part of the house to accept the programme of business outlined for it by the rules committee. The conference report on the army appropriation bill as agreed to and bills were passed granting the right of way through the Indian territory to the Arkansas & Northwestern Railroad company and providing justices of the peace for the territory of Alaska.

Mr. Catchings (dem., Miss.) reported an order from the rules committee alloting the day to the consideration of an omnibus claim bill providing for the settlement of claims amounting to $718,863. The claims were for certain stores and supplies by the court of claims under the act of 1883 known as the "Bowman act."

The opponents of the bill characterized the attempt to bring before the house as a gross violation of all rules and precedents, holding that if the rules committee had power to do so the various committees of the house might just as well be abolished.

The previous question on the rule was ordered, and it was defeated by a vote of 145 to 95.

The Agricultural Bill.

The agricultural bill was taken up and passed. It carries a total appropriation of $3,277,150.

Speaker Crisp laid before the house the correspondence regarding the recent revolt in Honolulu, called for by the resolution, adopted last Friday.

The 26th instant was set apart for the delivery of eulogies upon the life and services of the late Representative Post of Illinois.

It was agreed, at the request of Mr. Springer, that the house should meet at 11 o'clock to-day, Wednesday and Thursday, the days on which the currency bill is to be considered.

In the Senate.

The expected debate in the senate on the financial question did not materialize, as Mr. Gorman (dem., Md.) desired all the time that could be spared to be given to the consideration of the District of Columbia appropriation bill. That bill did occupy the whole of the session up to 6 o'clock, but it did not reach a final vote. In the last moments, just before adjournment, there was an angry altercation between Senators Butler (dem., S. C.) and Chandler (rep., N. H.); but it went no farther than an interchange of disagreeable remarks, they having been cut off by a declaration by the presiding officer (Mr. Blanchard, Dem., La.), that a pending motion for adjournment had been carried. The district appropriation bill went over without action till 1 o'clock to-day.

The status of the other general appropriation bills in the senate is as follows:

In conference—Pensions, fortifications, army. In committee on appropriations—Indian, sundry civil. Reported to the senate and awaiting action—Diplomatic and consular service postoffice. Passed by both houses and became law—Military academy bill.

REBELS CAUSE TROUBLE.

The Capture of Honda—Many Soldiers Killed.

Panama, Feb. 5.—The Star and Herald says: "The rebels attacked the government encampment at Papayo and after hard fighting were defeated and dispersed, leaving many of their number dead on the field. General Reyes, commander of the government forces, has captured Honda, in the state of Tolima. The hebel General Aldana and ninety of his soldiers were killed."

Chief Arthur's Advice.

San Francisco, Feb. 5.—Chief Arthur and the executive committee of the engineers held several conferences with Southern Pacific officials yesterday, but as far as can be learned no adjustment was reached. Chief Arthur's advice now is to accept whatever compromise the men can get, but this is not agreeable to many of the men who favor striking unless the company returns to the old wage schedule.

Ice Obstructs Navigation.

Baltimore, Feb. 5.—Not in years has the ice in the harbor, river and bay been so troublesome as at present and the cold wave which reached here yesterday is likely to increase the obstruction to navigation. Ice, all the way from one to six inches thick, is plentiful from Fort Carroll to Sandy Point and Magothy river, and a number of vessels ready for sea are still in port unable to get out.

Meeting of Creditors.

Buffalo, Feb. 5.—A meeting of the creditors of D. F. Morgan, Son & Allen, who failed last week, was held in the store when a statement of assets and liabilities was submitted. The assets amount to $240,000 and the liabilities to $192,000. A committee was then appointed to compare the stock with the inventory and an adjournment was taken until late this afternoon.

A Clew Obtained.

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 5.—A clew has been obtained regarding the identity of the mail robber who stole the Hartford mail pouch at the railroad station in this city on the evening of Dec. 24 last. Postoffice Inspector O'Brien is in town and is running down the clew.

MUNYON'S MANY FRIENDS.

ALL APPROVE HIS NEW IDEAS.

The Eminent Professor Ably Supported in His Fight for Humane Methods.

Mrs. Raynor, of 792 East One Hundred and Forty-fifth st., New York City, says: "I have suffered terribly from dyspepsia in its worse form. The lightest diet produced death-like sickness. Added to this I had a severe attack of rheumatism, with swelling of the limbs and excruciating pain. My heart became affected, and I was sinking so rapidly from exhaustion that my physicians gave my case up as hopeless. At this time Mr. Raynor brought me some of Munyon's Remedies and encouraged me to try them. The benefit from their use was miraculous. I improved at once and was out of danger in a few days. My improvement was continuous and now I can thank Professor Munyon for a complete and wonderful cure."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Co. of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25c. a bottle.

COTTOLENE IS MADE TO EAT

Made from clarified oil, expressed from Cotton Seed—as pure and golden as the Southern Sunshine which produces it.

For convenience in handling, there is added to this oil enough beef suet to make it a semi-solid.

The combination of these two pure natural products makes Cottolene, a shortening and cooking fat, with which in healthfulness, cleanliness, flavor and economy, nothing in the world can compare.

IMITATIONS are MADE TO SELL

To sell on the merits of the genuine. To sell by substitution; or by deception. To sell to the injury of the genuine, to the dissatisfaction of the consumer, to the detriment of the dealer, to the loss of all concerned—except the scheming counterfeiter himself.

If you wish the best food and the best health, you should insist that your cooking be done with genuine Cottolene. Refuse all counterfeits.

Sold in 3 and 5 pound pails.

Made only by N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., CHICAGO, and PRODUCE EXCHANGE, NEW YORK.

The New Year's Arrival.

The old is gone, the new is here. It is a fitting symbol of our methods in merchandising. We believe in having the new, the best—never let the stock rot. It is this energy and this constant turning over of goods that enables us not only to offer the best, but the lowest prices as well.

ARE YOUR EYES WEAK?

Why So Many People Have Dim Vision.

GREAT DANGER OF WEAK EYES LEADING TO TOTAL BLINDNESS.

Some Facts About the Eyes Which Many People Do Not Know.

Nothing in this world is so important as our eye-sight. The very thought of becoming blind sends a thrill of horror through our souls. And yet most everybody has more or less weakness of the eyes. And they go right on, day after day, straining and abusing them, little thinking of the fearful danger they incur of becoming blind. For weak eyes may easily become totally blind.

Hard work, tired nerves, bad blood and run down systems weaken the eyes. Following is the most wonderful cure of blindness on record. Mrs. Carrie I. Reed, of Jay Bridge, Me., says:

"In January I began to fail. I was all tired out and overworked. My nerves became very weak, and I was very nervous. Finally I began to lose my eye-sight, and I grew steadily worse

"I could not see to sew or knit, and I could not see to do my housework without the aid of my glasses. I had to wear them much of the time. My eyes were in a very bad condition. People told me I must go to an oculist and have my eyes examined and treated.

MRS. CARRIE I. REED.

"I had heard of the wonderful cures performed by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and determined to try it, and see what it would do for me. I had not taken but half a bottle before I was very much better. I could see ever so much better, and felt better every way. When I had taken two bottles my eye-sight was as good and clear as ever it was, and I always had the best of eye-sight until this winter.

"In a short time I was entirely cured of all my troubles by that wonderful remedy, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It has done a great thing for me. My eyes did not look like eyes, they looked like blind eyes, they were so red and inflamed before being cured. It is a wonderful cure, and it is a wonderful medicine. I shall praise far and near."

Here is an additional danger for weak-nerved, tired-out people. Don't neglect those weak eyes, weak nerves, and run-down systems, but get well by taking the great medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

Why waste time in trying uncertain and untried remedies, where here is a physician's prescription, a discovery made by the greatest living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene of 35 West 14th St., New York City. If you take this medicine you can consider yourself under Dr. Greene's direct professional care, and you can consult him or write to him about your case, freely and without charge. This is a guarantee that this remedy will cure, possessed by no other medicine in the world.

MAY CAUSE A BLOCKADE

Japs Pressing Forward in the Gulf of Pechili.

Serious Matter for China—Anxiety for Peiyang's Squadron—Tobacco Famine at Port Arthur—Chinese Kill Their Leader—Reconciled to the Situation.

London, Feb. 5.—Since the capture of Wei-Hai-Wei by the Japs it is reported that it is their intention to blockade the gulf of Pechili. The distance across the mouth of the gulf from Port Arthur on the east to Wei-Hai-Wei on the west, is only 110 miles. Twenty ships can easily close it, and they need not be ships of war. Good, swift steamers with a couple of guns on board will amply serve the purpose.

To China the blocking of the gulf would be a very serious matter. Before the days of steamers, Pekin used to procure its supplies of rice and salt by the Grand canal, an inland route, secure against interruption by a foreign enemy. But for the past twenty-five years the capital has depended upon communication by sea and by the Peiho river, and its plight would be emphatically embarrassing were the gulf of Pechili blocked.

Where Is Their Squadron.

All sorts of contradictory rumors are circulated as to the whereabouts of the Peiyang squadron. At one time it is said to be at Snanhaikwan; at another, it is alleged to have escaped from the gulf of Pechili and taken refuge in the Yangtsze river under the guns of the Woosung forts; and then again it is represented as anchored off the Taku fortifications at the mouth of the Reiho river.

But there seems to be no doubt that it is lying in Wei-Hai-Wei. Japanese men-of-war have reconnoitered that formidable fortress at very close quarters, and all report the presence of Admiral Ting's ships.

May Make a Blow at Transports.

Thus varying the painful monotony of his previous inaction. The Japanese hope to be able to intercept him if he seeks to fly from Wei-Hai-Wei, and to force him to stand to his guns once more. But the possibility of accomplishing that is doubtful. It is not easy to imprison ships in a harbor protected by fortresses mounting guns dangerous to an enemy at five miles' range, especially when, as in the case at Wei-Hai-Wei, the entrance to the port is masked by an island. It will be most interesting to observe the manoeuvering of the Japanese fleet to entrap their enemy. They have to work in midwinter among the snow storms and fogs of a proverbially tempestuous sea. Until the Peiyang squadron is wiped out of fighting existence, China will feel that her coasts are not completely at the mercy of the foe.

Tobacco Famine.

Something very like a tobacco famine prevails in Port Arthur, Talien and Autung. The cheapest grade of Japanese leaf purchaseable in Tokio for 10 sen (5 gold cents) a pound, sells in those places for twenty-five times that price. Coolies of the land transport corps recently arrived from Japan, are able to sell whatever tobacco they have brought with them at 2 sen per pipe, which is something like a sen a whiff, the Japanese pipe being a most miniature affair.

The Japanese have found an immense stock of coal at Port Arthur; enough, it is said, to supply the wants of the army and navy for six months. The greater part of the coal is Japanese from which fact it appears that the coal must have been transhipped at Shanghai before hostilities commenced, since the export of Japanese coal to Chinese ports was prohibited.

Latest intelligence from the disturbed district says that the people themselves have killed the Tonghak leader, that his head has been identified by the Japanese sent to quell the insurrection, and that the rebels have dispersed.

Chinese Reconciled.

From Port Arthur, Chincow and Talien comes news that the Chinese civilian inhabitants have become perfectly reconciled to the situation, and are carrying on their usual avocations in peace and contentment. In fact, they are said to have already discovered that Japanese rule, with its freedom from all extortion and its complete guarantees for the security of life and property, is far preferable to Chinese.

The diet resumed its sittings in Tokio on the 8th of January after the New Year's recess. It is plain that all political parties in the diet are agreed as to the expediency of avoiding any semblance of dissension at the present crisis. The diet's session will pass quietly and uneventfully, for the first time in the history of Japanese parliamentary institutions.

His Solemn Oath.

At the instance of Count Inouye, Japanese representative in Seoul, the king of Korea has made solemn oath before the toombs of his ancestors to observe fourteen pledges. His majesty promises to abandon all reliance upon China and hold firmly by the independence of his kingdom; to enact a law of royal succession clearly distinguishable between the sovereign house and its branches.

Will Sell Under Foreclosure.

Philadelphia, Feb. 5.—The home office of the Western New York & Pennsylvania railroad, which will be sold under foreclosure at Pittsburg to-day, is in this city. R. G. Decoursey, the receiver of the road, was formerly president and was appointed to his present position when the road went into a receiver's hands in 1893. The foreclosure sale was not unexpected as it is a part of the plan of reorganization and the reorganization committee will buy the road in for the present stockholders.

Military School Destroyed by Fire.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 5.—The Culver academy, a military school on the shore of Lake Maxincukee in Marshall county, was destroyed by fire yesterday. No lives were lost.

CHARGES UNFOUNDED.

Statement of the Lloyd Company Regarding the Elbe's Officers.

New York, Feb. 5.—The agents of the North German Lloyd sent the following statement to the press regarding charges made against the officers and crew of the Elbe, and the London agents of the company by three of the passengers who survived the disaster:

"The charges that have been made are unfounded according to our investigations. Nobody saw Hofman's child in boat No. 2. When the port side boat No. 6, which contained Miss Boecker, besides other passengers, was filled by the waves in lowering, the orders were heard that women and children should be taken to boats on the starboard side where they found protection against the strong wind, the starboard being the lee side. The assistant purser, the steward Kobe and Third Officer Stollberg drew Miss Boecker into the boat No. 2.

"Miss Boecker writes as follows:

"'Kobe is one of the men who saved me. Order prevailed on deck. There were very few cries heard. I had hold of a piece of lumber and cried for help when the lifeboat was in my neighborhood. I was observed and an oar was stretched out to me. My dress was so heavy from the water that the men did not succeed until after considerable time in drawing me into the boat. Capable seamen were in the boat who fought courageously against storm and waves.'

"Vevara's statement is apparently correct. His niece was not a cabin passenger but a steerage passenger and was in the forward steerage in the compartment for single women.

"Keller, Wallis & Co., agents of North German Lloyd in London, telegraph:

"'Three passengers received from us three pounds each to pay their fares, London to Liverpool and little extras. All their expenses up to leaving London for Liverpool being also paid by us and clothing supplied them at Lowestoft. They were second class on the Elbe but we forwarded them in first cabin on the Umbria. The United States consul general tells us that passengers applied to him for advice as to accepting our offer of passage on the Umbria. He says they expressed no desire to make any official statement nor made none nor any complaints.'"

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

Wishes To Promote Peace Between China and Japan.

London, Feb. 5.—The queen's speech on the occasion of the opening of parliament to-day was read at the ministerial banquets last night. The document refers to the continued efforts to promote peace between China and Japan, the conclusion of the treaty with France in regard to the African Hinterland, and the prospect of an early settlement of the question of the Russia nboundary line in Central Asia.

The speech also expresses regret at the Armenian outrages, asks for an increase of the financial provision for strengthening the navy. The bill programme makes no reference to the question of the veto power of the house of lords. The Irish land bill is placed before the Welsh church disestablishment bill.

LEHIGH VALLEY EMPLOYES.

Discontented Men May Cause a Sympathetic Strike.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Feb. 5.—The Lehigh Valley officials make no secret of the fact that they fear discontented employes at the prospect shaft will gradually induce the men of the company's other mines hereabouts to quit work. Committees from the Prospect company men have been secretly visiting the Harry E. and Forty Foot collieries with this purpose in view.

Their efforts, however, show no success but it would not be a surprise if the miners visited should suddenly go out on a sympathetic strike. Such action on the part of Lehigh Valley miners would probably affect other workings. The Prospect men quit work without assigning any cause of grievance and thus far they have not sought a conference with the officials.

Had McAllister a Will?

New York, Feb. 5.—According to court proceedings there is doubt whether Ward McAllister left a will. Lawyer Henry H. Anderson appeared in the surrogate's court and got an order allowing him to open the private safe of Mr. McAllister in the presence of the secretary or president of the Mercantile Safe Deposit company, where the safe is. Lawyer Anderson made affidavit that Mrs. McAllister and the children did not know whether Ward McAllister left a will or not. Mrs. McAllister has given Lawyer Anderson the key and combination to the safe.

Receiver Appointed.

Riverhead, L. I., Feb. 5.—There has been a voluntary dissolution of the Long Island Steamboat company. Captain Samuel Griffin is made temporary receiver. The company is owner of the steel steamer Long Island, which runs between Sag Harbor, Greenpoint and New London. The Long Island was built two years ago, at a cost of $60,000.

The Debs Trial.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Several out-of-town witnesses were examined at the session of the Deb's trial. They testified to scenes of violence. The defense objected to this whole line of testimony on the ground that the acts were committed outside of the jurisdiction of the court trying the case. The objection was overruled.

Kittanning in Peril.

Kittanning, Pa., Feb. 5.—Arthur Kirk, of Pittsburg, who superintended the dynamiting of the ice gorge for the Ford City company, believes Kittanning will be swept away by the unexpected flood.

Will Resume Work.

Warren, O., Feb. 5.—An agreement has been reached between the Niles Tin Plate manufacturers and their employes and the plant will be started to-day after a long idleness.

Hamilton Bank Is Solvent.

New York, Feb. 5.—President Clark, of the American Exchange bank, says that the Hamilton bank of Brooklyn is solvent and its finances sound in every respect.

LABOR MEN DISPERSED

No Demonstration Allowed at Brooklyn's City Hall.

Crowds Forced To Move on—Thousands Assemble on the Streets of the City—Heads Cracked by the Police—Wires Cut—Large Numbers Sign the Petition.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 5.—It was 1:20 p. m., when word was given the strikers who were assembled at their headquarters, Mugge's hall, to march upon the city hall. There were 300 people in the building and as many more in the street in front. They swung into Fulton street and started down toward the seat of municipal government. The men marched by twos, threes or by the half dozen. People on the sidewalks cheered them, and the men cheered back except when a trolley car manned by non-union men dashed through their ranks. Then they shouted "scab!" and shook their fists at motormen and conductors.

Several hundred men who were hanging about the saloons and street corners in the vicinity of the city hall joined the procession, so when the crowd entered city hall square, it was about 1,000 strong. Scattered about the triangular opening in which the city hall stands were nearly 1,000 people attracted out of curiosity and who were kept moving along the sidewalks by 200 policemen, under Captains Campbell, Short, Brennan and Leavey. Inspector McKeller was in charge of the police arrangements. He had a squad of twenty-five mounted police in reserve in the yard back of the municipal building, and 100 patrolmen in the First precinct station house about three blocks away.

It was 1:45 p. m., when the procession reached the city hall. It passed down Fulton street to its junction with Court street and turning the sharp angle passed up Court street until the procession was lapped about the little three-cornered plaza in the centre of which the bronze statue of Henry Ward Beecher stands. Then the men halted. They stood in the street facing the city hall, and pressed forward as if to overcome the few policemen on the plaza. For a moment there was something like a crowd in front of the city hall.

Probably two thousand people faced the main entrance. Then one hundred bluecoats held in reserve at the station house marched upon the plaza, and deploying to the right and left with night sticks drawn, pushed the crowd back to the opposite curb. The mounted police in two detachments rode through Fulton and Court streets and helped drive the people from in front of the city hall.

The Crowd Melted Away.

There was only one case of actual clubbing. One of the mounted officers not satisfied with the slow movements of the men on Court street near Montague, swung his club and struck Peter McDonald, laying open his scalp. The man was taken to the station house and his wound was dressed by an ambulance surgeon. Daniel Linden was arrested at Fulton street and Boerum Place for refusing to move on.

The crowd was forced into the side streets off the square and at 2 o'clock the space around the city hall was clear. Martin J. Connelly did not march to the city hall with his followers. He waited until 2:30 when he entered the city hall by the rear door. Under his arm, wrapped in a newspaper, was a bundle of petitions which he said numbered 3,000 and contained over 50,000 names, secured yesterday. He found two or three labor leaders in the lobby of the city hall. Accompanied by Collins and Holbrook, of the executive committee, Connelly entered the common council chamber and handed his petitions and the resolution he desired passed to Alderman Walsh. The committee then withdrew.

The council chamber was filled with strikers and their friends, on hand to see what disposition the city fathers would make of the resolution to revoke the licenses and franchises of the Brooklyn City and Atlantic Avenue Railroad companies.

Three Thousand Petition.

After considerable routine business had been transacted, Alderman A. T. Walsh sent up to the desk a preamble and resolution, accompanied by 3,000 petitions praying for its passage, demanding the revocation of the franchises and licenses of the Brooklyn City and Atlantic Avenue railroads. The preamble recited that the common council of the city of Brooklyn had granted to the Brooklyn City Railroad company and the Atlantic Avenue Railroad company leave to construct, maintain and operate certain surface car lines, by means of animal power, through various streets and avenues of Brooklyn, for the accommodation and benefit of the citizens and taxpayers of the city, and had, by resolution of Jan. 11, 1892, granted the companies leave to change their motive power from animal to electricity; and that since Jan. 15, 1895, the companies have failed to operate their lines, and have placed whatever cars have been operated in the control of unskilled, inexperienced and incapable motormen.

Received a Scalp Wound.

Aside from the gathering at the city hall, there was no change in the strike situation. Two or three assaults upon motormen and conductors were reported and several collisions between trolley cars and trucks occurred. One motorman was sent to the hospital with a scalp wound, inflicted by strikers and the police furnished the surgeons with two cases for scalp treatment.

The February grand jury was sworn in and charged to see to it that whoever trampled upon the law be brought to justice. Justice Gaynor granted a writ of alternative mandamus against the Atlantic Avenue Railroad company.

Shot His Sister-in-Law.

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 5.—Family troubles caused Frank Atkinson, a railroad brakeman, to shoot his sister-in-law, Lena Sitter, killing her instantly. Then he shot himself three times, twice in the breast and once in the head, inflicting fatal wounds.

PLAINFIELD HEARS "FAUST".

Reader Riddle and Organist Taft Give a Finished and Artistic Rendition.

The Seventh-Day Baptist Church was crowded to its utmost capacity yesterday afternoon by the members of the Monday Afternoon Club and their guests who had come from the remotest parts of town to hear George Riddle read from Goethe's "Faust". By 3, the time set for the reading, there was not a seat to be had in any part of the body of the church, and people were obliged to content themselves with chairs in the church parlors, where it was impossible even to see the reading desk, but Mr. Riddle's voice made even such seats far preferable to absence, as it carried to the farthest corners with great ease and perfect clearness. The audience consisted of about 900 women and 9 men, the latter being fully repaid for their temerity by Mr. Riddle's delightful performance and the excellent music by Mr. Taft which accompanied it.

George Riddle is too-well known among cultivated people to need any introduction here, and any criticism of his reading would be presumptuous; suffice it to say that his selections from the poem were most fortunate. He read all the more dramatic portions, and succeeded in keeping the thread of the story, although of course but very little of the poem could be read in the limited time at his disposal. Among the scenes that he read were: Faust's Soliloquy, the first scene of the play as of the opera; Faust and the Poodle, The Invocation, Faust and Mephistopheles; The vision of Margaret; Mephistopheles and the Witches; The rejuvenation of Faust; The Garden scene, and the presentation of the casket in Margaret's room; Mephistopheles' Serenade and the duel between Faust and Valentine; Margaret's repentance; The Cathedral scene; The scene in the Dungeon, and the final deliverance of Margaret by the Heavenly Hosts and the worsting of Mephistopheles.

Mr. Riddle's control of voice and variety of gesture were shown to best advantage in the scene with the witches, which was a truly remarkable performance. His Mephistophelian laugh together with a most sinister expression which he assumed while reading the devil's lines provoked many rounds of applause. Taken altogether his reading was a most finished and artistic preformance.

The music by Frank Taft of New York was a pleasant feature of the afternoon, and the new organ of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church was heard to great advantage. His selections were chiefly from Gounod's Faust, but he also played some of the music from Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust", and one of Schubert's songs. Many people were inconsiderate enough to talk through the music numbers so that the pianissimo passages were completely drowned out several times. The ballet music and the grand march received the most applause probably because they were recognized, certainly not on their merits, while the trio and finale from the fifth act, which is one of the most beautiful parts of the opera, was made entirely ineffective by the ill-timed applause when Mr. Riddle sat down for the last time.

Taken altogether, however, the afternoon was one of the most successful of the many delightful ones provided by the managers of the Monday Afternoon Club, to whom is due a vote of thanks for this campaign against unculture.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The Emerald Beneficial Association will meet tomorrow night in the Young Men's Lyceum.

—Spite of Devoe's predictions for a mild day, this is zero weather, nd coldest day of the season.

—Music Hall was crowded last night and everybody said 'twas the greatest show that even George Thatcher had ever produced.

—Kayser's pond is again the scene of pleasure and fun. The large trees have kept the snow from falling on the ice, and skating is fine.

The Arthurs Acquitted.

Yesterday before the Criminal Court in New Brunswick David Arthur, Walter Arthur, and David Arthur, Jr., of North Plainfield, were placed on trial for the alleged stealing of doors, sashes and blinds from a building at Iselin. The State was represented by Senator Adrain and the defendants were represented by Geo. W. DeMeza. After a long and tedious trial the case was presented to the jury. The Court instructed the jury to render a verdict without leaving their seats. The jury immediately returned a verdict of not guilty.

O. W. O. Hardman, sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North ends. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

AT REST

Andrew G. Slevin.

The funeral obsequies of the late A. G Slevin were held in St. Mary's Church at 10 this morning, Rev. Father Smyth being the celebrant. Surpliced acolytes were in attendance and the full choir was present. A profusion of beautiful flowers filled the atmosphere with their sweetness.

By the special request of decedent's mother, Miss May Flanagan sang Calvary, the rendition being very solemn and effective.

In the sanctuary there were present Very Rev. Father O'Connor, Vice General of the Diocese, of Seton Hall College, and Rev. Father Stafford, also of Seton Hall, both of whom have been friends of the decedent's family for years.

Rev. Father Murphy preached the funeral sermon, taking as his text John xi: 23-25. "Jesus said unto her, thy brother shall rise again, * * * I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in Me though he were dead, yet shall he live."

Speaking briefly of the somewhat unusual circumstance of a minister of the church delivering a funeral sermon Father Murphy alluded most feelingly to the great and almost overpowering sorrow which fills the heart on so sad an occasion, and reminded his hearers of the great consolation afforded by an unwavering faith in religion. No words of holy writ seem better calculated to console the sorrow-stricken soul than those of the text. The immortal soul awakens to true life, and death is swallowed up in victory.

The words of Holy Job should be the words of every Christian soul, "I know that my Redeemer liveth". The memory of the short but fruitful life of him to whom we here pay the last tribute of love, and who was at once a scrupulous attendant at church, a devoted son, a loving brother, a grand husband and a model citizen, cannot but be a sacred one to all who knew him, and we surely have every reason to hope that he found eternal peace with God.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure.

REMOVAL.

Dr. Lighthill begs leave to give notice that he has removed to

NO. 132 CRESCENT AVE.

(a few doors from his former location) where he can be consulted on all chronic diseases of whatever name and nature.

Dr. Lighthill refers with pardonable pride to the success of his practice in Plainfield and submits below a few of the many testimonials which he has received from grateful patients. A mass of similar ones can be seen at his office.

AN ALMOST MIRACULOUS CURE.

The Statement of Mr. Edward Teel, Jr., of Dunellen, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

From a sense of duty I desire to call public attention to the almost miraculous cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in the case of my wife. For eleven years she had been afflicted with piles of an unusual severe and distressing character. She suffered every day of her life the most intense pain, attended with frequent and profuse hemorrhage. This state of things debilitated her entire system until she became a perfect wreck of her former self.

We made every effort to obtain a cure but they all resulted in bitter disappointment, although a number of physicians of excellent reputations for skill in that direction had treated her case. She grew worse and worse all the time, the pain became perfectly unbearable and I felt she could not bear the strain of her condition much longer. In this extremity, a friend of mine, Mr. W. E. Dilts, a resident of Roselle, N. J., a passenger conductor on the New Jersey Central told me that he had been similarly affected, and had been permanently cured by Dr. Lighthill, after other medical skill had failed. He assured me that the doctor would cure my wife, no matter how severe her case may be, and his prediction proved perfectly correct. In spite of her desperate condition, Dr. Lighthill, I am glad to say, has effected a complete and perfect cure in her case, and has given her new life.

Since the cure has been effected she has gained in health and strength and is so improved in appearance that her friends scarcely recognize her. They all consider her cure as almost miraculous, and Dr. Lighthill's praise is heard on every side. Our gratitude to Dr. Lighthill is unbounded and we only hope that other sufferers may be benefited by this publication.

EDWARD TEEL, JR.

A Flattering Testimonial from Colonel John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing with which I was afflicted.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 3, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly; they were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 132 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOMAS CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card From Mr. T. R. VanZandt,
of Nos. 304 and 306 Park ave.,
Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks, but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose flattering testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

VILLANELLE.

Down the dear old lane where we always meet,
With its hedges tall and its grassy way,
Comes Ethel, blushing, her lover to greet.

The bracken is tall and the wild rose sweet,
And the air is scented with new mown hay,
Down the dear old lane where we always meet.

In a simple frock, so pretty and neat,
With a face as fresh and fair as the day,
Comes Ethel, blushing, her lover to greet.

There's an old gray stone makes a mossy seat,
With a bank behind, where butterflies stray,
Down the dear old lane where we always meet.

Daintily tripping on dainty, wee feet,
With an innocent haste that brooks no delay,
Comes Ethel, blushing, her lover to greet.

There's a thrill that quickens my heart's quick beat,
And I fain would think 'twill ever be May.
Down the dear old lane where we always meet
Comes Ethel, blushing, her lover to greet.

DEATH'S RED LIGHT.

It Was Waved at an Engineer, Betokening His Mother's Demise.

"The most peculiar case I ever heard of," said a telegraph operator, "occurred in our family. My father was an engineer on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, running into Richmond. One night while quite a distance from the latter city and nearing his run he saw a bright red light on the track several hundred yards ahead. The signal was also seen by his fireman and the front brakeman. The train was at once stopped, but not a trace of the signalman or light could be found, and the track was all right. Father looked at his watch and noted that the time was 8 o'clock. The train pulled out, proceeding cautiously for some distance without meeting any obstruction. Several miles farther the light was again seen. Once more stopping, another search was made, with no more success than before. This happened at 8:28. Father was never superstitious, but this was inexplicable. Much mystified, he proceeded on the way, only to be stopped a third time by the red light at 8:51 o'clock. Another search by the crew failed to disclose the slightest trace of the mysterious signalman. Finally, giving up the search, the men returned to their posts, and the train at last pulled up into Richmond without further mishap.

"When father alighted from the cab, a telegram was handed him announcing the death of his mother. Without delay he went to her home, which was several miles out of the city, on the railroad. Soon after his arrival he learned that a telegram had been sent to him while he was out on duty, summoning him to grandmother's bedside. The time at which father had seen the mysterious red lights was indelibly impressed on his memory, and he learned upon inquiry that at precisely the minute at which the first red light was seen she had asked if he had come. She then repeated the question at the time he saw the second light, and the appearance of the third light was simultaneous with her death."—Richmond Times.

The Writers Froude Liked.

"Whom do you rank as the first of modern English prose writers?" asked Mr. Froude as we were strolling one afternoon in Chelsea. Had Lord Tennyson suddenly demanded to know whom I thought to be the greatest poet of the day I could not have been more dumfounded. Noting my hesitation and perhaps guessing its cause, Mr. Froude quickly added: "Ah! I naturally thought you would say Ruskin, who is certainly a master of descriptive writing, at his best exquisite. Newman, too (and Matthew Arnold in a lesser degree), had lucidity and the gift of irony, but lacked glow and color. To me he is always cold. My own favorite is Charles Lamb."

Seeing that I was greatly interested, he went on to point out the beauties of "Dream Children" and then quoted the lovely passage in "The New Year's Eve" beginning, "And you, my midnight darlings, my Folios." That, he said, was the high water mark of modern English prose, equal to anything of the seventeenth century, "the English as pure and beautiful as that of the liturgy itself."

Mr. Froude was a great admirer of Bret Harte. "Tennessee's Pardner" and "The Luck of Roaring Camp" he used to declare were of the immortals. When I once said I feared that Mr. Bret Harte was no longer the fashion, Froude merely replied, "So much the worse for the fashion." In this appreciation of the American story teller, as well as in his affection for Charles Lamb and his respect for Mr. Chamberlain, we see that Froude was no thrall to academic convention.—National Review.

Professional Services.

As two men were looking from an office window on Griswwold street the other morning a shriveled up old fellow passed by.

"See that party?" said one. "Well, he's the meanest man in the state."

"Who is he, and why is he so mean?"

"He's a lawyer in one of the interior towns where they have bobtail cars, and one day while he was riding up town a lame man on the car gave him a dime and asked him to pay his fare for him. He did as requested and then wanted to keep the other nickel as a fee for professional services."—Detroit Free Press.

Women's Ages.

Somebody has discovered the curious fact that the reluctance of women to tell their age is no piece of modern sensitiveness. It is as old as the hills. In the Old Testament, although great numbers of women are mentioned, there is but one—Sarah, Abraham's wife—whose age is recorded.—New York Times.

A HARD-FOUGHT BATTLE ON THE PLAINFIELD ALLEYS.

Highest Score Ever Made in Town in a League Contest.

If Plainfield's bowling enthusiasts had known what kind of champion rolling was to be exhibited at the Trade Temple alleys last evening Crescent Oval would not have been half large enough to hold the crowd. As it was, only about 150 were present.

1—6—9—4 pins by a ten-man team, and a Plainfield team at that! Not a single poor score in the lot, everyone stars. You don't know what you missed, and we can't begin to tell you, but it was on both sides as pretty an exhibit of good sound headwork, holding under almost perfect control the accurate eye and the trained muscle which is so necessary for the successful bowler, as was ever seen in Plainfield. The Kulls played what would have been winning bowls under ordinary circumstances, and had they but kept the pace they set at the start their score would have been well up in the seventeen hundreds. But they were pulling too many strokes to the minute to last throughout the race, and the spurt which they made as the pistol went off was gradually decreased by the local athletes until the turning stake was just ahead, when the Plainfield boys quickened their stroke and shot ahead, starting on the homestretch with 26 pins to the good.

The boys were bending to the oars with might and main, indeed nothing else would have done, for the Kulls were close in their wake and in the ninth their boat shot ahead to the tune of 27 pins and the finish line only one frame off and apparently within easy reach for the Elizabeth boys if they could only hold their stroke. But they reckoned without their host, as the result will show. The Plainfield bowlers don't know to this moment how they did it, but every man of them set his teeth a little firmer, took a reef in his belt, chalked his shoe a little more carefully and bowled like a fiend, just as if the entire game was on his own individual shoulders. Nothing short of a fire or the sight of a delinquent tax bill could have stopped the cyclone which buried the Elizabeth boys under sixty-three pins to the good, and resulted in a victory for Plainfield of 36 pins in the unusual total of 1694-1658. The garrison finish of both Van Alstyne and Vail, the former with two strikes and a total of 27, the latter with three strikes and a total of 30 just set the crowd crazy with enthusiasm, even their opponents joining in the yells which followed. Our boys could not be blamed for their happiness for every pin was fiercely fought for and it was anyone's game until it was over, yet it was hardly kind to the visitors who had not quite completed their frame to make them sit on the balls for fully five minutes while the crowd ran around on all sides of them yelling themselves hoarse and throwing their hats into the air in their delight. The Arthur Kulls took it all in good part, however, and after finishing their game congratulated the victors before leaving for home.

The game throughout was replete with star plays on both sides, but the most wonderful work was that of "Dark Horse" Titsworth, who made the phenomenal record of 206 pins, having 6 strikes and 2 spares, with only two breaks. Titsworth has been a "Colt", this being the first League tourney in which he has played this season, but he certainly set the pace for nineteen other good ones last night, and if he keeps on will yet hold the record score. Walters got the place with 193 and Van Alstyne and Vail were nearly neck and neck for third honors. It was a great game, if any one should drive up in a tally-ho and ask you—and you don't know what you missed.

H. H. Coward and G. W. Cooley manipulated the pencils for their respective clubs, and the score follows:

Through the Draw.

Milwaukee, Feb. 5.—A trolley car on the Russell avenue and Holton street line ran through the open draw of the Kinnikinac bridge yesterday. The car struck endwise on the ice, through which it plunged into the water. The motorman and two passengers lost their lives.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. Diphtheria Antitoxine.
FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.
So limited has been the supply of GENUINE ANTITOXINE heretofore, that sales have been made only on condition of immediate actual use. But amid so large a population as ours, an urgent demand for the new treatment may arise at any hour, night or day, Sunday or week-day. And delay in obtaining it might result fatally. I have therefore, with some difficulty, and at considerable expense, provided a complete outfit of Antitoxine Serum (with injector) and am prepared to meet such demand. The cost of an outfit (Serum of two powers and Koch injector) is now about $12 being only one-fourth of the earlier price. At present sales will be made only on the order of a practicing physician.

A GHOST OF A PLACE.

THE STORY OF ASHLEY HALL AND HOSPITABLE COLONEL BULL.

How the Planter Kept His Household Goods From the Hands of the "Raiders." Pictures of a Beautiful Suburb That All Visitors to Charleston Admire.

Woodlands thick with undergrowth; tranquil country stillness, the stillness of a bit of country comparatively untilled and unpastured; roadways lined with tall and stately trees—such the scene as the clatter of horses' hoofs echoing on the hard flooring of the river bridge dies away into noiseless footfalls and the wheels turn without sound in the yielding soil of St. Andrew's. The murmured chorus of countless pines charms us into forgetfulness of the city's close proximity across the river. Ahead the way unfolds to us, broad and smooth, winding between long battalions of ancient oaks, muffled up to their chins in gray; on through miles of the century old trees, their massive trunks bound with fibrous scarfs, as if to veil the scars of successive seasons, every twig and branch and spray hung with streaming moss. Grand old oaks! Autumnal storms and April airs in turns have tossed and kissed their rugged boughs, yet the giant trunks stand firm. Scarce a gap in the uniform line shows where a grenadier has fallen out of ranks, and, elbow to elbow, they guard the ancient highway from encroachment of forest or field.

Here is an old gateway, the entrance to the grounds which once surrounded Ashley Hall, one of the proudest and most spacious of the ancestral homes in this parish. We pass through the useless massive portals into the driveway beyond. In the shaded light the avenue seems dreaming of the past, for these great oaks stand guard over the wreck of all they were intended to adorn. Of the stately home to which their beauty formed a fit approach nothing now remains but the crumbling marble steps and tall, spirelike chimneys. Little pickaninnies play hide and seek where once the flowers in "my lady's garden" grew in trim luxuriance. Only the Ashley is unchanged as it ripples by on its way to the sea, its waves as blue and sparkling as when it bore many a boating party from the mansion house.

Ashley Hall was the scene of a munificent and lavish hospitality in antebellum days. Its owner possessed immense plantations in Mississippi and Louisiana in addition to his Carolina estates, and the great halls and spacious drawing rooms of the St. Andrew's mansion were frequently thronged with a gay company of the most distinguished people of the state. The host was passionately fond of the chase and delighted to assemble about him those who shared in his love of sport. Deer hunts, participated in by famous sportsmen from all over the south, were features of every season. The same open handed generosity that dictated a hospitality so marked obtained between master and slave, and the large retinue of servants at the hall were a happy, care free set. It was traditional that no one was ever sent away empty handed who applied for aid at the doors of this plantation home.

This old hall, in which seven generations of the same family had dwelt, living almost ideal lives, met with a tragic fate. The organized struggle between the north and south was at an end, but the "raiders" were in possession of this country. They had already sacked and destroyed every house in the parish, with a single exception, and that plantation was occupied by an enemy more dreaded even than demoralized soldiers—namely, smallpox. That frightened even rough handed rapacity away, and venerable Drayton Hall, today famous for its wonderful gardens, was preserved inviolate. The knowledge of the fate that had overtaken the homes of his neighbors, and which he felt that a few hours more would precipitate upon his own, determined Colonel Bull. Calling for kindling wood, surrounded by his awestricken servants, he himself applied the pine torch to his household gods. Pictures, plate, antique furniture, valued heirlooms—all were sacrificed save the small number which could be hastily secreted by trusted slaves when they learned of his intention. It is related by an eyewitness that the stalwart planter wept tears of infinite sorrow as the sounds of falling brick and crumbling woodwork smote upon his ears. Just back of the house is an ancient monument erected to commemorate one of Carolina's colonial governors, an ancestor of the doughty colonel. It was on the base of this shaft that the master of the manor sat and watched the destruction of his home.

We retrace our way along the ranks of rare old trees, passing through the ancient gateway, fit subject for poet's theme, into the open road, where we are greeted by a procession of oaks as symmetrical as those we left behind. Miles of moss fringed trees, their somber curtains swaying far above, and again drooping so as almost to touch the earth about their feet, continue even to the cleared strip of land immediately in front of the bridge. Opposite lies the city, her cluster turrets and slender spires outlined against the evening sky.

Asked how we like the oaks, we say that they are "beautiful," but all the while we are conscious that they have a charm of their own not to be interpreted in words.—Cor. New York Post.

A Great Landowner.

A tourist was being driven over a part of the country in Ireland where his infernal majesty appeared to have given his name to all the objects of interest in the locality, for there was the Devil's bridge, the Devil's caldron, the Devil's glen, etc. Said the traveler:

"The devil seems to be the greatest landowner in these parts."

"Ah, sure, your honor," replied the jarvey, "that is so, but he lives in England. I think he's what they call an absentee landlord in Ireland."—London Gentlewoman.

'TWAS WINTER TIME.

A rose, a rose, a rich red rose
Upon my lady's breast,
Its petals large, its calyx deep,
Its stem with green leaves dressed.

'Tis rich with beauty, in color rare—
Oh, what a combination!—
The same as she whose smile on me
I see in adoration.

But the rose, the rose, the rich red rose
Which glows on her gown of gray
Is very scarce this time of year—
It cost my last week's pay.
—Minneapolis Times.

A MAN'S BEST IDEAS.

An Old Student Says They Come Into the Mind Unexpectedly.

Professor von Helmholtz, the great German scientist of imperishable fame, not long before his death gave an interesting review of his life work on the occasion of the celebration of his seventieth birthday, in which, among other things, he reveals some instructive features of his habits of study and the process by which he won his ideas as well as the time and manner in which it was his wont to commit the latter to paper: "As it has frequently been my lot to have to await in uncertainty the arrival of appropriate thoughts and conceptions, which then would break suddenly and unheralded upon me, I have just gained some experience in the management of these capricious ideas. This may be of utility to other students of like physiological temperament.

"The best ideas have often stolen silently into the current of my thoughts while the latter were not employed in seeking them. I know not by what process of unconscious cerebration they were evolved. I only knew that they were there. Nor could I at first fully estimate the importance of such unexpected but welcome visitors.

"These ideas never introduced themselves when my brain was tired and almost never at my writing table. I had first to turn my problem in all directions and envisage it from every side, and thereafter to consign it to my involuntary thoughts without even prematurely attempting to solve it within myself or committing my reflections to writing. Long and patient preliminary investigation was the unconditional prerequisite to success.

"No matter how urgent the necessity for action, I must always give my brain its time to relax from fatigue or strain and await the recurrence of a feeling of both physical and mental well being and contentment before writing for publication. My most valuable ideas have presented themselves in the morning on my awakening from a refreshing s..., but the favorite period for them has been while I was seeking relaxation by roaming slowly over picturesque hills or through wooded parks in the bright sunlight. The slightest indulgence in alcoholic beverages sufficed to banish them from my grasp."—Baltimore Sun.

Good Horse Sense In Burros.

The Mexican burros ascertain where to dig for water by closely observing the surface of the ground. We had found in an arroyo a sufficient quantity of water to make coffee when we observed three burros searching for water. They passed several damp places, examing the ground closely, when the leader halted near us and commenced to paw a hole in the dry, hot sand with his right forefoot. After awhile he used his left forefoot. Having dug a hole something over a foot in depth, he backed out and watched it intently. To our surprise, it soon commenced to fill with water. Then he advanced and took a drink and stepped aside, inviting, I think, the others to take a drink. At all events they promptly did so and then went away, when we got down and took a drink from their well. The water was cool and refreshing—much better, in fact, than we had found for many a day. There is no witchcraft about the Mexican burros, but they have good horse sense.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Feather Superstition.

We have long been acquainted with the peacock feather superstition, but were not aware until a few days ago that it extended to all feathered creatures. A young girl admired the beautiful pigeons strutting, cooing and sunning themselves in the covert of the house where she was boarding and asked the landlady to sell her a pair to take home with her. "No, indeed, child," was the immediate response. "Not for any money would I sell you those birds. When one person gives or sells an acquaintance a feathered thing, there is sure to be trouble between them, and I do not want to fall out with you."—Philadelphia Times.

An Easy Way.

The main object of life is to derive satisfaction from it, the philosophers say. Therefore when you are what is commonly known as selfish and grasping you can silence your conscience by telling it that you are no worse than the unselfish and sacrificing. You simply have another method of enjoying life.—Exchange.

London Newsgirls.

The London Weekly Telegraph, a miscellany published in connection with the Sheffield Daily Telegraph, is now being sold in the streets of London by a corps of presentable damsels, becomingly dressed in a uniform of dark gray, with red facings, hood lined with the latter color and forage cap to match.

A fortnight after Easter the English formerly observed a festival called Hocktide. It was customary for the women to go out into the streets with cords and bind the men whom they met until the latter purchased their release with small contributions of money.

During the first century after Christ tallow was 6 cents a pound; cheese, 14 cents; butter, 18 cents; honey, 24 cents; peas, 6 cents, and beans, 10 cents.

Cape Conception, California, was called after one of the vessels in the fleet of Cortez.

MONEY LOANED.
Local Representatives Wanted.
Our system affords an opportunity to borrow on either personal or real estate security. The plan is super or to building and loan association. The amount borrowed may be returned in monthly payments without bonus, with interest at 5 per cent per annum, it affords absolute security to investors with a reasonable guarantee of an annual dividend of from 8 to 10 per cent. We desire to secure the services of energetic, representative men in every community to act as local secretaries. The position will be sufficiently remunerative to amply compensate for services. If you possess the above qualification write for particulars. Full information regarding our system of making loans as well as investments and agencies will be furnished by addressing S. S. An Explanation of How Her Tricks May Easily Be Duplicated.

While in Chicago I saw the announcement of an electric girl who included in her repertory a new trick, or at least one that I had not yet seen. A stick about four feet long and as thick as a broomstick was produced, and I and another gentleman were requested to hold it in a vertical position before us while grasping it firmly in both hands. The girl, standing in front of and facing us, placed the palm of her open hand against the lower portion of the stick, resting it on the side nearest to us and farthest from herself. After rubbing her hand up and down for a few moments in order "to make better electric contact," as we were informed, and after enjoining us to hold the stick perfectly vertical, we were told to press down on it as hard as we could.

This we did until the veins seemed to stand out on our foreheads; but, exert ourselves as hard as we could, we, two strong men, were unable to press down hard enough to make the stick slip past the open palm of her hand. Had the girl grasped the stick with her two hands, I am sure she could not have withstood my downward pressure alone. I would have borne her, stick and all, to the floor. But there she stood, with but one open hand bearing against the side of the stick, and both us could not by our united efforts force the stick past that wonderful hand. Surely there seemed something uncanny about this. But it is very simply explained.

The whole secret consists in insisting upon the men holding the stick in a vertical position. When the girl's open hand is first placed against the lower portion of the stick, she moves it two or three times up and down, pulling gradually more and more against it. As this tends to pull the stick away from the vertical, she insists that the men keep it straight. Thus cautioned, they will exert more and more effort until, when she feels that the pressure against her hand is sufficient, she instructs them to push down with all their might. They do so and imagine that they are exerting a tremendous vertical thrust, whereas their vertical effort is actually very slight—insufficient even to overcome the friction of the stick against her moist hand. The men are really exerting a tremendous effort, but are deceived as to its direction. With their hands tightly grasping the upper end of the stick they are really trying to force the other end of the stick against the palm of her hand.—N. W. Perry in Cassier's Magazine.

WHY WOMEN MAKE POOR DETECTIVES

A Secret Service Man Says the Opposite Sex Make Bad Spies.

"Women are not good detectives," said an experienced secret service man on being asked his opinion. "To begin with, there are many places to which a woman cannot go without exciting suspicion, and this defeats her object at the outset, but beyond this woman is unfitted by nature for detective work.

"In the first place, she jumps at a conclusion and acts on it in opposition to all human probabilities, possibilities and reason. As a rule, a woman does not reason. She looks on a thing as she wants it to be or thinks it ought to be, and will follow that theory. She is led by prejudices, favors or sympathies, regardless of facts.

"As a detective she is sometimes a success in entrapping a man, but her work generally ends in a blunder which betrays her. She is persevering only when moved by passion. She does not look at a case dispassionately. She at once decides that he or she is guilty or innocent and works on that theory.

"A woman enjoys the mysterious, and she is so elated at her position as detective that she is unable to conceal her identity or the secret investigations of a case.

"Women are even failures in running down criminals of their own sex. A woman criminal will mislead a woman detective by working on her vanity, credulity or sympathy, and, worst of all, if the detective be attractive and the man criminal handsome—well, a man is better for detective work, and besides a woman will sell out a case, and cheaply at that, relying upon her sex to escape punishment if detected."—New York Herald.

Sickrooms.

A medical journal urges, sensibly enough, that in the present extravagant expenditure in house building a little money should be laid out in arranging for a sickroom, built on the sunny side and equipped with at least the simple means for isolation and care of a sick person. Ventilation should be well considered. The walls may be of washable material—paint, tiles or covered with waterproof bath paper. The plumbing should be out of but convenient to it. A little of the time and money invested in libraries, ballrooms and oriental parlors spent on an apartment whose use in an emergency not unusual to frail humanity may insure the comfort and safety to the family that is necessary to the enjoyment of the more luxurious rooms.

English Women's Shoes.

English women are teaching American women some important facts about footgear. We know today that a touch of patent leather removes the shoe from street use, except in case of walking to and from afternoon teas and luncheons. That only seal or calf skin suits the pavements; that low shoes are to be reserved for summer wear; that spats are not good form, except for men, and that laced shoes are the smart thing for the forenoon.

Health and Morality.

He who recklessly injures his health does not prove his unselfishness—he simply curtails his powers of doing good. And he who injures his character by welcoming evil influences is thereby inflicting a still greater evil upon the community.—Exchange.

REMEMBER ALAMO.

STORY OF ONE OF THE MOST HEROIC FIGHTS IN HISTORY.

Magnificent Defense of 175 Men Against the Attacks of 4,000—Colonel Bowie, Unable to Stand, Fought With Telling Effect Until the Breath Left His Body.

It is a safe wager that nine out of every eleven boys who are proficient in the use of a bowie knife have not the slightest idea where the instrument got its name.

Colonel Bowie of Texas fame gave the knife its title.

And when one writes of the Texas hero one must needs think of the battle of Alamo—that heroic fight of which our American boys and girls seem to think so little and half of them know nothing whatever.

They read how the brave soldiers fought and held the pass of Thermopylæ, but they seldom think of how a mere handful of men defended the Alamo mission—how they dropped fighting on their knees and then died facing the foe.

If you should go to the historical city of San Antonio, in Texas, you will see the old mission building standing, with battered, bullet pierced walls, a monument to the 172 heroes of 1836. Behind these walls the most important battle in the war between Mexico and Texas was fought. That was when Santa Anna was president and the Texans were fighting for their independence. Here it was that Colonel Bowie ended his brave life, dying with his boots on and fighting under the most terrible odds. The story is this, and every American child should know it by heart, that he may tell it with pride when other nations are talking of their great deeds:

One hundred and forty-five men under Captain Travis, a young man of 28, were holding the town of San Antonio against General Santa Anna and 4,000 men. They were the only defenders of the town and were ensconced in the old mission of the Alamo. Davy Crockett was also with them and Colonel Bowie, who was wounded and stretched out on his cot. Of artillery they had only 14 pieces.

Santa Anna demanded surrender, but the little garrison held out for ten days, skirmishing secretly for food and water. Every shot sent out of the mission house told, but not one of the Alamo heroes was hurt. Patience and strength, however, were being rapidly exhausted. Some of the little band were falling sick; others were desperate. Re-enforcements had been appealed for, but none had come. Colonel Lamein, with 300 men and four pieces of artillery, had started in answer to the appeal, but had put in somewhere for fresh water and food supplies.

At last Captain Smith joined the exhausted band with 32 men. Three days after General Santa Anna ceased the bombarding, and taking advantage of this Captain Travis called his men into line and frankly owned that there was no earthly hope for them; that he had led them into this thinking that re-enforcements were on the way. He does not utter one word against Lamein for failing him. He simply gives them their choice of deaths. They can surrender and be shot down or be killed fighting out their revenge. The captain drew a line and said, "Every man who is determined to remain here and to die with me will come to me across this line." Every soldier but one crossed at once.

When they finished, Colonel Bowie looked up, with his arm in a sling, and cried: "Boys, don't leave me! Won't some of you carry me across?" And the only backward step they made was to go over the line and carry the colonel to the young captain's side. The man Rose, who was a coward, dropped over the wall into a ditch to tell the tale. And then came the terrible day.

Santa Anna brought all his forces to bear on the fortress. The scaling ladders were again and again raised, but those who placed them were shot down like grain. Four thousand men charging into 175 seemed easy enough, but it soon reduced the 4,000. At last numbers conquered, and the Mexicans climbed over into the Alamo. The little band of defenders were trampled on and beaten, but they dropped to their knees and hacked and shot and pierced until the pile of the dead was awful. Colonel Bowie, too weak to rise from his cot, leans on his elbow and marks his man every time he pulls the trigger. Cut, bleeding, he continues to kill until the pistol drops and the breath leaves his body. Davy Crockett, standing in a corner, fights like a panther, and the young captain, backed against the wall, surrenders only when run through and through.

The great battle is over. The Mexicans have won. Out of the 172 Texans are 172 dead. No Spartans were braver or more tenacious, for they killed 522 of their enemies and wounded 500 more. Texas, though, was finally freed, and whenever great deeds thrill young boys' hearts they should think of that splendid piece of American daring and say, as Houston said to his men, "Remember the Alamo."—St. Louis Republic.

Ambitious.

A well known and popular singing teacher recently received the following letter:

"Will you be good enough to let me know your charge for voice production? I have no singing voice, but I would be willing to pay you well if you can produce one for me, because singers earn a good deal more than I can make in the tripe trade here."—London Answers.

APOLOGIZED FOR INTRUDING.

The Bashful Student Thought the Venus of Medici Was a Living Bather.

A funny story of a modest man is told by Aubrey de Vere in The Century Magazine. After 50 years' seclusion within the walls of his college a certain venerable fellow of Cambridge university thought it was time for him to see a little of the world, and he accepted an invitation from an early pupil who was entertaining a large party in a great country house. At dinner he sat next to the young lady of the house. Their conversation fell upon baths, and she happened to mention that she took a shower bath every morning to invigorate her system, adding, when he inquired what a shower bath was, that it resembled a very small round room; that the bather took his or her stand in the center of it, and upon pulling a string was drenched by a sudden flood of water from above.

Next morning the recluse rose at his usual hour—6 o'clock—and being of an inquisitive temper thought it well to explore carefully what he had never seen before—a large country house. On pulling open a door he found himself at the entrance of a very small circular apartment, one of those in which housemaids store away old brushes and household articles past their work. In the center of it stood a plaster cast of the Venus of Medici. The venerable man recoiled, closed the door and walked in the park till summoned by the breakfast bell. He took his seat, and the host asked whether he would have tea or coffee. But he had reflected on what good manners imperatively required, and his answer was:

"My lord, I can neither partake of tea nor coffee, nor any other refection until I have first tendered my humblest apologies to the interesting young lady whom I now see dispensing the chocolate and on whose sanitary ablutions this morning as she stood in her shower bath I was so unfortunate as unwittingly to intrude."

Ancient Use of the Mace.

The ancient use of the mace introduces us to a remarkable instance of ecclesiastical casuistry. The clergy was forbidden to shed blood, and as thus the sword was inhibited this might have been thought sufficient to keep them from the battlefield. But not so; they adopted the mace. Though they could not cut a man's throat, yet might they break his head. So Bishop Otho, half brother of William, fought alongside of the conqueror at the bitter battle of Hastings with great effect, the brothers being, as you may say, "a pair of nutcrackers."—Notes and Queries.

CHAPTER II.

We rode on and on through the darkness. At first my excitement was so great as to render thought impossible; moreover, the riding was of the roughest, and I had all I could do to keep my seat. But gradually, as I began to grow more accustomed to my situation, I was overtaken with a most dreadful misgiving. The rider had hitherto seemed like enough to Dick, for I had known he would do his best to change his voice; and, as for his foolish robbery, it was just of a piece with his natural love of mischief. But now I began to feel certain that some impostor had taken his part; that I had eloped with another man—and him a common highwayman. Imagine my distress! I could conceive of no method of extricating myself from the position; a sense of blank helplessness came over me, and I could do no more than cling tightly to the highwayman and await the event.

We had ridden some miles, when he suddenly drew rein and dismounted, landing me lightly beside him.

"Upon my soul!" he said, "here is a pretty adventure! Heaven knows that I had always a passion for the unusual, or I should be still a humble usher in Brancaster academy. But, tell me, what am I to do with you?"

I suppose I had hoped against hope; to find my fears were justified was a disastrous blow to me, nor could I make any answer.

"I would not wish a braver sweetheart," he continued, speaking with an odd and attractive perplexity. "But what have we gentlemen of the road to do with wives? Why, sweetheart, you heard the promises of your guardian. He will surely do his utmost to fulfill them, and how should I dare go to the gallows if I know that I left you widowed and alone? I trust a score of maids would weep a little if poor Jack Arthur went the common way; but God forbid that any should remember him at a week's end. It may seem that I am ungallant, yet I protest I do not like my share in this adventure. Kiss me, sweet, and then fancy I am old and very wise, and take my counsel, which is: that you permit me to conduct you back to some place near your home. And yet—I would not wish a braver sweetheart!"

And then, moved by the kindness of his words, and his pleasant voice, I lost command of myself and burst into foolish weeping.

"Sir," I said, "I am altogether at your mercy. I have done that which will shame me all the rest of my days. But, indeed, I thought you were another, my sweetheart, whom I should have married to-morrow."

I fancied he spoke less gayly than before: perhaps he had not hoped altogether that I would take his sage advice. "Ho, ho!" he cried, "then my good fortune is but another theft to my account? I do not understand. You were to have married your lover to-morrow, and yet you entreat a stranger, and a highwayman at that, to carry you off! This is the maddest of adventures."

"Sir!" I said, "my uncle stands to me in the place of father and mother."

The highwayman chuckled. "Poor child!" he said, and softly stroked my hand, which, it seems, he had been holding for some minutes. "Poor child!"

"He would have me marry one whom I do not love, and I began to fear that presently he would overcome me, and compel—"

"The old hunks!" cried the highwayman. "You shall marry whom you choose. Nay, I withdraw my foolish wisdom; come with me, and before the night is here again you shall be Mistress Arthur. Believe me," he added with a pretty conceit—"believe me, there are many who will envy you."

"But, sir," I interrupted, "you forget what I have told you. Of late I have been closely guarded, for my uncle had discovered that I have given my love to a yeoman of the place, and it was arranged that he should stop the coach on our return from the ball and carry me away with him."

The highwayman laughed loudly. "And that is why you did not faint or scream?" he said. "I fell in love with you because of that, and that is why I was so flattered at your suggestion of an elopement. But, what will the real lover do? Will he stop the coach a second time, and find the bird flown? I warrant he will play the part exactly. I should hardly be surprised to hear he had let himself be captured."

I could not endure his jesting. "Sir," I said, "I am in your hands, and it is small wonder you find my plight only laughable. I have made myself a show for all the country to laugh at. Never a peddler but will be selling ballads in a se'nnight about this that I have done to-night. Yet I could believe you kinder than most. I entreat that you will help me."

He was sober in a moment. "Upon my soul!" he said, "the case is one to puzzle a very Solomon. I would do much to help you, but I am not altogether free to do so as I would. To be frank, my life hangs upon my escaping out of these regions with all the celerity I can command. And my life . . . But listen!"

"DICK," I CRIED, "ALL'S WELL."

He broke off, and, kneeling, placed his ear to the ground. Then he arose, with a curious, excited laugh. "The adventure grows in interest," he said. "Here comes the honest yeoman, and in hot haste."

I listened eagerly, and heard far off the sound of a horse galloping furiously along the rough track, which was then the only road across the great moorland. I saw a sudden movement on the part of my companion, and perceived that he was fingering his pistols as he stood silent in the darkness.

"Not that!" I cried, entreatingly.

"There will be need of an explanation of some kind," he said; "perhaps you will undertake it. I confess I have not a sufficient gift of words, and I am a little inclined to doubt whether your sweetheart will be in the mood for explanations. Doubtless, as a gentleman of the road, he will ride armed."

The sound of hoofs grew nearer. He was silent now, and listened most attentively to the approaching sound. Presently the rider was quite near.

"Dick!" I called. "Dick! all's well, and I am in the company of a friend of yours and mine."

A moment later he was upon us, and sure enough he held a pistol in his hand. He jumped from his horse in an instant and caught me to him; but it was the highwayman who spoke first.

"Sir," he said, "I see by the pistol you carry that you take a very proper view of the situation. And yet I believe that everything may be explained. If you will consult the lady—"

"Dick," I said, "this gentleman is a friend. He took me with him, very much against his will, because I asked that he would take me; and I did that because I thought that he was you. You know our plan. He is—"

I paused. The highwayman laughed. "I follow, day by day, the trade which it pleased you to adopt for a single night. I anticipated you by a few minutes. We are both of us tall men, and the lady took the difference of voice and manner as a clever disguise. I was engaged about my ordinary business when she appeared to suggest that I should elope with her. I will confess my good luck amazed me at first, but I was quick to embrace it; nor did I discover how far astray my conceit had led me until the very moment of your approach. We were endeavoring to devise a method of restoring the lady to her friends when you appeared to solve our difficulty."

"You forget," said Dick, doggedly, "you forget the little matter of the money and jewels you have stolen."

The highwayman started. "'Convey,' the wise call it," he replied, with some tartness. "But the only course is, that I should surrender everything to you; and then it should be clear to you that I am no less than a messenger of Providence to you and the lady—a god from the machine."

Dick was silent, his arm about my waist, his figure held ready for action.

"The good uncle has been robbed of goods and niece," went on the highwayman, easily. "You come upon him in his distress, hear the tale, and straightway go in pursuit of the thief—the good uncle called me 'thief'—and compel him to disgorge. In truth, the least the uncle can do is to give you the lady in return for his goods. For, though perhaps you do not guess it, you have shown some bravery to-night."

The thing was beautifully clear. "Indeed," I cried, "he shall do no less. Dick, we will go back; and I promise you shall marry me when you will, and with his consent. Do you not see it?"

"He ought to do so," said Dick, grudgingly. "I suppose we must thank you, sir."

"Oh!" said the highwayman, lightly, "there is no need of thanks. Here are the jewels and the purse. But first"—he opened the purse and extracted some scraps of paper—"I promised to liberate certain poor debtors, and that promise I must keep."

He tore the paper into fragments and leaped upon his horse.

"Farewell!" he cried, and vanished into the night. Nor did I hear of him again until he was hanged two years afterwards for a daring robbery.

At least there was one who wept at the news of his death—and she a happy wife.

Old Age Not a Disease.

Old age need not be necessarily feeble. For people at sixty to say, it's natural at their age to feel weak and feeble, is not so.

Mrs. Belinda Hodson, Haverhill, N. H., exemplified this fact very plainly in her letter to Dr. Kennedy, wherein she says. "I recovered from a lingering and painful illness, and finding myself continuing in a weak and debilitated condition, I used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and found in it the one thing needful to supply the wasted vitality in aged people. It improves the appetite, quiets the nerves, and cures insomnia (sleeplessness."

Mr. Solomon Davis of North Kortright, N. Y., found the same result from using Favorite Remedy. In speaking of it, he said: "How much better the average old person would feel if they would use this valuable preparation, Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Outside the fact that it will cure the most obstinate case of constipation, it gives strength and tone to the system, and renews one's vitality.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. HYMENEAL.

Delaney—Corlies.

A social event of no small importance was the marriage of Miss Annie Wright Corlies to William Cooper Delaney of New York, which took place yesterday afternoon at 1, at the home of the bride, "Roslending", Central avenue. Miss Corlies was one of the most popular girls in Plainfield society, and although the invitations were necessarily restricted to the intimate friends the house was crowded to its utmost capacity, over 200 people from Plainfield, New York and Philadelphia witnessing the ceremony, which was one of the prettiest ever seen in this city.

The house was very handsomely decorated with lilies, creeping cypress, palms, and other flowers and all daylight was excluded from the rooms on the first floor which were lighted by candles and lamps. The ceremony was performed in the drawing room at the west end of the house. The bow window in which the clergyman stood was a veritable bower of lilies with a background of cypress and was lighted by a large silver candelabrum Rev. Dr. J. Wesley Brown of St. Thomas Church, New York, officiated, and the music was by the Grace Church choir boys under the able leadership of Mr. Cock.

The bridal party entered the room from the stairs through a passageway kept open through the crowd of guests by two white ribbons, the ends of which were held by Miss Edme Corlies, sister of the bride, and her cousin, Miss Coolidge of Orange. There were four bridemaids and three ushers. The bridemaids all wore pink silk covered with white chiffon and carried large bunches of pink roses. The ushers wore the conventional frock coats with dark gray gloves, and gardenias in their coats. Mrs. J. Edgar Corlies, the mother of the bride, wore an eminence silk gown and carried a huge bunch of violets. The bride came in on the arm of her grandfather, J. Howard Wright. She wore white satin and a tulle veil fastened by a diamond pin and orange blossoms. The gift of the groom, a diamond Crescent held her gown at the throat. The party was met at the end of the beribboned aisle by the groom and his best man, Edward Delanoy. The bride was given away by her grandfather.

The bridemaids were Miss Talmadge of Netherwood, Miss Ginna of Watchung avenue, Miss Lockwood of Philadelphia, and Miss Johnson of Bridgeport. The ushers were Howard Corlies, the brother of the bride, Dunbar Wright, her uncle, and Mr. Gilbert of New York.

Everyone stood during the ceremony, which was read in an impressive manner by Dr. Brown. The choir boys sang the Lohengrin wedding march during the procession and chanted softly during the service.

After the bride and groom had received the congratulations of their hosts of friends an elaborate breakfast was served from a very handsomely set table in the dining room. The centrepiece of smilax and callas was particularly effective. The credit of the entire breakfast is due the Max Wiertz who had carte blanche to do the best he could and the result was fully equal to the collations that have been served by New York caterers in the past few years in Plainfield.

The guests who had come from New York on the special were provided with a train to take them back at 3, while the bride and groom left shortly before for Florida where they will spend the honeymoon.

Their exit from the house was accompanied by the usual showers of rice, and the trap that took them to the station had been surreptitiously decked with streaming white ribbons. An old shoe was hurled after the departing vehicle and many threw discretion to the winds and followed Mr. and Mrs. Delanoy to the gates with good wishes and rice. On their return from Florida the young couple will go to housekeeping in their Madison avenue apartment in New York.

The presents were very numerous and handsome, but were not shown, as many of them had been sent to New York.

Quite as many of the guests were from out of town as were from Plainfield Among the many were: Mr and Mrs J Howard Wright, Mr and Mrs J Parker Mason, Mrs Robert L Burnett, Mr and Mrs F O Herring Mr and Mrs Irving H Brown, Mr and Mrs Henry A McGee, Mr and Mrs Alexander Gilbert, Mrs William E Lowe, Mrs Evarts Tracy, Mrs William Palmer Smith, Mrs Henry P Talmadge, Mr and Mrs Henry C Adams, Mr and Mrs Delanoy of New York, Mr and Mrs DeWitt, Mrs Orville T Waring, Mrs Walter E Stewart, Miss Stewart, Mrs Marion S Ackerman, Mrs H M Stockton, Mrs Joseph Sandford, Mrs Wilbur Fiske, Mrs W J Roome, Mr and Mrs L G Timpson, Dr and Mrs Kimball, Mrs Moore, Mrs Adams, Miss Johnson, Miss Grace Cooley, Miss Whiton, Miss Maude Van Boskerck, Miss Lizzie Van Boskerck, Miss Dumont, Miss Huntington, Miss Yates, Miss Minnie Wood, the Misses Holly, Mrs Munger, Mr and Mrs Walker, Clifford McGee, J Stowell Anthony, L E Waring, Roger Erickson, W H Brown, Alexander Hudnut, Howard Coolidge, Benjamin Rush, and W H Case.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP AT THE CAMP.

John Hand's Devotees Share with Their Friends an Evening of Sociability.

The regular meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., was held last evening, at which time a delegation from Col H. B. Reed Camp, No. 40, of Somerville, was present.

After the business of the evening was concluded, the Woman's Relief Corps and comrades of the Grand Army and their friends were invited to the room, when a social hour was spent.

Commander Corlell of Post 73 was called on and made a few appropriate remarks, giving strong evidence of his friendship to the Camp. Capt. Vickery of Camp 40 in a few words expressed his pleasure in being present, and President Mrs. M C. Dobbins of the Relief Corps gave words of encouragement.

Past President Mrs. Morse recited "The Blue and the Gray", which the audience greatly enjoyed.

Past Commander Wm. Hand, for whose brotner the camp was named, told the circumstances of his late brother's enlistment. A young man had enlisted, but owing to a deformity in his right arm he was unable to handle a gun, and John Hand being present at once offered his services. He was the first Plainfielder killed and brought home.

First Lieutenant Parker of Camp 40 was interesting in his remarks of patriotism, as were also First Sergeant Dickey and J. R. Dungan. Second Lieutenant Lorrie also spoke a few words.

First Sergeant Horace Martin of Camp 28 favored the audience with two fine solos, accompanied by Miss Ada Nash; and Sergeant of the Guard H. S Thatcher gave an amusing recitation.

Comrade Mattox and his daughter, Miss Try Mattox, were heartily received in reciting several excellent selections.

Remarks were made by Past Commander Dobbins and other comrades, including a visiting comrade from Brooklyn.

Those present were then asked to go to the room below, where coffee, cake and sandwiches were served in abundance.

After the inner man had been satisfied, an adjournment was made to the post rooms, where some instrumental music was enjoyed, given by Bert Naylor and Bert Blake, on violin and piano.

It was rather late when the joyous company broke up, but all expressed themselves well pleased with the evening's entertainment and hoped it would be repeated.

Competition the Best Cheapener.

(From The Trenton True American.)

The first question for the Legislature to ask itself in the matter of cheap gas is, what right has the Legislature to fix a price upon a commodity of ordinary purchase and sale.

If it can say what gas can be sold for, why not also fix the price of coal, which is much more a neccessary of life and an attribute of comfort.

People can and do get along without gas; they cannot maintain existence or prosecute business without coal.

The reason why the coal miners and coal transporters and coal sellers have been allowed to do their business in their own way is because it is not an attribute of government to carry on the business for itself or to arbitrarily establish rules and rates whereby private capital shall carry it on.

Nothing could be more manifestly unjust and oppressive than for the State to require any business to be carried on at unprofitable rates, and the experiment of compelling this to be done has always failed, even when the tremendous surge of the French revolution sought to fix the price of bread.

The public good is best served by encouraging the formation of these semi-public corporations, and leaving it to competition between them to produce low prices.

This the Legislature has a right, and ought to do.

If there is authority in the present law which fosters a monopoly in the manufacture and furnishing of gas, the Legislature can wipe it out, and should do so.

This is the best way to test the rhapsodies of quondam inventors and specialists, who, in every trade and business, claim to be able to prosecute that business better than those who are in it and have made a success of it.

There is plenty of capital that would be glad to go into the manufacture of gas, at 30 cents a thousand feet, if it be demonstrated that that be possible, and the Legislature ought to give them a chance not only in Trenton but elsewhere in the State.

Muhlenberg Minstrels.

Tickets for the Muhlenberg Hospital benefit are selling rapidly. Those desiring them would better purchase at once, as the number is limited. They can be had of any of the patronesses and at Reynolds's, Randolph's and Hebard's pharmacies.

J. Parker Mason will have charge, and be the stage manager, which gives assurance that the affair will be a success.

The orchestra will be from New York, under the leadership of Mr. Rose of the Lyceum Theatre.

GOOD MUSIC AND READINGS.

The Verdi Quartette and Miss Jackson Entertain for the Y. M. C. A.

The first of the regular entertainments of the Y. M. C. A. in the new hall, was given last evening by Miss Addie Parker Jackson, reader, and the Verdi Ladies Quartette. There was unfortunately but a small audience to greet the talented young women, but those who were present accorded them a reception that was far warmer than the temperature of the hall. It was an unusually cold night, and an unusually enthusiastic audience, and those who braved the zero blasts were well repaid by the programme which the fair ones presented. Miss Kathryn Krymer has a remarkable voice of wonderful depth and power, and a winsome way of thanking her audience for its appreciation of her talent. The solo "As still as the night", by Bohm, was sung by Miss Krymer with commendable sweetness and delicate shading.

Miss Ida VanDuyn was likewise in marked favor with the audience, and was recalled with decided emphasis after her song "Marionella".

The singing of the quartette was very pleasing, the well-trained voices blending harmoniously in all of the numbers they rendered.

Miss Jackson as a reader is a favorite in Plainfield, and it seemed a shame that her readings were not listened to by many times the number present. At her every appearance an encore was demanded, and she responded most graciously. Her recitation of one of H. C. Bunner's metropolitan sketches entitled "The Tenor", was probably the best of all her well told stories.

Shaft No. 2.

The next attraction in Music Hall, "Shaft No. 2", to be presented Friday night, Feb. 8, has been received with much favor in New York and Chicago, and will be seen for the first time in this city.

The play deals with the trials and ultimate triumphs of an electrical engineer, Jim Rathburn, and the audience is treated to a succession of new and interesting stage pictures and given a number of surprises in the line of mechanical and electrical effects never before introduced in a play.

One scene of more than ordinary interest is a representation of the shaft of a mine with the tram car running up and down and the miners at work. It is a very realistic picture of the interior of a mine.

In another act a storm is produced by new electrical and mechanical contrivances, and it is spoken of as the most wonderful and realistic reproduction of nature in her turbulent mood ever attempted on the stage.

The electrocution chamber in the State prison is shown with all the paraphernalia of this death-dealing system.

The piece abounds in many new and attractive features, and will no doubt meet with as favorable a reception from the playgoers here as it has elsewhere.

Why Reform Hall Should Be Open Evenings.

Because the men need it; they have requested it. They tell us "We have no place to spend our evenings but the saloon, and we will not go there". Other men tell us "We have to go the saloon to get warm". These are sad facts for the Christians of Plainfield to confront. Christians, there is a great work for someone to do in this city. Won't you lend a helping hand? Won't you help to rescue the perishing? Won't you see that Reform Hall is open for these men every evening?

Nothing Daunts This Wheelman.

J. W. Gavett, the inveterate cyclers went out for an appetizing spin on his wheel this morning, over the snowclad roads, with the thermometer 8 below zero.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. COLD ENOUGH.

Eight Below Zero, in Plainfield, During the Night, and After Sunrise.

Nobody in Plainfield has been found to tell of colder weather in this city during the past 15 years than that of last night The record of the night was 8 below zero and that figure was maintained till 7:45 this morning, when the mercury began to rise a little, standing at 4 below at 8:30, and gradually creeping up till at noon it was 8 above.

This record of 8 below seems to have been the rule all over town. Two of the most accurate records are those of Mr Milliken at 830 Central avenue, whose self-registering thermometer points N.E., and H. P. Reynolds at the corner of Park and North avenues, whose thermometer is protected from the winds and exposed to the temperature only.

The lowest figure reached during the night by either of these registers was 8 below, and that they still maintained at 7:45 after sunrise.

The method of registering may not be generally understood. Within the tube and above the mercury is a tiny metal float which stays at whatever point the mercury pushes it to. Thus the extreme record is shown, and after taking an observation the metal float can be drawn down again to the level of the mercury by the use of a magnet outside the glass. The thermometer is constructed with a double tube, and each branch of the tube contains one of the floats, so that both the highest and the lowest temperature are shown.

FOOLED MR. RUGG.

Went to the Door to See a Friend from the Lodge, and Was Surprised by a Birthday Party.

The cold weather found everything warm and happy at the home of Coal Dealer C. H. Rugg on East Second street last night. Biting frost did not keep his friends from remembering his birthday anniversary in most pleasant fashion. A gay party met at the home of J. C. VanDyke, East Front street, and went in a body to the home of Mr. Rugg. His wife had kept him from going to the lodge by inviting in some out-of-town friends, and the doorbell was muffled while a member of the family kept watch. Presently the party arrived, and when they had been secreted in the hall Mr. Rugg was told that a friend from the lodge wished to see him. He asked that he be brought in, but was told that he had no time to wait. Mr. Rugg then went into the hall, and was astonished to find the large gathering of friends. He made a speech of welcome as bright as brief, and all were takgn in and made at home. Music, games, and superb refreshments, made the hours pass joyously, and 1 o'clock, the parting hour, came all too soon.

Among those present were: Mr and Mrs Fredicks, Mr and Mrs Startup, Mr and Mrs Van Dyke and Miss Maude VanDyke, Mr and Mrs Bragamen, Mr and Mrs Van Fleete and Miss May Van Fleete, Mr and Mrs Holden, Mr and Mrs H W Marshall, Miss Emily Corlell, Dr Pocock, Mr Clark, Mrs Hatch, Mr Swackhammer, Miss Chandler, Miss Wilson, Miss VanEps.

HAVE TAKEN IN THE WOMEN.

Ivanhoe Council Believes in Maintaining the Good Things of Life.

Last evening the first "Ladies night" of Ivanhoe Council, No. 1 074, Legion of Honor, was held in their commodious council chamber on Park avenue, several of the Grand officers of the State being present. It has for some time been optional with the various lodges of this order to admit women to membership, but it was only recently that Ivanhoe Council decided by vote that they would avail themselves of this privilege.

Considering the exceeding cold of last evening, a goodly number of the fair sex was present and listened with much interest to the earnest remarks of the speakers. It was intended to provide a musical and literary entertainment in honor of the guests of the occasion, but at the last moment Companion Titsworth who had this feature of the entertainment in hand, received a wire announcing the non-arrival of the expected artists because of the grip. Past Commander T. C Smith, who occupied the chair in the absence of Commander Allis through sickness, stepped into the gap and after cordial words of greeting introduced Grand Commander Ralph of Hoboken, who spoke most earnestly of the benefits, social and monetary, to be derived from membership in this rapidly growing order, and urged the women to inform themselves fully as to the great personal benefit it would be to them to join hands with the host of fathers, husbands and brothers who were already enrolled.

The speaker was followed by Grand Orator Downey of New York city, who dwelt particularly on the ever-increasing strength of the Legion of Honor as an insurance order, founded as it is on the soundest business principles, and carried on by men of undoubted financial ability and shrewdness. Orator Downey quoted insurance statistics and State Commissioners reports on fraternal insurance to show that this organization stood at the head for soundness and strength, and amount of capital. Companion G. L Van Emburgh followed in a very happy speech, in which he reiterated and enlarged upon the remarks of the previous speaker with regard to the local branch, No. 1074, and spoke most cordially to the women who had braved the inclement weather to lend their presence to the occasion.

The remarks of Companion Titsworth, which followed, closed this feature of the evening's entertainment, the companion expressing regret that he was notified as to the impossibility of securing the musical artists, so late that he could not substitute, begging the indulgences of his friends at the failure, and cordially thanking the women for their attendance and interest. The entire party then adjourned to Tier's parlors across the street, where a bountiful collation was served.

Newspaper Serials.

That great detective, Sherlock Holmes, whose stories were all told long ago, and which have been published and republished till everyone has read them, is accused by another Plainfield paper of having made his first appearance in "The Sign of the Four". That only shows how little that paper knows of current literature, for the first appearance of Holmes was in "A Study in Scarlet". Both the tales mentioned have been in print a long time now, and the paper which is about to publish them is only filling its columns with ancient history. Conan Doyle's brand-new stories, however, appear from time to time in The Daily Press, which inaugurated the publication in Plainfield of short serials by the best writers of the day. All of the serials printed in this paper are new, and copyrighted to Daily Press use. When printed in The Press, they are printed for the first time. In this as in all respects The Daily Press leads.

Danced Away the Night.

One hundred guests attended the debut of James Boice's youngest daughter, Miss Lucy Boice, at the homestead on the road from New Market to New Brunswick. The debutante was attired in white cream satin and point lace.

The costumes of the guests were very beautiful, cream and light blue being the prevailing colors.

The guests were from New York, Bound Brook, Plainfield, New Market and New Brunswick, Rutgers College being well represented. Supper was served at 11:30 Music was furnished by Mr. Hart of New Brunswick, and dancing was kept up until 4:30 a. m.

Dunellen Declares Independence.

The election yesterday to decide whether or not to set off the borough of Dunellen from the township of Piscataway, resulted in an overwhelming victory in favor of setting off. There was practically no opposition.

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm and that she has also used it for lame back with great success. BURNED ITS JACKET.

Somerville Way Train Delayed by Too Much Fire at the Engine.

Train No. 35, Somerville local, in charge of Conductor Geo. Terrell and Engineer Stephen Winner, due here at 3:45 p. m., was delayed yesterday for several minutes, it being discovered that the jacket of the engine was on fire. It is, perhaps, not generally known that locomotive boilers are covered with a wooden jacket, consisting of longitudinal strips about three-fourths of an inch thick and from two to three inches wide, substantially the same as the more familiar covering of stationary engine boilers, and that over this jacket is placed the nicely painted covering of thin sheet metal so familiar to the eye.

The constant high degree of heat to which this jacket is necessarily subjected reduces it in time almost to charcoal, and occasionally it gets on fire. This was the case with 35 yesterday afternoon. As soon as the discovery was made water was forced through on the flames, and it was thought that they were wholly extinguished, but they were again discovered on arriving at Somerville. So difficult was it to reach the fire because of the outside metal covering that the return trip was delayed for more than an hour. The train, which is scheduled as No. 58, eastbound local from Somerville, on the time sheet, due in this city at 4:50, did not arrive until 6 p. m.

No 14, eastbound express from Wilkes-Barre, carrying mail from the West, due here at 5:54 p. m., was 33 minutes late, being detained by western storms.

The Salvation Army.

A treat is promised every one who takes part in the special meeting at the army hall on West Second street, Thursday evening, Feb. 7. Colonel William Eadie who will be in charge of the meeting is the Chief Secretary of the work in the United States and second in command to Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth; he is by birth a Scotchman and possesses many of the well-known characteristics of that particular race and is a very powerful speaker. Every action denoting earnestness. His experience in the army has been long and varied having held appointments both in Canada and the old country before coming to the United States.

He will be accompanied by the National Headquarters Staff brass band of New York city. This capital organization of players have been in Plainfield before and we doubt not that many friends will be glad to again welcome them and listen to their music. They will introduce several new songs, choruses and selections.

Adjutant George Wood, late A. D. C. to Brigadier Evans, who has been placed in charge of the newly formed Northern New Jersey District, of which Plainfield corps forms a part, will also be on hand to assist. The inside meeting which commences at 8 and to which admission is by tickets at 10 cents, will be preceded by a unique illuminated parade through the principal thoroughfares of the city.

Good Samaritan Pangborn.

John Noble, formerly an employe at Starin's shipyard in New York, went to Philadelphia soon after he lost his position, and last night at a late hour he landed in Plainfield, on his way back to New York.

At the North Avenue station he asked a backman where he could get a night's lodging. He was referred to the police, and was told they had no place for him.

The man did not have the appearance of a tramp, and apparently was a very worthy person.

From the station he went to North Plainfield, where he met a good Samaritan in the person of Chief Marshal Pangborn, who, when he heard his story, gave him a comfortable place for the night.

This morning he was given a good breakfast, and by Collector Spencer a warm coat, which he needed very much, and he went on his way with gratitude for North Plainfield.

Since the 15th of last February Chief Marshal Pangborn has taken care of 73 worthy persons in a similar way, and deserves much credit for his humanitarian feelings for the world's unfortunates.

Arrest in the Greengoods Case.

Proprietor VanDeventer of the Fanwood club-house was placed under arrest yesterday and held under bail, for alleged complicity in the transactions of the greengoods men at the Van. He denies that he has any knowledge of the operations.

—Effort is making to present a theatrical entertainment in the Casino during Easter week for the benefit of the Plainfield Relief Association.

O. W. O. Hardman, sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

THE COUNTRY'S TRADE

Disastrous Comparisons in Business Conditions.

Effects of the New Tariff—Some of the Results Affecting Particular Articles of Import and Export—Things Might Be Worse, But May Soon Be Better.

Washington, Feb. 6.—In giving out the final figures of the trade of the United States in the calendar year 1894, Worthington C. Ford, chief of the bureau of statistics, said:

"It is almost impossible to judge of the course of trade by values alone. In no single year since 1873 has there been such a sudden and marked fall in prices, export and import, as has occurred in the past eighteen months. Such a sudden change practically throws out any comparison of totals. For example, the value of domestic exports in the fiscal year 1894, June 30, 1893, to June 30, 1894, was only $3,000,000 less than the value of the exports in the calendar year 1894, January 1, 1893, to January 1, 1894, was $150,000,000 less than in the calendar year 1891.

Value of Imports.

"Quite as interesting a difference is shown in the imports. The value of free imports in the fiscal years 1894 and 1891 was $579,795,536 and $366,241,352, respectively, difference in favor of 1894 of $13,500,000. A comparison of imports for the calendar years would show a difference in favor of 1891 of $146,000,000.

"Dutiable imports were so greatly affected by the uncertainty of tariff legislation that the calendar year 1894 appears almost disastrous in its total, the difference being $106,000,000 in favor of the calendar year 1891. The relation between free and dutiable has been doubly disturbed by the excessive importations of sugar, which aggravated the free total, and the marked reductions in the imports of articles affected by the tariff. All things considered the situation might have been much worse than the figures.

Manufactured Silk.

"The imports of unmanufactured silk, an article that ought to feel a depression, gave an increase of 3,400,000 pounds. Even raw wool, supposed to have been disastrously affected by the tariff in its industrial and domestic feature, did not show a material reduction in quantity imported, nor in value. All this was favorable to the domestic manufacture, because the imports of manufactured textiles gave heavy reductions, $5,000,000 in cotton manufacturers, $2,000,000 in manufactures of flax and hemp, more than $9,000,000 in manufactures of silk and more than $13,000,000 in manufactures of wool.

"Only one item of the imports of iron and steel manufactures shows an increase, firearms; all else of that large class of imports gives a decrease, and noticeably sheet iron, pig iron and tin plates, aggregating in all nearly $10,000,000.

Domestic Exports.

"Turning to domestic exports, the aggregates hold their own remarkably well, considering the great reduction in prices of agricultural products. Europe took much less wheat than in 1893, but nearly as much corn and wheat flour. The prices were such as tempt buyers, and the result was nearly $62,000,000 less in the value of the exports of breadstuffs. Provisions, on the other hand, showed an increase in the value, due to the greater exports of fresh beef sent to the United Kingdom; of bacon, sent to Europe and Brazil, and lard taken by continental Europe. Of this class of products only tallow shows a decrease, undoubtedly due to the competition of Australia.

"In another item of domestic exports which meets serious competition—refined mineral oil—the increased quantity exported was 25,000,000 gallons, and this is especially notable, as the exports to China, to British and Asia India and the East Indies show more than 50,000,000 gallons. This points to the fact that the American product is meeting with more severe competition from the Russian oil in eastern countries than in Europe and South America. The cheapness of raw cotton has tempted heavy purchases, and the quantity exported in the calendar year 1894 exceeded that exported in the fiscal year in the commercial history of the country. A greater quantity and value of cotton manufactures exported are evidences of the capacity to compete successfully in foreign markets. Manufactures of leather give a small increase as do also manufactures of wool.

"Products of iron and steel and manufactures of wood remain stationary. Copper again makes a record, the exports in 1894 being 162,000,000 pounds, as compared with 139,000,000 pounds in 1893.

"From a review of general conditions it is recognized that the United States has suffered materially in only one direction, that of dutiable imports. A derangement of conditions in that one branch is levitable, whether a proposition be pending to raise or lower duties. In all else the conditions of foreign trade are more favorable here than in any European country, and in the great lines of its commerce a gratifying stability and even some development are shown. With the first of January the tariff of 1894 went into full effect and imports will now become normal and more regular and their effect upon revenue more clearly seen. The duties paid on imported woolen manufactures in January nearly made good a three months income from that source, while sugar and distilled spirits are again becoming profitable sources of revenue.

Want Cotton Mills South.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 6.—N. B. Johnston, vice-president of the Roanoke board of trade, has left for New England in the interest of the movement to induce cotton mills to come south.

Will He Use It?

Albany, Feb. 6.—The Lawson power of removal bill has passed the senate by a vote of 18 to 9. This measure authorizes the mayor of New York to make wholesale removals of city officials.

THEY HELD UP A TRAIN.

Three Hundred Dollars Taken From an Old Lady—Express Car Safe.

Hutchinson, Kan., Feb. 6.—Train No. 1 on the Sante Fe passed west through Hutchinson last night on time. When Sylvai, a small station twenty miles west was reached the train stopped for coal and two men crawled into the cab, at the same time covering Engineer Kearney and his fireman with guns. They robbed the engineer and fireman of their money, about $40, and ordered them to march to the express car and break open the door. A demand was made upon the messenger, Jesse Ruble, to open the safe, but when he refused the robbers abandoned the idea of robbing the express car.

They then marched the engineer and fireman with a sack into the passenger coach and while one man held the trainmen, the other covered the passengers and ordered "hands up." Thus they went through the train, dumping pocketbooks, watches knives and revolvers into the sack. The amount of money secured cannot be approximated. One lady bought a ticket at Hutchinson for Colorado point and the ticket agent here says she had at least $300 when she purchased her ticket, which she was made to donate. The robbers were very cool and deliberate, taking fully an hour to do their work. When the robbers entered the coach about the first man they covered was Conductor McGrath and his brakeman, and they too were forced to surrender their valuables. After the work of robbing the coaches was over, the engineer and fireman were marched back to their posts and ordered to "pull out" which they did.

After the robbers passed through the first coach the conductor and brakeman started to leave the car and raise the alarm in the town but they were discovered by more robbers standing on the ground on each side of the train who ordered them back into the coaches.

The country is aroused and the farmers are out well armed trailing the robbers, who rode off in a southeast direction.

THEIR FATHER WENT DOWN.

Letter from an Elbe Passenger to His Wife.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 6.—A pathetic letter written to his wife in this city by George Henne, one of the passengers who went down on the Elbe, has just been made public. It was mailed from Germany a few days before the ship sailed.

After saying that he had taken passage on the Elbe, Mr. Henne says in part:

"I am coming to you again, my dear ones, if that is God's merciful will. You cannot write to me again—it is too late for that—but you can welcome me in New York. Oh, how happy I am to think that I will be among my loved ones once more. Now, a last farewell, dear Caroline, and pray for me while I am at sea, because travel is a little more serious during this season than in fall or summer. But we will hope for the best. Au revoir. George Henne."

Henne's family, who lives at 133 Acquedust street, were left entirely destitute. His wife has been for some time sick, and the grief over her husband's loss has so aggravated the trouble that it will be necessary for her to go to a hospital. She has five small children. The case is exciting the liveliest interest and sympathy in this city, and nearly $200 has been raised for the unfortunate family by popular subscription.

WANTED FOR EMBEZZLEMENT.

Mr. and Mrs. Keane Held for the English Authorities.

New York, Feb. 6.—James and Ida Keane were arrested at the Hotel Marlborough yesterday on the strength of a cable dispatch from Liverpool. They were wanted for embezzlement.

It is stated that Keane has confessed to embezzling $10,000 from the firm of Elder, Dempster & Co., of Liverpool, in whose employ he had been for ten years. Keane said that as assistant cashier he had received and handled much of the money paid into the firm which he was supposed to turn over to the cashier. He began by taking small amounts from the money drawer which he squandered at games of chance until he had embezzled $2,500.

Fearing that his peculations would be discovered Keane said he decided to take a large amount and get away. He took $7,500 on January 10, and with his wife sailed for New York, arriving in this city on the 29th.

Keane said that he had intended to go to Rio Janeiro in a few days to engage in the coffe business but his arrest spoiled his plans. About $5,000 was found in his room at the hotel. Both Keane and his wife are held for the arrival of extradition papers.

Riddled with Bullets.

Baltimore, Feb. 6.—The criminal court was the scene of an unique exhibition yesterday when nine big, burly eastern shore negroes were put on trial for the murder of Constable Edward Carver of Somerset county. There would have been ten prisoners had not a mob of Somerset citizens, unable to wait for the slow wheels of justice to move, put a summary end to the career of Isaac Kemp, the leader of the murderous gang. He was riddled with fifty bullets.

$5,000 Fire in Silver Creek.

Silver Creek, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Fire destroyed the Newton block on Dunkirk street, causing a loss of about $5,000. The principal loser is H. Malis, groceries, $2500. The occupants of the stores lived in the apartments on the upper floors and lost all their household effects. The weather was very cold and the firemen had great difficulty in preventing a much more serious conflagration.

Susan B. Anthony Talks.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 6.—Miss Susan B. Anthony made a public address at the county courthouse yesterday. When she concluded fifty ladies joined the suffragists. These are the recruits made by the convention during this session here last week.

Will Fight the "Coffee Cooler."

London, Feb. 6.—The fight between Frank P. Slavin and Frank Craig, the "Harlem Coffee Cooler," will take place at Central hall, Holborn, on March 11.

BLOCKED BY THE POLICE

Judge Gaynor's Views Expressed to the Board.

Monopoly Against Labor, Bluecoats in the Way—Mass Meeting Postponed on Account of Police, Henry George and Dr. Lyman Abbott Refusing To Speak in Their Presence.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Hon. William J. Gaynor, justice of the supreme court, of this city, Monday wrote the following letter to the state board of mediation and arbitration at Albany on the Brooklyn trolley strike:

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 4, 1895.

"To the Board of Mediation and Arbitration:

"I regret that other duties prevented me from responding at once to your request that I state to you what I deem the cause of the existing contention between two street railroad companies in Brooklyn and their men. I shall not speak in respect of what came before me judicially at all, but only of things that I am free to speak of, like any other citizen.

"I read the testimony taken before you and was not surprised that no two witnesses, whether railroad officials or employes, agreed fully in respect of what the cause is. The real cause does not lie in anything stated before you. It lies in a state of disquiet and moral protest, not confined to the employes of the companies, but pervading this intelligent community, and which was caused by recent speculative uses and manipulations which these companies have been subjected to by certain individuals who have come into control of them.

"Take the case of the Brooklyn City Railroad company. Up to three years ago it was a healthy enterprise and was paying large dividends. No one was jealous or uneasy over the prosperity of its stockholders, for they were fairly entitled to it, though the stock and bonds may, in the just opinion of many, have grown larger than the outlay warranted. Its bonded indebtedness had enlarged to $3,000,000 and its paper shares to $3,000,000, making a burden of $6,000,000.

That Watered Stock.

"But it is what followed that I desire to state to you. The bonded indebtedness was increased to six millions ($6,000,000) and the paper capital to twelve millions ($12,000,000). Thus, at a few strokes, the company's burden was raised to eighteen millions ($18,000,000). Coincident with this, it is true that a change was made from horses to electricity. Whether the fair cost of the change was equal to this great increase in paper stock and in bonds, I leave to those who know what the legitimate cost a mile for such a change, or even for the building and equipping new of an electric street railroad is.

"But the case does not stop here. The next two steps are what aroused public conscience. Those in control took this company, and in 1893 leased it for 999 years to a little street railroad company called the Brooklyn eights Railroad company, which they had got control of. This little company has a paper capital of $200,000 and a mile or less of track running down to Wall street ferry. One might well think that instead of the great Brooklyn City Railroad company system being turned over to the miniature company the reverse would have happened; but it did not, for that would not have served the purpose in view.

"By the terms of the lease this little company agreed to pay the interest on the $6,000,000 in bonds, and also 10 per cent. on the $12,000,000 in paper stock of the Brooklyn City company. All the overplus it was to keep. That was to go to its stockholders. Thus this little company was made the absorber of all the earnings of the Brooklyn City company over and above what would have to be taken to pay as above stated, the interest on the bonds and 10 per cent. on the stock of the latter company. But this did not satisfy those who had gone that far; they must now go farther.

"William J. Gaynor."

Despise the Police.

The mass meeting in the interest of the former employes of the trolley roads which had been arranged to take place at the Athenaeum, was not held last evening owing to the presence of the police. Announcement was made yesterday that Henry George, Congressman Tom Johnson, Dr. Lyman Abbott, ex-Assemblyman Healey, A. J. Wolf, president of the Young Men's Democratic club, and others would speak, and a general invitation to attend was issued to the public.

At 8 oclock Police Inspector McKeller had thirty-six policemen at the Athenaeum. They were stationed in the hall, on the stairs and at the entrance. About fifty persons had taken seats in the hall when H. B. Martin, of the executive committee, of the Knights of Labor, stepped upon the platform and said that he had been authorized to announce that the meeting was postponed until such a time as it could be held without uniformed police blocking the entrance and interfering with a peaceful assemblage of citizens.

Meeting at Zero.

The strikers held an indignation meeting at the labor lyceum and denounced the action of the city authorities in dispersing the mass meeting in front of the city hall Monday and interfering with the Athenaeum meeting last night.

Twelve men are under arrest charged with "holding up" a car and assault on Officer Binder. Fifty men threw stones and an iron bar at the car windows, fortunately no one was hurt. Strikers then turned their attention on the motorman and conductor; the police arrived and fired into the crowd, scattering them in all directions.

IS IT THE END?

A Time of Great Mortality.

Especially Noticeable in Children.—Will Man Cease to Exist?—Can the "Omega" be Averted?

Why is it, with our improved sanitary appliances, our care to obtain fresh air, pure food, and plenty of exercise, the observance, in fact, of every hygienic law, that in spite of every care each succeeding generation seems to become weaker and shorter lived? Is it that we are now suffering for indiscretions of our ancestors, or is that terrible, unknown end of man at hand?

Whatever the cause, the existing condition of things is too apparent. Especially is this noticeable with the babies. Instead of the mother's life-giving milk, they are compelled to begin a struggle for existence with the bottle. The result in many cases is disastrous. The little one, failing to obtain necessary nourishment, grows weaker daily, until death ends the struggle. The end in these cases is Simply Starvation.

With this termination so often the case, the best physicians of the day have resorted to the use of Bovinine, that great and original raw food product, as a means to save the babies.

In this connection Dr. A. B. Robinson, 61 Dudley St., Boston, after commending Bovinine most highly for various complications where the waste of disease must be checked, and new blood, flesh, and strength created to effect a cure, says concerning this life-creating preparation, With feeble, bottle-fed babies, a small mount added to the milk has in my practice saved many children."

Bovinine is not a medicine, but a life-maintaining, flesh, bone, and blood-making preparation that contains the greatest amount of nourishment in the least possible bulk.

Give it to the little ones while there is still hope. Your physician, if you ask him, will recommend it, and you will bless the results obtained forever.

ASK THEM Why?

Ask the men who are making imitations of COTTOLENE, the new vegetable shortening, why they give up lard and try to trade on the merits of COTTOLENE? Perhaps you can guess why.

ASK HIM WHY?

Ask the grocer who attempts substitution, why he tries to sell an imitation when people call for that pure, palatable and popular vegetable shortening, COTTOLENE? Perhaps you can guess.

ASK YOURSELF Why?

Why should not YOU use COTTOLENE, instead of lard or any other compound, for all cooking purposes? It has the highest possible endorsement; from Physicians as to healthfulness; from Cooking Experts as to superiority; from housekeepers as to economy. Use COTTOLENE and stick to it.

TOO LOW WAGES.

Other Reasons Why We Get Discouraged.

Labor's Treasure Simply Wears Brain and Body.

Depressed System is Often Badly Nourished.

Paine's Celery Compound a Perfect Remedy.

Better Even Than Rest and Change for the Weary.

The more minutely all kinds of work become subdivided, the more sameness and monotony creep into each man's labor.

Day after day, day after day, in the same rut till little interest remains in the work, and the mind and body are gradually robbed of energy and healthy elasticity. Unless something is done the prolonged strain is likely to result in health failure. Nervous symptoms appear, cares that were once lightly cast off now stick like burs, slight physical exertion tires, and the end is complete prostration and breaking down of some vital organ.

Business men feel this, public officials, wage-earners, housekeepers, every man and woman whose work allows of little or no rest and change.

At the first small beginnings of nervousness or when languid feelings do not disappear after a sound night's sleep, the prudent person should know that he or she must check this decline in health by the use of that one genuine nerve food and blood renewer, Paine's celery compound.

The family physician knows its power over diseases of exhaustion and debility when he orders it, as so many careful practitioners are now doing in every city and small town throughout the United States.

As soon as one has fairly begun to use Paine's celery compound, every day will be a firm step toward assured health. Nervous, unhappy and feeble persons find their flesh becomes more solid, a more healthy color takes the place of the waxy, sallow look, and there comes a clear increase in the volume of the blood and an increased normal appetite because of this rapid feeding of the entire system. Work becomes easier.

This searching tonic goes at once to the very causes of nervous disaster and break down. It is invaluable in all wasting diseases in all cases where unusual demands are made on the system. Especially is it true in the case of mothers and invalids recovering from sickness.

Paine's celery compound has saved thousands from mournful years of feebleness, from the weariness of pain and from bodily weakness. It means health and happiness.

IS LA GASCOGNE SAFE?

Much Anxiety Felt for the Steamer's Safety.

Three Days Overdue, But Believed in Shipping Circles That She Has Suffered a Mishap to Her Machinery. Nine Hundred and Eighty-two Passengers Aboard.

New York, Feb. 6.—Up to an early hour this morning the French steamer La Gascogne had not been sighted.

She is now nearly three days overdue, as she should have arrived Sunday morning.

As the steamers of this line come and go like clockwork, the impression gains ground that she has met with some kind of a mishap.

The fact that the White Star steamer Runic, from Liverpool, and the Netherland-American liner Werkendam, from Rotterdam, have arrived about on time tends to strengthen the belief that La Gascogne has not had plain sailing.

There are many things that might tend to delay her that would not be considered of a serious nature by mariners, and, while it can hardly be said that there is any apprehension as to the big steamer's safety, the friends of those on board would gladly welcome the news of her having been sighted off this shore.

Has New Machinery.

La Gascogne used to be an eight day boat, but in May last she was overhauled and new boilers were put into her with the purpose of increasing her power to that of a seven day boat.

Her first trip with her new boilers began on December 23 last, and the trip from Havre to this port was made in eight days.

That trip was her last westward voyage until her present one, which she has not yet finished, and grave fears that she has met with an accident at sea are beginning to be entertained by shipping men.

The weather reports brought by incoming steamers do not indicate a condition of severity which should retard for three days over her regular time a ship like La Gascogne, and the theory advanced by steamship men in this city, that the big steamer's new machinery has become deranged, or that her boilers have proven inadequate, is gaining ground.

The Agent Believes She Is Safe.

This is not only a possibility but a probability, and A. Forget, the company's agent in this city, said yesterday that the long delay was undoubtedly due to that cause.

He said, however, that he felt no anxiety as to her safety as she is one of the staunchest ships in the service, and is commanded by as able a captain as ever navigated the Atlantic.

There are 44 cabin passengers, 718 steerage passengers and a crew of 210 men on board La Gascogne. Her officers are all experienced men. They are: Baudelon, commander; Masclet, second captain; Gontier, first officer; Landegren, second officer; Martin, chief engineer; Le Bars, second engineer; Gouverne, third engineer; Haman, fourth engineer; Japhet, purser, and Gervais, surgeon.

Looking for Friends.

There is much anxiety expressed by those calling at the company's office in this city, who are awaiting friends. Let us hope for the best.

JAPS FOILED.

They Meet With Slight Reverses Near Hai-Chang.

London, Feb. 6.—The Times to-day prints a letter from a correspondent at New-Chwang under date of January 29 saying that the Japanese met with Hai-Chang, being defeated by 1,500 followers of the rebel squatter Han. The commander of a Manchu battalion who failed to support Han was beheaded for cowardice.

General Sung, the Chinese commander, was enjoying the New Year fetes at New-Chwang. The mercury was thirteen degrees below zero and the Japanese troops were meeting with increasing difficulties owing to the severity of the weather.

Japs Met No Resistance.

London, Feb. 6.—A dispatch to the Central News from Tokio says that Marshal Oyama, in reporting the capture of an inland town and coast forts, says the Japanese forces met with no resistance. The marshal stationed a battalion at each fort. The Chinese on February 3 destroyed all thin junks and boats. On the same date the two fleets were unceasingly engaged.

A Young Mans Horrible Death.

Fredonia, N. Y., Feb. 6.—George F. Wilson, a young man employed by W. L. Martin on his grape farm about three miles west of this village, met with a horrible death. He was feeding hay into a presser when his feet caught in the machine and before the engine could be stopped his legs were crushed to a pulp up to the hips. He died in half an hour.

Ice in the Hudson.

New Yrk, Feb. 6.—Great quantities of ice came down the Hudson yesterday and greatly disturbed navigation on the North river. In some places the ice stretched from shore to shore. Small sailing craft were completely stalled for a time, and steam vessels had difficulty in forging through. Ferryboats on all the lines were delayed.

Hundreds Repent.

Troy, N. Y., Feb. 6.—The series of revival meetings which have been conducted here for the past three weeks by Rev. Dr. Chapman, closed last night. It is estimated that fully 3,500 people attended the services daily and that the converts numbered up into the hundreds.

An Uprising in Rio Janeiro.

London, Feb. 6.—The Daily News today prints a dispatch from Rio Janeiro saying that a conspiracy on the part of the friends of ex-President Peixoto has been discovered and that it is expected that martial law will be declared.

WERE T EY STOLEN BONDS?

A Buffalo Man Under Arrest—Failed in His Scheme.

Washington, Feb. 6.—A paper in this city publishes a story to the effect that recently Russell S. Kinsley, of Buffalo, applied to a firm of brokers in this city for negotiating a loan of $3,000 of Attica, N. Y., water bonds. Previous to consummating the business, the firm made some inquiries of Mr. F. C. Stevens, of this city, formerly a director in the Attica Water company, with the result, it is said, that the bonds offered must have been an amount stolen several years ago from Mr. Frost, the secretary of the county in which they were issued. A meeting was then arranged at the brokers' office with the principals in the offer to sell, said to be Kinsley and Frank W. Hayden, also of Buffalo. At this meeting was present Deputy United States Marshal Wallace Kirby, who had with him a writ of replevin for the bonds and when they were produced made a demand for them.

The Buffalo men, who were astounded at this phase of the situation, declared their absolute ignorance of anything wrong in the matter. Hayden said he obtained the Attica bonds from a man named Elijah Johnson, now dead. They made no effort to retain the bonds, and it is said have left the city.

WHISKEY TRUST WICKEDNESS.

President Greenhut Accused of Having Lied to the Court.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Judge Grosscup took up the investigation of the connection of Charles J. Heinsheimer and S. L. Wormser with the whiskey trust case. The names of these two were signed to the petition for a receivership, it is claimed, entirely without their authority. The court stated that he had in his possession an affidavit from President Greenhut declaring that he had authority to affix the two names. When he had read this, Attorney Julius Mack said, "I am prepared to state on information and belief that that affidavit is an unmitigated falsehood."

Judge Grosscup seemed somewhat startled at this statement. He demanded that Mr. Mack procure affidavits from New York at once confirming this statement, and said he was determined to fix the responsibility for the connection of these two young men with the case.

Attorney Mack caused another sensation when he accused Burry, who represents Mr. Greenhut, of saying in private conversation: "I believe my client lied about this matter."

This closed the matter until to-morrow morning, when affidavits can be procured from Goodhart & Co., and Heinsheimer & Wormser.

THE CORONER AND THE ELBE

Evidence About the Disaster To Be Brought in Court.

London, Feb. 6.—A coroner's inquest upon the body of Friedrich Ernst, which was picked up by the fishing smack Verena, was begun at Lowestoft yesterday. It is now said that Ernst was not a passenger but a seaman belonging to the crew of the Elbe.

The coroner in opening the proceedings said it was his intention to make a thorough inquiry into the circumstances of the loss of the Elbe and would adjourn the inquest for three weeks after the formal evidence had been taken, in order to communicate with the board of trade in regard to the exact course to be pursued. The German vice-consul and an agent of the North German Steamship company were present.

Several more lifebelts from the steamer Elbe have been picked up at various places on the coast.

HARD WAS HIS LOT.

Frozen To Death in Lake View Park. The Wife Without Money.

Cleveland, Feb. 6.—W. H. Goodno, of this city, deliberately froze himself to death in Lake View park last night. His body was found on one of the benches in the park by an employe of a nearby hospital. The following letter was found in his pocket.

To whom it may concern: I am W. H. Goodno of 255 Central avenue. Don't take me home but drop me at your morgue and let my wife know. Break it gently to my wife and then drop me in some handy hole so it won't take any expense. My wife has no means to foot any bills.

W. H. Goodno.

Another letter was found addressed to his wife, in which he asked her forgiveness and advised her to make the daughter help earn a living, "though she is so lazy." Goodno was a plumber and a sufferer from rheumatism.

Man and Wife Gagged.

Plymouth, Ind., Feb. 6.—At midnight last night, four masked burglars burst open the door at the house of John Engle, ten miles north of this city with a heavy piece of timber. Engel and wife were tied hand and foot and gagged, while the robbers ransacked the premises. All the money they had saved by years of toil was taken.

Will Discuss Trade Conditions.

Pittsburg, Feb. 6.—Every railroad coal operator in the Pittsburg district has been asked to attend a meeting to be held to-morrow in the rooms of the coal agency. The object of the meeting is discussion of trade conditions, freight rates and other important matters, some of which will have important bearing upon the wage rates.

Burned To Death.

Rome, N. Y., Feb. 6.—John Snyder, a farmer over 70 years of age, who lived alone about eight miles west of here, was burned to death in his house last evening. He was alone and the origin of the fire and the circumstances are unknown.

Disgusted with the Bond Issue.

Denver, Feb. 6.—At a mass meeting held at the chamber of commerce resolutions were adopted protesting against the further issuance of bonds by the administration.

Stafford Under Contract.

New York, Feb. 6.—George S. Davis, the manager of the New York Baseball club, has received the signed contract of James Stafford, the player who is slated to take Ward's place at second base.

SENATORS ARE ANGRY

Sharp Words Between Harris and Mitchell.

District Appropriation Bill Passes the Senate—Debate on the Currency and Banking Measures in the House—Mr. Reed's Substitute—Several Private Bills Passed.

Washington, Feb. 6.—The opening of the session in the senate was accompanied by a rather stormy scene between two members of that body. An objection which Mr. Harris (dem., Tenn.) made to a request of Mr. Mitchell's (rep., Ore.) to be allowed to address the senate in explanation of a report which he proposed to make was resented by the Oregon senator, who after some little exchange of discourtesies, indulged in the cutting remark that the Tennessee senator was "capable of doing unusual, and indiscreet, and ungentlemanly things." To this the angry reply was made by Mr. Mitchell's conduct was "contemptible." There was some more storm indications after this point; but a timely use of the gavel by the vice-president prevented any further explosion of anger on either side, and business was proceeded with.

The district appropriation bill crowded out other matters, and occupied the remainder of the day's session—the bill being passed before adjournment. At one point the financial question broke out in the shape of an amendment offered by Mr. McLaurin (dem., Miss.), looking to the coinage of the silver bullion in the treasury to the amount of the seigiorage ($55,000,000;) but the amendment to which it was offered was decided, by a vote of the senate, to be out of order, and Mr. McLaurin's amendment fell with it.

After the district appropriation bill was passed, the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was taken up—not, however, displacing the bankruptcy bill as the unfinished business, and the senate adjourned.

House of Representatives.

The first day's debate in the house on the currency and banking bill, with authority to issue low-interest long-time bonds to maintain the gold reserve, brought out Mr. Reed's substitute for the measure which has been discussed the past day or two. The speech in which he presented the proposition was the principal feature of the day. The bill is in brief, that the secretary of the treasury be directed to issue 3 per cent. certificates of indebtedness to meet the deficiency in receipts, the gold reserve to be used only for the redemption of greenbacks.

These certificates, he said, might be for two years, or less, and could be redeemed out of the surplus receipts, which the secretary estimates the treasury will have this year. This would avoid all questions, he said, which hinder the passage of the committee's bill and meet the present exigency. The republicans, he said, were willing to forego any party advantage that might be obtained from a continuance of present conditions and join in the passage of a measure that would relieve the country; but it must be such a measure as commended itself to their ideas of right and justice and practicability. The bill he offered as a substitute was ordered to be printed in the record.

The debate was participated in by Messrs. Springer (dem., Ill.), and Patterson (dem., Tenn.), in favor of the bill; and by Messrs. Walker (rep., Mass.), Hall (dem., Mo.), Swanson (dem., Va.), Simpson (pop., Kan.), McKeighan (pop., Neb.), and Pence (pop., Col.), against it. Messrs. Walker and Cox also have substitutes for the pending bill, which they propose to offer.

Before the currency and banking bill was taken up, several private bills were passed; also, a resolution calling upon the secretary of the interior to suspend the location of lands upon railroad grants until further action by congress.

Shook Hands with the Murderer.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Mary Florence Jourdenes, of Springfield, Mass., the aged mother of the principal defendant in the Barnes' murder case, rose from a seat in Judge Freeman's court yesterday and shook hands with the murderer after he and the other four defendants had been seated. This marked the opening of the trial. All pleaded not guilty. Jourdenes' plea will be self defense.

The Poor Suffering in Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—This city has experienced the coldest weather thus far this year, the official thermometer at the auditorium registering fifteen degrees below zero. There is intense suffering in the homes of the poor and many persons have been more or less severely frost bitten. An old lady was found frozen to death yesterday and a homeless laborer was found so badly frozen that there is no hope of his recovery.

School War Settled.

Bridgeport, Conn., Feb. 6.—The recent school war in Newtown was settled by a decision of Judge Prentice, sustaining a demurrer filed by School Commissioner Winton a few weeks ago. The decision gives the school board power to remove Miss Ryan from the Gray Plains school and appoint whom they please to the position.

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Our cleaner is ready, and our dyer has his fall shades mixed.

Brave Men Behind the Guns.

Feb. 6 is the anniversary of the taking of Fort Henry, Tenn. (1862), by Commodore Foote's gunboats. The defense was made by 54 men with nine guns. They held out two hours in order to allow the infantry garrison time to retreat. Captain Jesse Taylor commanded the gunners, who belonged to the volunteer militia of Tennessee. When the Union fleet was seen bearing down on the work, General Tilghman, the post commandant, asked Taylor "to hold out one hour." He assigned a gun to each vessel. These were seven in number—four ironclads leading, and three wooden gunboats. Fort Henry's guns open on the fleet with a perfect "broadside," and for 20 minutes the action was hot. The ironclad Essex was pierced above the porthole, and the shot entered the boiler. She dropped out of the fight. About that time a rifled gun in the fort burst, and a columbiad was spiked by its own priming wire. The ironclads then drew closer. Two of Taylor's guns were struck and shattered and their gunners disabled by simultaneous shots. The gunboat shells also penetrated the walls as though they were of pine boards. Another gun was speedily disabled, making five that were useless, and 16 men had fallen beside them.

GENERAL TILGHMAN.

The fight had lasted nearly two hours, time enough for the garrison to save themselves. General Tilghman ordered the colors down, but the staff had been shot through and the halyards had fouled at the crosstrees. The flag could not be lowered. Captain Taylor and an old "man-o'-war's man" then climbed up the shot riddled mast, the target for a steady gunboat fire, and lowered their tattered ensign.

The Union fleet carried over 50 guns. Foote's flagship, the ironclad Cincinnati, received one shot through her front and her upper works were bored full of holes. All the casualties of the fleet were suffered on the ironclads Essex and Cincinnati. They numbered 39, double the loss in the fort.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE

—The McKane-Walsh shooting case was today postponed for one week.

—The bowling game between the Elizabeth and Plainfield teams, which was set for Friday night, has been postponed indefinitely.

—Unconsciously the front door of M. C. Dobbins's house on Elmwood place was left open last night, and a choice lot of flowers suffered, most of them being frozen.

—Chicago was 12 degrees warmer than Plainfield at 8 a. m. today. Buffalo was 4 degrees colder. Albany was the same as Plainfield. North Dakota was 4 degrees colder.

—The Christian Endeavor society of the Park Avenue Baptist Church will celebrate Christian Endeavor Day Friday evening with special exercises. Rev J. W. Richardson will make an address.

—A quorum not being present at the annual meeting of the New Jersey Building Loan and Investment Company held in the Republican Association rooms last evening, the election of officers was deferred till Feb. 19.

—Plainfield will be well represented at the G. A. R. Encampment to be held in Trenton, Thursday and Friday. Several important measures will come up for consideration, in which the Plainfield delegation are interested.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The opening reception in connection with the Y. M. C. A. convention to be held Feb. 14-17 will be in charge of the Christian Endeavor societies of the city. Representatives from all the societies met in the Association building this morning to make arrangements for the affair.

Persons holding $5, $8 and $10 membership tickets in the Association are entitled to the privileges of the entertainments which will be given from time to time.

Work has commenced on the bowling alleys, and will be pushed as rapidly as possible. The furnishing of the main hall is about completed, and presents an attractive appearance.

—Howell Osborn, the New York clubman, died today.

—Prof. Samuel Dickie will speak in Music Hall next Sunday afternoon.

—An umbrella that keeps you dry and that is handsome to carry, and yet that collapses quickly to be packed in the grip, is the latest novelty in the stock of Jeweler Asa Collier.

Electric Lights.

A Vienna professor gives it as his opinion, after much research on the subject, that all delicate persons and those who suffer from nervousness should never remain long in a room lighted by electric lights, its effect on the nervous system being such that after awhile they generally become uneasy and depressed and find it impossible to concentrate the attention for any length of time. Young persons, on the contrary, and those with strong nerves find the influence of the light extremely beneficial, especially when the brain is overworked and tired, the effect being much the same as that of strong coffee—i. e., increased activity of the nervous system.

Through Algerian Spectacles.

In a delightful paper before a club recently Mrs. Fannie C. Barbour, the writer and traveler, gave a description of her visit to some Algerian ladies. Through the interpreting friend who accompanied her the hostesses conveyed their polite pity at her extraordinary costume. "Where," they asked in plaintive pity for the unfortunate American, "are her Turkish trousers?" When told that she came from America, they asked where that was, and on hearing that it was across a great sea complacently remarked: "Not so great as our Mediterranean. There is no sea like that."

$100 Reward $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case it fails to cure.

Dr. Lighthill refers with pardonable pride to the success of his practice in Plainfield and submits below a few of the many testimonials which he has received from grateful patients. A mass of similar ones can be seen at his office.

AN ALMOST MIRACULOUS CURE.

The Statement of Mr. Edward Teel, Jr., of Dunellen, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

From a sense of duty I desire to call public attention to the almost miraculous cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in the case of my wife. For eleven years she had been afflicted with piles of an unusual severe and distressing character. She suffered every day of her life the most intense pain, attended with frequent and profuse hemorrhage. This state of things debilitated her entire system until she became a perfect wreck of her former self.

We made every effort to obtain a cure but they all resulted in bitter disappointment, although a number of physicians of excellent reputations for skill in that direction had treated her case. She grew worse and worse all the time, the pain became perfectly unbearable and I felt she could not bear the strain of her condition much longer. In this extremity, a friend of mine, Mr. W. E. Dilts, a resident of Roselle, N. J., a passenger conductor on the New Jersey Central told me that he had been similarly affected, and had been permanently cured by Dr. Lighthill, after other medical skill had failed. He assured me that the doctor would cure my wife, no matter how severe her case may be, and his prediction proved perfectly correct. In spite of her desperate condition, Dr. Lighthill, I am glad to say, has effected a complete and perfect cure in her case, and has given her new life.

Since the cure has been effected she has gained in health and strength and is so improved in appearance that her friends scarcely recognize her. They all consider her cure as almost miraculous, and Dr. Lighthill's praise is heard on every side. Our gratitude to Dr. Lighthill is unbounded and we only hope that other sufferers may be benefited by this publication.

EDWARD TEEL, JR.

A Flattering Testimonial from Colonel John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing with which I was afflicted.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly; they were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleeping and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill of No. 132 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOMAS CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card From Mr. T. R. VanZandt, of Nos. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks, but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose flattering testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

DRAMA AND OPERA.

A SURFEIT OF FOREIGN PLAYS AND FOREIGN ACTORS IN NEW YORK.

Herbert Beerbohm Tree Makes a Favorable Impression. Fanny Davenport May Have a Theater of Her Own in the Ill-fated Casino. Grand Opera near its End.

The London actor, Herbert Beerbohm Tree, made his American debut at Abbey's Theatre last week. He was greeted by an audience which, having welcomed him with hearty applause, settled down at once into a judicial attitude toward him, as though determined to ignore his fame and judge independently of his merits. An Anglomaniac element was present, it is true, and was eager to accept the English celebrity without hesitancy or discrimination, but critics, amateur and professional, were predominant in the assemblage, for there was no other new thing at the theaters to distract the attention of the first-night contingent. To these people, Mr. Tree proved his ability. His acting made no profound impression, and it may, indeed, have disappointed more of the observers than it satisfied, but it went far to demonstrate the justifiability of his reputation as a versatile depictor of character. It is all but certain that when he has appeared in a number of roles his flexibility of talent will have won for him a more positive meed of approval. Mr. Tree's first public bow in this country was made in the character of Gringoire, that French tatterdemalion poet and minstrel who makes and sings songs against Louis XI. We have had English versions of Theodore de Banville's short play before. The one used in this instance, entitled "The Ballad Monger," is worded by Walter Besant and Walter Herries Pollock. The prior actors in the piece here have been the late Lawrence Barrett in English and Constant Coquelin in French. Mr. Tree was a little like both of them. He had some of the declamatory force of Mr. Barrett and some of the reckless air of M. Coquelin, added to which he was excellently picturesque in pose and motion. He delivered the poems, especially "The Orchard of the King," with a good elocutionary method, with a proper sentimentality, and with a romantic aspect. Thus he introduced himself pleasantly, and raised the expectation of something more solidly and substantially admirable to come. Mr. Tree will stay a month in this city, and change his roles frequently, in order to prove to us that he really is the versatile artist which transatlantic fame declares him to be. He brings along a full company and a complete equipment of scenery, and so we shall get a rapid round of genuine London theatrical entertainments. No doubt culture and fashion will equally pay attention to Mr Tree.

Eleven plays of foreign make, counting in the three to be used by Beerbohm Tree, and leaving out two that have been thoroughly Americanized, are to be performed in New York this week, as against fourteen that are American. In the lead among the important works, by priority of production here, is "The Masqueraders," which is not to be displaced at the Empire this season.

Fanny Davenport will appear in "Gismonda" at the Fifth Avenue until the end of February, her time having been extended. That proves the substantial character of the drama's success. Miss Davenport will lease and manage the Casino, if the plan to turn that house over to vaudeville falls through. In that case she would lower the auditorium to the ground, thus gaining convenience and more room. She would act in some of the plays produced, and not in others.

Kathryn Kidder, another actress prospering in a Sardou play, "Madame Sans Gene," at the Broadway, is something of a manager, too, as she is a partner with Augustus Piton in the venture. It is understood that several managers made rich offers to her for the Napoleonic comedy after she had purchased it for America, but she was determined to have a personal share in its triumph, if it should make one—and it has. It is holding a place among the best of the Broadway entertainments.

The dramatic version of the legend of Faust has been used by Lewis Morrison on tours during a few years past. This "Faust" gets into New York at the Grand Opera House. It keeps a red light on Mephistopheles throughout his deviltry with Faust and Marguerite, and has been accepted elsewhere as a thrilling play. Mr. Morrison enacts the Satanic plotter and tempter. He is a sound and virile actor of the legitimate class.

The admirable cast of "The Fatal Card," at Palmer's, is the means of making refined audiences accept and enjoy the excessively melodramatic scenes of that piece. The episode of the infernal machine's explosion, as presented with actors of the first grade, thrills Broadway audiences quite as thoroughly as Bowery assemblages are affected by similar things clumsily done. The change to "Trilby," which Manager Palmer is to make, will be a far departure. The Potter dramatization of the Du Maurier novel has gone into rehearsal.

There will be but two weeks more of the opera season, and the programme announced for this week is made up of works which have proved their popularity. The enthusiasm which always marks the close of the opera season set in at the "Faust" matinee two weeks ago, and has continued ever since, with, of course, the moderation in intensity which emphasizes the difference between a matinee and an evening performance. For several weeks the opera house has been so crowded at the matinees that the women have stood three or four deep at the rear of the orchestra seats. The particular enthusiasm of such an audience is of course centered on Jean de Reszke, although at the last "Faust" matinee Sig. Campanari, who sang Valentine, and acted the death scene splendidly, came in for six recalls. But the applause for anybody else is only incidental to the demonstration over the tenor. As soon as the curtain falls, women from all parts of the house rush through the corridors to the right-hand corner of the auditorium, toward the door through which the singers appear on the stage for the encores. By the time they have reappeared this corner holds a compact mass of women cheering and applauding with as much strength as they are capable of exerting. The diplomatic Jean sweeps the crowd with one killing glance, and when he has finally disappeared every woman within reach feels that part of it was intended for her.

METROPOLITAN NOTES.

Interesting Facts and Opinions Chronicled by the Daily Press of New York.

The first great movement in real estate in New York was in Wall Street. A new City Hall was erected there in 1700 at a cost of about $16,000. The selection of this place was not fortuitous. The name of Wall was derived from the fact that a line of palisades had there crossed the city from Broadway to the East River, each picket of this palisade being a young and straight tree, sharpened at the top. When the Indian wars ceased in this neighborhood it was thought to be no longer necessary to keep up the city defenses, and the fortifications were ordered demolished and the street widened. The old City Hall had become dilapidated, and it was resolved to erect another one at the head of Broad street, which was of unusual width. In former years a wide ditch had been cut through the centre for drainage, and to some extent for navigation. When this was filled up it gave much ampler proportions to the thoroughfare than those possessed by any other street. The new City Hall was an imposing edifice, and that, with the additional fact that the street was on good high ground, caused the best houses to be erected there, and it became a favorite street for lawyers and other professional men. The Legislature for a number of years occupied the City Hall, as did Congress for one session. Before the end of the century the position of this thoroughfare as the monetary centre of America was fixed. The lot at the corner of Wall and Broad streets recently sold at $425 a square foot.—Commercial List.

Another of the very large day goods establishments in the city, which has been in existence for over half a century, has a a grocery department almost ready for the opening, and has already a department for crockery ware, and also one for house-furnishing goods. We believe that the department system in large business houses has proved to be a success in every instance where it has been rightfully established in New York, and we suppose it is destined to flourish permanently. This new departure in business methods must be a thing of very serious concern to all the old-fashioned shopkeepers, as well as to their employees. In the ordinary grocery stores there are the salesmen; in the grocery department of the department stores there are the saleswomen. It is no wonder that there is constant talk upon the subject among members of the Retail Grocers' Union. What can the thousands of small grocers do about the changes which are taking place, and which they are wholly unable to prevent? That is a question which they will have to think about for a good while before they can answer it satisfactorily. We have not any doubt, however, that they will yet learn how to adapt themselves to the new order of things.—N. Y. Sun.

The most notable thing about the New York Street Cleaning Department under the new regime is ths comparative youthfulness of the men. They work with extraordinary vigor and energy, and crowds of people stand and watch them while they work. There is something in the spectacle of a man working briskly and energetically which always attracts a crowd. When Col. Waring's men descended upon upper Broadway after the recent snowstorm with their carts, the loungers on that thoroughfare were entertained by their efforts. The former method was for one or two carts to back up slowly to a mound of snow. Then the shovellers would gather slowly and rheumatically from various points and begin in a desultory way to shovel the snow into the cart. The driver usually sat on the curb and watched the efforts of the others sympathetically. In the course of ten or fifteen minutes five or six men would succeed in shovelling a portion of the snow mound into the cart. Then the driver would relight his pipe, and, after all hands had rested a while, the horse would slowly drag his load away. The men were always old, not infrequently crippled, and invariably slow in their movements. Now there is a swarm of carts on Broadway, and every cart is driven by a young and active man. The snow is shovelled into carts in a businesslike way, the drivers jump to their places, and the horses trot off with their loads.

Dr. Loomis's will, disposing of $1,000,000, is an illustration of the large fortunes rolled up by physicians who achieve prominence as specialists in New York. This fortune was made in the main during the past ten years, and its size would indicate that the rumor which places the income of many of the New York crack doctors at $60,000 to $75,000 a year as not very far out of the way. Some physicians, by the way, who discussed this matter, said that it was only among ignorant people that anything startling was discernible in the fact that Dr. Loomis died of the disease which he was so successful in treating among his patients. Doctors so often give way before attacks of disease of which they have made a specialty, that it has almost been accepted as a rule that they finally succumb to the enemy whom they have most frequently vanquished in others.

The Awakening Tiger.

Between the drowsy sleep of the nocturnal animals and the hypersensitive sleep of those which spend their lives in constant fear of their enemies a place must be found for the form of slumber enjoyed by the large carnivora and that of domestic animals. The former have no enemies to fear except man, and the latter, protected by man, enjoy to the full the blessing of natural rest.

Tigers are frequently found fast asleep in the daytime. Native hunters have been known to track them after a "kill" to the place in which they were lying fast asleep and gorged with food and to shoot them as they lie. When taking his midday repose in districts where it is little disturbed, the tiger does not always retire to a place of security, like the bear, or even the leopard, which usually sleeps on the branch of a tree. It just lies down in some convenient spot, either shady or warm, according to the weather, and there sleeps almost regardless of danger. They have been found lying in dry nullahs, under trees and even in the grass of the hillsides unobserved until their disturber came within a few yards of them.

General Douglas Hamilton, when shooting in the Dandilly forest, came upon a tigress and two cubs lying fast asleep on their backs, with their paws sticking up in the air, under a clump of bamboos. When he was within a few yards of the group, one raised its head and without moving its body quietly looked at him along the line of its body between its paws. Tigers kept in captivity awaken gradually, stretching and yawning like a dog.—London Spectator.

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.

So limited has been the supply of GENUINE ANTITOXINE heretofore, that sales have been made only on condition of immediate actual use. But amid so large a population as ours, an urgent demand for the new treatment may arise at any hour, night or day, Sunday or week-day. And delay in obtaining it might result fatally. I have therefore, with some difficulty, and at considerable expense, provided a complete outfit of Antitoxine Serum (with injector) and am prepared to meet such demand. The cost of an outfit (serum of two powers and Koch injector) is now about $12 being only one-fourth of the earlier price. At present sales will be made only on the order of a practicing physician.

WERNER'S

A SIMIAN BURGLAR.

There was a large party at the Chateau de Kerdall, near Vannes.

The Marquis de Kerdall and his young wife had just returned from a tour of the world on their yacht, during which they had paid flying visits to Africa, America and Oceanica, and they had celebrated their homecoming by gathering together all their friends and relatives at their country house.

Among the guests was old Dr. Cornabuc, an illustrious member of the Society of Metaphysical Sciences, so original, so absent-minded, so venerable in his blonde peruke and his costume of the fashion of 1850. Then there was Mme. de Lartigues, an old school friend of the Marquise, a brilliant and coquettish Parisienne. And there was Miss Hawthorne, an English maiden lady with youthful propensities. And there were many others, all of whom found plenty of amusement to their heart's content at Kerdall.

Outside of the ordinary pleasures of life there were some unusual attractions. In the first place, the host and hostess had seen and experienced so much that was novel and startling that their conversation was always fascinating. Then the rooms of the castle constituted a veritable museum, being stocked with rare and curious objects from two continents. And, finally, a menagerie had been created in one corner of the park and was stocked with the various animals which M. de Kerdall had picked up during the voyage and brought back to France for purposes of acclimitation.

There were gazelles, antelopes, Thibet goats, Nile ibises, rose flamingoes, opossums, beavers, and an Asiatic ape of the mandrill species, as mild as a lamb, but as mischievous as all its kind. An iron-lattice cage had been built for him close to the conservatory.

As will be seen, the Chateau de Kerdall was a veritable Eden, but this fact did not prevent Mme. de Lartigues from dreading the isolated position of the place among the wide expanse of woods and fields.

"I should be afraid to live here all the year round," she said.

"Afraid of what, my dear?" asked the Marquise.

"Oh, of robbers; they would fairly revel here."

Robbers! In this mansion filled to the eaves with guests and servants! Everybody mocked at the young woman, and old Dr. Cornabuc told horrible stories of robbers and assassins until Mme. de Lartigues, ashamed of her chimerical fears, was the first to laugh, and when the retiring hour came she mounted to her sleeping apartment on the second floor supplied with a goodly stock of heroism. Within a short time all the occupants of the chateau were in the land of dreams.

How long Mme. de Lartigues slept she knew not. She was awakened by a rattling at her window, which she had left half opened on account of the heat.

What was her terror, when, in the feeble starlight, she saw a form climbing noiselessly through the window. She tried to scream, but her throat was parched with fright, and she could not utter a word.

The man had entered the chamber. Then the poor woman hastily buried her head beneath the bedclothing. Half dead with fear, she could hear her nocturnal visitor going and coming across the carpet with muffled steps. It seemed as though he must have removed his shoes in order to tread softly.

Bathed with cold perspiration and her teeth chattering, she awaited the mortal blow from the invader. But it did not come.

After about a quarter of an hour she timidly peeped out. She could see and hear nothing. Slightly reassured, she recovered the use of her voice, and started a series of shrieks, so sharp, piercing and terrible that in an instant the entire chateau was turned topsy-turvy. Everybody rushed into her chamber with lights in their hands, M. and Mme. de Kerdall at the head.

"What is it? What's the matter?" they cried.

She recounted her horrible vision; they would not believe her—she had been dreaming.

Who could have climbed into this chamber, so high above the ground, without a ladder?

"Did you see him plainly?" asked the Marquise, with a touch of suspicion in his voice.

"As plainly as I see you, and it even seemed—"

She hesitated.

"What?"

"It seemed as though I could recognize Dr. Cornabuc in his red wig and redingote."

Everybody laughted. What! Dr. Cornabuc! A man of his age and character scaling windows at midnight! It was certain now that Mme. Lartigues had been dreaming. They tried to dissipate her fears, and she was just about to persuade herself that she had been the victim of an hallucination when she happened to cast her eyes on the bureau, where she had left her jewels.

They were gone! It had truly been a robber!

The laughing suddenly ceased, and they looked at one another in consternation.

All at once another cry was heard, a piercing shriek coming through the stillness of the night. It appeared to emanate from Miss Hawthorne's chamber. There was a rush for her apartment, and the English lady was found standing in the middle of the room, with frightened eyes.

"There! there!" she cried, pointing to the window. "A man! He escaped, but I recognized him."

"Who was it?"

"Dr. Cornabuc!"

The doctor again! This time nobody laughed. Cornabuc was looked for, among the persons who had been attracted by the excitement, but he was not there. He was the only occupant of the chateau who was missing.

"Come, let us go to the doctor's room," said the Marquis, knitting his brows. "He will doubtless solve the mystery for us."

All followed Kerdall—the men half-dressed, the women in their white night-robes, all carrying candles—a weird procession.

Upon the entrance of the crowd, the doctor hurriedly wrapped himself in the bedclothes, his wrinkled countenance alone being visible over the top, and this convulsed by anger into a comical grimace. The candle-light was reflected from his bald pate, which shone like old ivory.

"Is this some ill-timed joke?" he stormed. "What is going on? Is the old chateau on fire? I heard a terrible outcry, and was just about to inquire into it."

"You must come and join us, doctor," said Kerdall.

"And how shall I do it?" cried the doctor furiously. Some rascal has run off with my clothing, and in exchange he has left me this," and he savagely hurled a white object into the middle of the room.

"My corsets!" murmured Miss Hawthorne, modestly lowering her eyes.

"And this," continued the doctor, wildly brandishing another article.

"My hat!" cried Mme. de Lartigues.

"This raillery passes all bounds," howled the doctor, whose shining head, with one final grimace, ducked beneath the bed clothing, like the clown going through a trap door in the marionette theatre.

They knew not what to think. The mystery was more complicated. It certainly looked as though a robber had entered the chateau—perhaps a whole band of burglars and assassins. Mme. de Lartigues imagined a troop of brigands armed to the teeth.

"Let us hope they have no guns," said the marquis, to raise the hopes of his guests.

There was no echo to the pleasantry.

Suddenly a strange sound was heard coming from the ground floor. It was certainly the piano in the reception-room, but it was surely being played by goblin fingers, and so furiously that it seemed as though the keys must be broken.

"This is too much!" cried the marquis, rushing toward the staircase, with all the crowd, excepting Dr. Cornabuc, close behind him.

They hastily penetrated the salon. It was empty. The mysterious visitor was gone, but he could not be far away. The crash of china and glass announced his presence in the dining-room.

Everybody rushed thither, and the marquis, who was in the lead, dimly saw a form escaping through the window into the garden.

"This time we have got him!" he cried.

The men seized guns and knives from a hunting rack in the vestibule, and started across the garden and park in pursuit of the fugitive, while the women barricaded themselves in the salon and anxiously awaited the result of the chase.

It was about an hour later, in the uncertain light which precedes the rising of the sun, that a servant discovered the mysterious stranger ensconced among the branches of a large oak. At his call the marquis and his guests hastened to the spot.

"Come down!" demanded M. de Kerdall, but the bandit only settled himself deeper among the foliage and made no response.

"Come down, or I will shoot!"

And, as there was no reply, he lifted his gun and already had his finger upon the trigger, when the domestic hurriedly pulled his arm, and said:

"Do not fire, monsieur. It is Dr. Cornabuc!"

And sure enough, the blond wig and long redingote could now be seen among the leaves.

But at this moment the first rays of sunlight gleamed in from the east and the oak was illuminated. The marquis suddenly broke into a fit of explosive laughter, and, as his guests gazed up into the tree, they could not keep from following his example.

"The ape!"

Everything was explained. The animal had escaped from his cage the previous evening and had managed to effect an entrance into the chateau. Animated by his instinct of imitation, he had first attired himself in the doctor's effects and then wandered over the house at his own free will.

He was put back into his prison after some little trouble, and at breakfast the party enjoyed a hearty laugh at the adventures of the night.

Put Dr. Cornabuc did not appear at the table. He left the chateau at an early hour, furious and without taking leave.

Since this episode he has never set foot at Kerdall, and he has never lost a feeling of deep antipathy to Mme. de Lartigues and Miss Hawthorne.

"How could they have mixed me up with a monkey?" he wants to know.—From the French in the San Francisco Argonaut.

Destiny.

George H. Stroble of Elba was on his way to Batavia, N. Y. It was getting dark, and the snow was falling and drifting as it fell. Two miles from Batavia's corporate limits he was tipped out of his sleigh and went heels over head into a snow bank. His head was very close to what looked like a bundle of shawls, but a faint cry told me a different tale. Picking it up he satisfied himself that it was a real live baby. For several minutes Stroble stood undecided, hardly realizing what had befallen himself—or the baby, either. Finally he got back into his sleigh, and, with wonderment on his countenance and the baby in his care, he started again for Batavia. He had travelled on for about two miles when a rig drove up behind him at a rapid rate, and a German occupant called out to him:

"Have you seen anything of a baby along the road?"

"Here it is," quickly said Stroble, as he caught the baby in his arms and almost ran to the other cutter with it, so glad was he to get it off his hands.

An explanation followed. The man's wife had gone to Batavia with his little daughter and the baby. On their return they were tipped over, and the mother fell out, but did not think the baby fell out also. The little girl managed to keep her seat. Both were much frightened and did not miss the baby until they got home. Then the father and husband hastened after it.

MONEY LOANED.

Local Representatives Wanted

Our system affords an opportunity to borrow on either personal or real estate security. The plan is superior to building and loan associations. The amount borrowed may be returned in monthly payments without bonus, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum, it affords absolute security to investors with a reasonable guarantee of an annual dividend of from 8 to 10 per cent. We desire to secure the services of energetic, representative men in every community to act as local secretaries. The position will be sufficiently remunerative to amply compensate for services. If you possess the above qualifications write for particulars. Full information regarding our system of making loans as well as investments and agencies will be furnished by addressing S. S. Robertson, President, 1122 Walnut st., Philadelphia. 1 5 sm

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

THE CUT OF THE SKIRT WILL BE THE CAUSE FOR UNREST.

Some of the Things Decreed in Paris. Popularity of Crepon Over Silk. Spring Fashions and Fabrics Assert Themselves.

One of the leading features of the seasons fashions is the black crepon skirt, which appears on all occasions, at all hours, and has completely unsurped the place of the black moire so popular last year. It is an elaborate example of crinkling in patterns and a work of art in the way it is cut and hung; but it is usually devoid of all trimming and always the smart thing to wear for a morning call or a swell reception, being equally suitable for maid or matron. She has only to live up to fashion's privileges in the way of variations in the bodice, which has become such a continual experiment in unique and striking combinations, and an apparently extensive wardrobe is accomplished with one skirt. This fashion for waists different from the skirt promises an indefinite extension, and will blossom out in fresh varieties with the spring flowers. It is too full of possibilities to be quickly discarded. One advantage which crepon has over silk is that it wears wonderfully well, and besides this, it is equally suitable for morning, afternoon and evening wear, where full dress is not required, and quite as good style with a simple plain waist as with the most resplendent confection of satin, chiffon, and spangles. The new silk crepons for spring are in greater varieties than ever. There are chine effects in flowers of natural colors and Oriental patterns which are very soft, in prettily blended tints. Tiny flowered stripes are seen in light grounds, and crepons, with the wide uneven marking are spotted in contrasting colors with great effect. Another charming variety seems to have an upper surface quite distinct and very thin and yet is all woven together. Crepons bids fair to take the place of foulards, so long and serviceably worn, and one which will be especially useful as a substitute is navy blue with small white dots. French glace silk, very soft and glossy, are among the new spring goods, and these come in brilliant plaids beautiful to look upon and pretty pompadour effects. The man behind the counter will tell you that entire skirts are to be made of these gorgeous plaids, and worn with plain silk bodices and blouse waists. However, it is difficult to imagine that any woman's fancy could lead her into wearing one of the wide full skirts made of such a mixture of bright colors; but there is the seashore, where anything, no matter how bizarre, is permissible.

The skill of the dressmaker seems likely to be taxed to the utmost in the varied phases of the modern skirt. The latest decree in Paris is that the skirts of morning dresses shall be short enough to clear the ground, and made with no fulness at the wsist, either at the back or sides. They must be fitted very carefully around the hips and stand out in folds at the feet in front as well as at the back. Another variety of skirt originating in Paris has three box plaits in the back, which meet, and three in front which are separated. Three bands of guipure embroidery ending in rosettes of velvet trim this skirt. The gown is of gray figured taffeta, and the bodice, quite plain at the back has a jacket effect, wide epaulettes, and collar of the embroidery.

It is too early for spring millinery and too late to invest in winter hats, but one or two specimens are interesting as a possible hint of things to come. The round, dented crown, with a band of velvet in front and clusters of ostrich feathers at the side, is a Parisian fancy called the Henri III. hat. It is a glace felt, while the other shape is of petunia velvet, with ostrich tips curling down on either side. A charming little bonnet for evening or day wear is simply a round visor-shaped piece, possibly four or five inches deep in the widest place, covered with black velvet and trimmed on the edge with four rows of small rhinestones set a little distance apart. This fits close to the head and well back, where there are tiny black ostrich tips standing out at either side with a wing effect and bows of black velvet for a finish.—New York Sun.

A Revised Version.

They used to sing some time ago
A rather plaintive song,
"Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long."
But nowadays the thing is set
With music to the rhyme,
"Man wants as much as he can get,
And wants it all the time."
—Philadelphia Record.

THE FARMER'S NEW YEAR'S EVE.

The old year goes. Ah! well a deal!
'Twas not for all, so bad a year.
The late grain rusted,
Some corn got frosted.
And the bank where I put my hard earned cash
Went down to swell the financial crash.
The camping tramps took my garden truck,
But they went with the summer; that's one good luck.
Of the good wife's chickens they had full share.
But still we've our eating and some to spare.
The pork sells well at a profit figger,
Though I wouldn't care if 'twere somewhat bigger.
Son John has his new barn well begun,
And Mary has married the miller's son.
We've all been middling well and strong.
If no worse happens we'll get along
The old bay mare's twin colts both live,
A fine little span. Tom Jones will give.
Three hundred for them two years from now
There's oats in the bin and hay in the mow.
And the place from debt nigh clear.
So the old year goes, ah, dear! ah, dear!
'Twas not so bad a year.

The new year comes. What cheer? what cheer?
God grant it be a goodly year.
That times may brighten,
And debts may lighten.
The folks who are running this land's affairs
Have the heft of my hopes and a share of my prayers.
But I reckon it's more than they all can do
By their worldly wisdom to pull us through.
We've been a-riding in a balloon
And the gas is out, and late or soon
We'll touch the bottom. U. S. and all.
If we're not there now. The financial fall,
If it only lands us on good bed rock.
May yet be a blessing in spite of the shock
And when we stand solid. I hope we'll know
Enough to remember and go it slow
Till we're able to enter a faster race
With breath sufficient to keep the pace.
But the world will swing about the same
Whether it gets my praise or blame.
So I'll fodder my cattle and take my cheer
And wait such fortune that comes anear
Along o' the coming year.

A JOLLY SORT OF FARM.

Vegetables Growing at One Hand, the Products of the Sea at the Other.

"Once, some years ago," said Superintendent H. T. Woodman of the city's aquarium at Castle Garden, "I went up the west coast of Florida in a sailboat on a collecting tour for shells and so on. On the north shore of Tampa Bay we saw a little white house—very white, indeed, it was—a whiteness, as we afterward learned, that was due to whitewash made of lime from shells that the owner had burned himself. We went ashore there and were most hospitably received and invited to stay. We couldn't do that, but we were in the neighborhood for a day or two, and we ate two or three meals at his house, and subsequently I called upon him once or twice and was received in the same hospitable manner.

"No doubt there are other gardens like his, but his is the only one of the sort I ever saw, a kind of land-and-water garden combined. His land garden, which was about half an acre or so, was fifty or perhaps a hundred feet back from the shore. He had in this garden cabbages and beans and potatoes and lettuce, and garden stuff generally. His water garden was composed of three patches each about fifty feet square, side by side and under water, close to the shore, and each enclosed in a palmetto crib, which was, however, only one log high, for that was all that was needed. He could go out in a skiff at any time and catch anything that there was in any of the cribs.

"In the first patch of the water garden he kept hard clams, and he had plenty of them. The second patch he had fixed up for oysters. He had thrown in shells for the oysters to spawn on, and he had an abundant supply of oysters. The third crib he had fixed up for crustacea. He had thrown in some old stumps here, and had shoved in under the crib some slabs or planks that had drifted ashore, to make a shelter for crawfish, which like to back in under things as the lobster does. He had in this crib crawfish and crabs. Of course these could easily have crawled over the single log of the crib if they had wanted to, but they didn't want to; they preferred the shelters in this crib to the sandy beaches outside. In fact, this crib was an attraction to any stray crawfish or crab that might come that way. You see he had only to step out of his house on one side for his vegetables and on the other for his sea food. He gave us oysters steamed in a big iron pot over a fire in the yard, and the pick of both his gardens, land and marine; and certainly we couldn't have had anything fresher or more delightful."

FROCKS FOR BABY GIRLS.

The Daintiest Summer Materials are Made for Their Benefit.

When the summer baby girl of '95 appears in her new frocks she will be the daintiest, quaintest little creature in the land. Prettily flowered dimites, batistes as fine as silk, nainsook of weblike texture and a host of dainty fabrics are now being made up in a manner most tempting to the mothers of baby girls.

Skirts are flaring and sleeves are as big as of old. Many of the latter are made with the quaint "1830" slope much in evidence. The guimpe is still popular and embroideries are all the vogue as a trimming. Pique gowns with coats and hats to match will also be in favor. Dainty little nainsook dresses are charmingly made up with tiny ruffles of deep yellow Valenciennes lace and the big puff of the sleeve is quite shrouded in wee lace ruffles.

Delicately colored chambray frocks are stylishly trimmed with insertion. The new eyelet embroideries will also be much used on children's gowns. Ribbons will be in favor as a trimming, and sashes are to be the rage.

An envious person grows lean on the fat of his neighbor.

BEFORE MATCHES CAME.

The Flint and Steel and Rushlights and Tallow Dips of Our Ancestors.

To the present generation it may seem next door to the incredible that in the first years of the reign of William IV there were no lucifer matches. In lieu thereof there were only long matches or splints of wood tipped at each end with melted sulphur, and before the complicated system of dipping the sulphureted match in concentrated sulphuric acid came into use these matches were kindled first by striking a light with flint and steel and then causing the spark to ignite a small quantity of tinder, an inflammable substance usually composed of partially burned linen.

This simple adjunct to the process of obtaining a light had been in use all over the world from time immemorial. The French tinder was called "amadou," a word the etymology of which has been fiercely contested, some philologers deriving it from the old French adjective "amadou," equivalent to amorous, and conveying the floral idea of the sweetly agreeable sensation of the hand coming in contact with a very soft substance, while others trace it to the Latin "ad manum dulce." The French tinder was often made of the spongy portions of mushrooms and other fungi, and prior to the introduction of lucifer matches the manufacture of amadou was one of considerable importance. The cryptogamic substance was beaten on a block somewhat after the manner of felt until it became homogeneous, and it was then impregnated with a solution of salts of niter or simply pulverized gunpowder. The Germans still fabricate a delicate kind of amadou which is used in surgery for stanching hemorrhage. As for flint and steel, they have as completely faded out from our domestic economy as they have from firearms, and the tinder box is so rarely seen that it might well be included in an exhibition of old social curios.

With tinder and tinder boxes has also vanished the rushlight which, when William Cobbett was a boy, English cottagers used to make for themselves by gathering rushes and dipping them successively in melted tallow until sufficient thick adipose matter was obtained. In houses where refinement was supposed to prevail the rushlight was invariably placed in a japanned tin shade perforated with circular orifices, and the insomnolent invalid had the pleasure of contemplating a large number of round spots of light on the ceiling, reflected from the rushlight screen. "Dips," another form of tallow candle, much given to sputtering, which smelled abominably, have also died the death, and "mold candles," which strove to emulate wax ones in their form, but hardly succeeded in doing so, have been superseded by cheaper candles, almost as shapely and as light giving as the old and costly spermaciti. Seventy years ago gas was little used. There were no railroads, few steamboats and no lucifer matches; yet, as Mr. Walter Besant might put it, the world went very well then.—London Telegraph.

[Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

We never knew his real name. Everyone called him Capt. George; and Capt. George he remained, from the first day he entered Landport harbor until the night I parted from him in Plymouth sound, about four years later. His arrival at Landport was announced in the Northern Post and Shipping Gazette in this manner:

"Landport, Sunday. Steam Yacht Wanderer arrived from Stockton, with machinery damaged. Owner, Captain George."

What was he like? Well, if you had put the question to the gentry of the place some would have answered it with a shrug of the shoulders, as much as to say they couldn't well make him out; others would have told you he seemed a haughty, reserved, stand-off sort of man. If you had asked any of the young ladies, you would very likely hear that he was "charming," but that they believed him to be a pirate chief in disguise, or some nonsense of that kind. Among us divers he was looked upon as a bold, gallant sailor, who loved the sea and everything connected with it, a man we all admired and looked up to.

He frequently put into Landport after that—at odd times, summer and winter—but came round regularly every June. He never made friends in the place, and few acquaintances. People still held pretty much the same opinion concerning him. On different occasions, as he passed along by the sea wall, I have seen more than one lovely head turned to take a sly look at his tall figure, and heard the whisper:

"There's that strange man, Capt. George; isn't he handsome?"

Towards the end of August I was engaged with two other divers to remove cargo from the steamer Magellan, which had run on an outlying reef about twenty miles down the coast. The surveyor of the Landport Salvage association, Capt. Lorton, was in charge of the wreck, and had orders to make a push to get her cleared out while the weather held fine. We put up at a neighboring village, a place called St. Nevin, a pretty little spot hidden away at the top of a small landlocked bay.

On the third morning it was blowing rather fresh. While I was waiting in the little parlor of the Mariner's Rest—the only thing in the shape of a hotel of which St. Nevin could boast—Capt. Lorton came in. He went up to the barometer on the wall, tapped it, and said:

"Glass falling; this breeze will freshen during the day, and most likely run up to a gale before night. If it does, there won't be much of the Magellan left by morning, Lawrenceson. At any rate it would be too risky to venture out with the wind rising in this way."

About twelve o'clock I noticed a considerable stir amongst the fishermen on the beach. Looking seaward, I saw a large steam yacht entering the bay. I recognized her at once. It was the Wanderer.

Capt. George came on shore during the afternoon, and looked in to the Mariner's Rest. It seemed he had heard of the wreck, and was anxious to visit the scene of the disaster.

"It's blowing hard outside," he said, "and very thick, too. I saw the fishing boats running in for Widmouth this morning, a sure sign of dirty weather at sea. We're in for a stiff sou'wester, I fancy, and I shouldn't be surprised if it brought down the rain before evening."

He was right. As the wind increased a thick mist crept up from the sea, and presently a sudden squall drove a torrent of rain against the window. There were just six of us present; myself, the two other divers, Moxly and Williams, Capt. Lorton, Capt. George and Capt. Linklater, a retired master mariner who lived in St. Nevin.

We had a cozy fire in the room, for the weather was unusually cold, and sat round it spinning yarns. The heat inside, and the cold without, had dulled the glass of the window, so that it almost looked as if it had been muffled. We could hear the crash of the billows on the beach below, followed by a deep rumble, like distant thunder, as the backward rush of the water tore the loose shingle from the beach.

"It's well you won't be at sea tonight, Capt. George," I remarked, in a pause of the conversation.

"I'm half sorry to miss it," he returned, getting up and approaching the window. He cleared a space on the glass, and stood looking out over the bay. "There's nothing I like better than driving full speed through a gale," he went on, "provided I have a good sea boat under me, and no fear of a dangerous coast lying under my lee."

"Ay, there's worse danger at sea than storms," put in Capt. Linklater.

"I'm inclined to agree with you there," said Capt. Lorton. "When I had command of a north Atlantic boat, I'd rather have faced a three-day gale than be walled up for ten hours in a fog. A gale of wind is a straightforward, honest kind of thing; you can see at a glance how matters stand, and know where the danger lies. But Heaven defend me from a fog! I always felt like a child out in a strange place on a dark night, groping my way along and never knowing at what moment I might bump up against some obstruction!"

"There're worse dangers than fogs," returned the old captain, blinking his eyes at the fire, and smoking very hard.

"Icebergs?"

"Worse still."

"Derelicts?"

"Worse."

"What then?"

"Rocks."

"Rocks!" exclaimed the surveyor. "Why, you have them plainly marked on your chart, and know exactly where to expect them."

"Ay, but when they are not marked on your chart, and you come across them where you don't expect them," the other replied in a rather mysterious manner.

I noticed that Capt. George had turned from the window, and was listening attentively to the conversation.

"I should like to know where such a rock exists?" said Capt. Lorton, in a way that showed plainly he had very little faith in anything of the kind.

"Well, I'll tell you," returned the old skipper, knocking the ashes out of his pipe, and laying it on the mantel-shelf. "It exists in the broad Atlantic—out in mid-ocean—somewhere between the Azores and the coast of Nova Scotia."

"A pretty wide range, that," remarked Capt. Lorton.

"Yes, but a dangerous one."

Linklater stood up, turned his back to the fire, and seemed striving to recall some half-forgotten facts. Every eye was fixed upon his weather-beaten face; we saw he had a strange story to tell.

"It is a well-known fact," he began, "that every year three or four vessels—sometimes more—disappear in the Atlantic, and their fate has always remained a mystery. As far back as 1834, the President sailed from Liverpool, in charge of the most skillful navigators of the day, Capt. Roberts, the man who commanded the Sirius, the first steamer that crossed the Atlantic. She foundered in mid-ocean with all hands. In 1846 the Savannah, an American sailing ship, left New Orleans for Bristol. She was sighted off the Bahamas, but from that day to this nothing more was heard of her. In 1850 the Southern Cross disappeared in the same manner. A few years later an emigrant steamer—the Nomad, I think—went down with eight hundred souls, and the cause of the disaster was never known. Between 1860 and 1870, no less than eighteen vessels disappeared in the same mysterious way. Coming down to a later date we have the Crusader—the old Crusader, I mean—the Cleptic, the White Slave, the Ontario, an American liner, and a host of others. In 1890 we have the Erin, of the National line, the Italian bark Silvio, which sailed from Holyhead in January of that year and was subsequently spoken in the North Atlantic, the Thanemore, a British steamer, and the Roman Empire, a splendid iron ship which was passed on the 11th of June by a homeward-bound vessel, and reported 'all well.' But perhaps the strangest case of all was that of the German ship, the Maria Rickmers, about which there has been so much talk lately in the shipping world."

"I remember hearing of her," said Capt. Lorton. "She was a five-masted bark, I think, and said to be the largest sailing ship afloat."

"Well, this magnificent vessel, fully manned, and in charge of experienced officers, sailed from Saigon for Bremen on the 15th of July, 1892. It was only her second voyage, mind you. She was sighted in the Atlantic, about three hundred miles west of the Azores, and the total disappearance of such a ship, in comparatively fine weather, is one of the most remarkable of these ocean mysteries. From all those vessels, not one soul escaped to tell of the disaster, and save in one or two instances, not even a boat or life buoy belonging to them was picked up. How did they disappear? You will say they foundered in a gale; possibly some of them might have done so, but not all. How do you account for the fact that dozens of other vessels crossed the Atlantic in safety at the very same time, often without encountering unusually bad weather?"

"It seems strange, certainly," remarked Moxly.

"It just comes to this," continued the skipper, in a rather excited way, for he was now thoroughly warmed into the subject. "It just comes to this: An unknown danger lay in the path of those vessels—or some of them, at any rate—they came upon it suddenly, perhaps in the dead of night when they were least prepared, and the result was an appalling disaster."

"But I don't see how all this proves the existence of a mid-Atlantic rock," said Capt. Lorton.

"... coming to that presently," replied Linklater. "In '76 I was bound from Pensacola, in Florida, to Falmouth, with a cargo of grain. My vessel—the bark St. Kilda, of Sutherland—afterwards wrecked, you may remember, off Cape Hatteras—was what you might call a clipper, though a good, safe boat in a heavy sea. Her qualities were well tested on that voyage, at any rate; we came in for one of the stiffest gales I ever encountered in the Atlantic. After trying to hold her on her course for some hours, I had to give it up as a bad job, and let her drive. We ran away before the wind for the best part of two days in a nor'westerly direction.

"When the gale slackened a bit, I got the vessel round, and commenced to beat back to our former course. It was still blowing fresh enough, the sea running high, and the clouds showing signs of more wind, so we had to be sparing with our canvas. One night, just as I was about to go below and turn in, the man in the bows suddenly sung out:

"'Breakers ahead!'

"My first impression was that the fellow had got hold of a rum cask, and had been imbibing pretty freely. I took no notice of the warning, but as I stood there, the man turned and shouted in more startling tones:

"'Breakers ahead, sir!'

"Now if he had said: 'The sea-serpent ahead' or 'a mermaid ahead,' I mightn't have been so surprised, but 'breakers ahead'—in mid-ocean, mind you—fairly took my breath away. I rushed forward. As I stood in the bows, peering out over the tossing waters, I could distinctly hear the roar of breakers somewhere in front.

"The moon was showing out through the broken clouds, and just then I caught sight of a dark spot straight ahead, round which the water swirled and tossed. I had barely time to holloa out: 'Hard a-port!' to the helmsmen, in order to clear it. Without any mistake it was a rock. I could see its black top appear for a second or two, and then it was covered in a cloud of foam. Sometimes a big wave swept right over it, but generally they smashed with a roar that I can tell you would have struck terror to your heart."

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Diamondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

PARKS WIN AT WHIST.

Seem to Be Victors in Everything They Touch.

The Park Whist Club, which seems to be as celebrated for its winning ways as are the Park bowlers, met and captured their friends the enemy at Bergen Point last evening in one of the scheduled games of the club tourney. The Parks easily walked away from their opponents, the N. J. A. C. Whist Club players, winning hands down with 22 points to the good—the score being 39-17, Parks. "To the victors belong the spoils", and after the game the genial hosts and their victors discussed the bountiful collation provided, and became still better acquainted with each other in the social chat which followed. Great interest is being awakened at the Park by the success of its expert whist team. The score:

Ladies Aid Entertain.

Last evening the Ladies Aid Society of Monroe Chapel gave a sociable to their friends. The evening was spent very pleasantly. In spite of the cold weather the attendance was quite large. The programme was rendered in a brilliant manner, as follows:

Violin Solo—
a. Petite Beruse.....Herrman
b. Overture to the opera William Tell, Rossini

Comic Selection.....
James Rogers.

Master Lindley Hillman.

Soprano Solo—
a. Winter Lullaby.....DeKoven
b. Killarney.....

Mrs. Rogers.

Banjo Solo—Selected.....
Chas. Hayes.

Reading—Selected.....
Mr. McGee.

After the programme, coffee and cake were served, and the rest of the evening was spent in a social time.

Saved from Execution.

In "Shaft No. 2", the Music Hall play of tomorrow night, the hero, about to be executed for a crime he did not commit, is saved by the timely arrival of the heroine, with papers granting a stay of execution; final exoneration and subsequent happiness bring everything to a satisfactory conclusion.

A scene showing the shaft of a coal-mine, from which the play takes its name, is a very realistic stage picture, and is produced with marked fidelity.

"Shaft No. 2" is provided with new and special scenery, all built especially for this production. None of the house scenery will be used during this engagement. A large company, headed by Frank Losee, the well-known actor of virile roles, will be seen in the production.

Abating the Only Nuisance.

The Board of Health of Fanwood Township met at the town rooms in the halls last evening, to transact such business as might come before them. The reading of the minutes was dispensed with. A communication was read from George Babcock of Fanwood, calling the attention of the Board to a pondhole near his property, which was a menace to the health of the neighborhood, and asked the Board to take some action in the matter. The secretary was authorized to notify the owner of the property to abate the nuisance at once. No other business coming before the Board, they adjourned.

Socialist Hall Now Open.

Owing to the severe cold only a few members assembled to attend the meeting of the Socialist-Labor party called for last evening. The main business talked about was the furnishing of the hall with the necessary paraphernalia. Some time was spent in talking about the adoption of by-laws and rules.

The next regular meeting of the party will be held at an early date. The hall is open every evening for members and their friends, where all can avail themselves of the different privileges.

Safe Skating.

N. Pendleton Rogers has had the snow removed from his tennis court on his property on East Front street, and has flooded it, thus making an artificial skating pond, enabling the children of the neighborhood to enjoy the exhilarating sport in safety.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

WANTED, A SPEEDWAY.

'Twould Be a Material Help in Plainfield's Boom.

ADVANTAGES OF LANE AVENUE.

This Could Be Made a Broad, Long-Distance Straightaway for the Speeding of Steeds and Display of Fashionable Turnouts.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—When we have seen Mr. Reinhart's four-in-hand, and heard the tooting of the coaching horn, as the coach passed through our streets, with a jolly party on board, it filled us with enthusiasm; and how eagerly we awaited the coach's approach when we heard the horn, and lingered to see it pass, and listened to the thrilling notes growing fainter and fainter long after the vehicle had passed from view. And with what admiration we looked at Mr. Maltby, seated behind a blooded colt, with his pneumatic sulky, or Mr. Barnaby with some of his stylish turnouts, or the lamented Mr. McCarthy on his black stallion, or Mrs. Ohl with her class of mounted pupils, or any one else as long as it possessed some equine interest. But what we have wanted, and what we want, is more of them. Mr. Reinhart's four-in-hand in our city has been like a lone peacock in a hennery. There is nothing so enjoyed by the wealthy as their horses and equipages, but, for proper enjoyment of them, and an inducement for this class to settle here, we need a boulevard or driveway.

This was made manifest to the writer a short time ago at the Union Club in New York, when the subject of Plainfield as a place of residence was discussed. A member said the absence of an afternoon meeting place or boulevard he knew deterred many from settling here. This was further explained by one of the 400 who was entertained in our city, who said he corroborated the Union Club man's statement, that while the wealthy enjoyed their horses and carriages they enjoyed most to admire others and have theirs admired.

Mr. 400 said such a driveway should be a straight and broad avenue of not less than 1½ to 2 miles in length, and from 80 to 100 feet wide, with a good natural roadbed, suitable for speeding a horse without injury to the animal. The drive should commence in some desirable locality and have a pleasant terminus.

Have we an avenue suitable for the purpose? Front and Somerset streets are ruined for driving purposes by the railway. Seventh and Eighth streets are too narrow. Park avenue is the nearest to it, but the road-bed is too hard, and it is too much used for business purposes and funerals. Central avenue is not of sufficient length, and its width varies from 80 to 60 feet.

The necessity of such a driveway was known to the late Wm. B. T. Lane, who advocated it some 25 years ago, and Lane avenue was suggested and laid out for this purpose and part of it graded; but for some reason, although the avenue was laid out for its entire distance, it was never opened.

This avenue if opened embraces all the requirements. It commences in a desirable location, say at Randolph road on the crest overlooking Cedar brook, which elevated position it retains until it reaches the quaint old town of New Brooklyn, which affords a pleasant and picturesque terminus, with the advantage of a station of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, whose service with New York is both rapid and comfortable. Owing to the location of this avenue, and its perfect drainage, it would soon be the chief residential avenue of the city. The width of this avenue is 80 feet, and as considerable property fronting on it has been sold within the past year why not make it 100 feet before building commences?

Why not take the matter in hand, and have a driveway to be proud of; and as but little if any grading remains to be done, and its natural roadbed is superior for the purpose than if macadamized, it is to be hoped some attention will be paid to the matter by our city fathers and by those who at present possess fine turnouts and reside here. Now is the time to agitate this, for Spring will soon be here, and the boulevard can be built before the Summer driving months. DRIVEWAY.

Good For the Trade.

A servant girl left in charge of one of James E. Martine's houses near the Park Avenue Baptist Church was so indiscreet as to permit the furnace fire to go out Tuesday night, and the water pipes in the house were frozen, causing quite a good-sized plumbers bill to be paid by the tenant, who was away on a visit.

Tough Excavating.

Workmen are having great difficulty in digging the cellar for Joseph Blatz's new house on Somerset street. Crowbars and wedges are employed to loosen the frozen earth. The contractors are compelled to push the work as the house is to be completed by April 1.

—The evangelistic services in Grace M. E. Church closed last evening, after a successful series of meetings. There will be no service tonight.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

An attack of the grip confines Raymond McVoy.

Illness keeps David Dunavan of East Third street at home.

William Beekman, Sr., of East Front street, is very ill at his home.

Mrs. Charles Smith of John street has fully recovered from her illness.

Joseph B. Hall and family of Washington avenue will move April 1 to Grove street.

The engagement is announced of Benjamin Webster and Miss Ella Mirex of this city.

James McClinton of Lee place is confined to the house with a severe attack of the grip.

Joseph Malone of Poughkeepsie is spending a few days with friends in the West End.

Herbert Langford of McVey's Hotel has a brother on board the overdue steamship Teutonic.

Mrs. Wilton Bennett of Brooklyn is visiting Mrs. A. R. Dyatt of Belvidere avenue, Netherwood.

George Kirch of Somerset street is recovering from his last severe attack of muscular rheumatism.

Jeppe Erickson, the station agent at Netherwood, has fully recovered from the effects of the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer J. Garretson will commence housekeeping April 1, residing in Manning's flats, West Front street.

Miss Maud Lord has returned to her home on Belvidere avenue, after a pleasant visit with friends in West Farms, N. Y.

Mrs. P. H. Wills of LaGrande avenue, who has been seriously ill for some time, is rapidly recovering her accustomed health.

Patrick McClymont of Steiner place, who was recovering from scarlet fever, has had a relapse, and is now again seriously ill.

Miss Sarah Hand of Berkley avenue, Netherwood, is taking a course of stenography and typewriting in the Newark Business College.

William, the 16-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Goeller of West Third street, is slightly improved after a severe attack of illness.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Hermance have returned to their home on Woodland avenue after spending the past three months in Norwalk, Ohio.

Mrs. TenEyck of East Third street was taken with a fainting spell yesterday. Dr. Jenkins was called and restored the patient in a short time.

William Apgar and family, who have lived on the Snook farm near Evona for several years, moved to Millington, Somerset county, today.

Henry Hansen of this city has rented the new house on Johnston avenue, belonging to John H. Staats, into which he will move about April 1.

Mrs. N. McElroy of Somerset street is expected home today from New York city, after spending ten days with Miss Alice Albert of West 34th street.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Love have hired a suite of rooms in Voehl's new building on East Front street, and will commence housekeeping April 1.

Mr. and Mrs. David McMurtrie will close their house on Sycamore avenue the latter part of this week, and will spend the balance of the Winter in New York city.

Julius Williams of Elmwood place has recovered from his recent illness, and left today on a two-months western trip in the interest of G. Armeny, New York diamond dealer.

Dr. P. J. Zeglio, who purchased, last Fall, the Dr. Craig property, corner of Somerset and Pearl streets, intends making extensive alterations to the house before taking possession April 1.

Aunt Hetty Johnson, the aged mother of Andrew W. Johnson of 120 Duer street, is very ill at the home of her son Russell Johnson in New York. Pneumonia is her illness, and there is but little hope of her recovery.

Dr. Charles R. Thiers is making preparations to move from his present residence on Somerset street to 13 and 15 Grove street, the house formerly occupied by Dr. C. M. Field. Dr. Thiers expects to be settled in his new home March 1.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. A SANDWICH ISLANDER.

He Comes to Plainfield to Tell of the Good Works of the World.

The Local Auxiliary of the McAll Mission were most pleasantly edified and instructed yesterday regarding the wonderful measure of success which this noble Christian movement has met and is meeting with throughout France, by Rev. Thomas L. Gulick, whose entire lifework has been the uplifting and Christianizing of the ignorant and oppressed, not only in the Sandwich Islands, the land of his nativity, and in Spain, the country of his adoption, but of late in France, the seat of his more recent labors; and through the grace of God in this country, as well, by awakening interest in the hearts of the vast body of earnest Christian workers.

Dr. Gulick has traveled extensively through the missions of France, and drew from a vast storehouse of personal experiences, which aptly and forcibly illustrated not only the great good already accomplished, but the urgent necessity that still further effort be made on the part of the Christian people of the United States to assist the workers already in the field, to the end that France might soon entirely throw off the bondage of her old religion of forms and ceremonies and embrace the religion of the heart.

The religion of the medieval times is rapidly losing its hold in France, and the people seem both ready and willing to embrace this Protestant religion whose benefits are constantly before their eyes. The house-boats, which travel from point to point on the great internal arteries of France, carrying the good news of the Gospel of salvation, were especially mentioned by the speaker as having been the means of widespread and far-reaching good; and the wonderful and largely increasing interest manifested by the young in the Sunday-schools, many of which are directly supported by the Sunday-schools in this country, at an annual expense of but $25 for each school thus supported, came in for a share of this earnest evangelist' attention and comment.

Dr. Gulick, who is the Representative Secretary of the National Association of McAll Mission workers, is certainly a most interesting and earnest speaker, and it is believed that his discourse may be the means of increasing the already large interest felt by Plainfield citizens in the noble movement for which he is such an efficient worker.

Pennsylvania Railroad's Tours to "The Golden Gates."

Apart from the rare pleasures of visiting new places and witnessing novel scenes, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's tours to California will prove better educators than any number of lectures or books on travel. The immense scope of territory traversed will expand the ideas of all tourists, indelibly impress upon their minds enlarged views of this mighty Union and its vast possessions, and they will return to their homes prouder than ever of the great land whose borders are protected by the Stars and Stripes.

These tours have been arranged under the company's renowned personally-conducted tourist system, and magnificent Pullman trains will leave New York and Philadelphia on February 20 and March 20 1895.

Detailed itinerary will be sent on application to Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

Bound Brook Wins.

The Plainfield bowlers met defeat last evening at Bound Brook in a scheduled game of the new five men team tourney, by a score of 1454-1429 in favor of Bound Brook. Three colts bowled on the Plainfield team in the first half and two on the last half yet the boys put up a good game under the circumstances and their defeat reflects no discredit to them in any way. Much interest was manifested in the game by the Bound Brookites, the rooters being out in full force, and making Rome howl from start to finish. The score:

—It is expected that there will be initiation at the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., this evening.

The experience of Geo. A. Apgar, of German Valley, N. J., is well worth remembering. He was troubled with chronic diarrhoea and doctored for five months and was treated by four different doctors without benefit. He then began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, of which one small bottle effected a complete cure. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. NO TROLLEY YET.

Scotch Plains Still Guessing at Rapid Transit.

THE COMPANY PRESENTS ITS BOND.

Offers $10,000 Security for the Building of the Road, But the Town Committee Still Finds the Matter Presented in Incomplete Shape, and Defers Action.

The Fanwood Town Committee met at their rooms in Excelsior Hall last evening to receive the bond of $10,000 to guarantee the spur to the village and to grant the franchise for the Midway avenue route.

The representative citizens of the town were out in full force, notwithstanding the cold weather.

Chairman Terry called the meeting to order at 8:30. On motion the regular order of business was dispensed with, and the granting of the franchise was taken up.

Mr. Gaddis was asked to present his bond to the Committee for their consideration. The bond offered was that of Frank A. McKown, the president of the company. Town Counsel Codington was asked if the bond met with his approval. He said the form of the bond was regular, and the question was for the Committee to decide whether Frank A. McKown was worth $10,000. He himself did not known him personally, so could not say.

Mr. Gaddis said he had not given the question of the security of the bond much thought, as he did not think there would be any question about Mr. McKown being worth $10,000. If he had he would have had others on the bond with him.

Mr. Nichols, chairman of the committee appointed to secure signatures for the branch, was asked what progress the committee had made. He said the committee was in rather a peculiar position, as it now was in a fair way to secure the branch for either Park avenue or Forest avenue; but as some of the signatures were only promised and not made, he would like the Committee to accept a report of progress. He said Mr. Stanbury had offered to help the committee to secure signatures for the Forest avenue route, and that he could enlighten them further.

Mr. Stanbury read a letter from Mrs Warren Ackerman, granting the right of way for what property is owned by her on said avenue. Mr. Miller said as a member of the Town Committee he would like to know where the people of the town would like to have the spur, whether on Park avenue or on Forest avenue.

Chairman Terry invited discussion from those present on the subject; but the people, with the exception of Thomas S. Young, (who was opposed to Forest avenue), did not seem to care where the branch was laid, so long as they were sure of having it in the town somewhere.

Mr. Gaddis wished the section in the ordinance regarding the branch line stricken out, as he said it was a blot on the franchise of Midway, and he claimed it was not legal to combine two separate applications in the one ordinance.

Mr. Codington said he failed to see how it was illegal or a blot on the franchise.

Mr. Gaddis said he had quoted the legal representatives of the company, but he would accept the ordinance if the Committee would grant it; or if the Committee would prefer it, he could make a new application to the Committee, when the signatures for a branch route were obtained and in legal form.

Making an application for a route for which the signatures had been obtained, and combining it with an application for a route on which the signatures were not obtained or in legal form, was illegal. He would rather have the Committee grant an ordinance that there could be no question about.

Mr. Miller then made the following motion: That on application being made by The New York and Philadelphia Traction Company for a franchise to be granted to them on Forest avenue from Mountain avenue to the Fanwood station, and as soon thereafter as legal time for publishing such application transpires, franchise be granted for a route on Midway, North and Forest avenues conjointly.

The motion was carried, Committeemen Miller and Terry voting Yes, and Committeeman Downer No.

Regular business was then taken up. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, and the bills ordered paid. The treasurer's report was accepted, and the Committee adjourned.

—Workmen are busily engaged decorating the interior of M. F. Watson's store on Grant avenue.

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm and that she has also used it for lame back with great success. PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Degolyer of Putnam avenue has recovered from the grip.

Mrs. J. Hipp, wife of the proprietor of the Manhattan Hotel, is suffering from a severe cold.

Mrs. C. Emmons of 134 Rockview avenue has gone to upper New York State for a two-weeks stay.

Miss Neva Dimmitt of East Ninth street has returned from New York after a short stay with friends in that city.

A. J. Woodruff and family of West Seventh street are going to leave Plainfield to take up their residence in New York.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational Church, is suffering from an attack of the grip which confines him to the house.

Mrs. C. H. Loomis of New York and Miss Loretta DeLaMater of Syracuse spent yesterday with Mrs. J. E. Morse of Franklin place.

One of the most enthusiastic of Plainfield's cyclists is Fred Fullerton of the Plainfield Latin School, who, despite the cold weather, may be seen every day spinning over the frozen roads on his wheel.

William Lawrence of Sherman avenue has inflicted a dangerous wound over his left eye. He was returning from a sociable last night, slipped on some ice which had been left on Fourth street and fell against a troley pole.

COLUMBIAS FOR 1895.

A Highly Artistic Catalogue Sets Forth the Merits of These Famous Bicycles.

Noted artists occasionally condescend to lend their aid to make a trade catalogue beautiful, and this has evidently been the case with the new handbook of Columbia bicycles, just issued. From the rich and striking cover to the last of the dainty sketches that adorn the broad margins, the tell-tale marks that show the hand of well-known contributors to Life, Vogue, and the leading magazines are everywhere apparent. The idea skilfully carried out in the illustrations is that of sport and travel. The book will be preserved as one of the handsomest art works of the year. It is as little like the ordinary trade catalogue as well can be, and yet it cleverly tells of the merits of Columbia bicycles for 1895, and also of lower-priced machines, Hartfords. No lover of bicycling or of beautiful books should neglect sending for the Columbia Catalogue. It can be had by calling upon Columbia agents, or it will be sent by mail for two 2-cent stamps. Off For Trenton.

A large delegation left town this morning on the 8:44 train for Trenton, to attend the G. A. R. and Women's Relief Corps encampments today and tomorrow. Those in the party were:

Commander W. W. Coriell of Post 73; Past Commander Collier of Post 109, Commander Charles H. Randolph of Post 109; Past Commanders William Hand, I. L. McVoy and W. C. Smith of Post 73, and E. J. Olsen of Post 109. The women included President Mrs. M. C. Dobbins; Past Presidents Mrs. Morse, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. W. W. Coriell; Mrs. I. L. McVoy, Mrs. Cline, Miss Sadie Smith, Mrs. Cox.

Mrs. E. J. Olsen will represent the Loyal Ladies League in the encampment.

Past Commanders C. B. Stephens and M. C. Dobbins will leave this evening for Trenton and will remain over till tomorrow. The delegation will return tomorrow night.

The New Postoffice.

Acting under instructions from Edward Janson of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company, of Stamford, Conn., H. M. Clark, Major Godown and Ira G. Hurlbut have about completed the work of putting in the fixtures in the new postoffice in the Babcock Building. The entire outfit is of ash, and there is an abundance of room for both employes and the general public. A noticeable improvement over the present office is the addition of a private compartment where women can sit and write and direct their letters without interruption.

—The double male quartette of the Y. M. C. A. will meet for rehearsal this evening.

—A cold day or a hot day is all one to those who are provided with proper-weight underwear. Full lines for our climate at Peck's.

—The firm of Carty & Stryker dissolved partnership yesterday. Mr. Stryker has entered the employ of Neuman Bros., the Watchung Avenue grocers.

O. W. O. Hardman, sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

THEY SMASH THE CARS

Many Persons Injured by Green Motormen.

Non-Union Men "Broke" and No One To Assist Them—Two New Employes Held in $1,500 Bail Each in a Police Court Charged with Criminal Carelessness.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 7.—Yesterday was another day of smash-ups on the roads of the trolley companies of this city. Cars smashed wagons, carriages and trucks, cut horses and injured the unfortunate drivers.

While driving along Greenpoint avenue, between Manhattan avenue and Franklin street, Thomas Berline, 46 years, of 77 North 9th street, was thrown into the street when car No. 2,368, of Lorimer street line, collided with his coal cart. He received a contusion of the left leg and was removed to the hospital.

Motorman John Olsen and Conductor John Cruse were arrested, but were not held by Capt. Rhodes, of the Seventh precinct.

Criminal Carelessness.

Michael Casey, a motorman, hailing from St. Paul, Minn., and Conductor H. C. Bellin, of Oshkosh, Wis., were arraigned in the Lee avenue court for criminal carelessness and held in $1,500 bail for trial.

Their Crosstown car last Tuesday wrecked a white hearse at Myrtle avenue and Broadway, the shock throwing a small casket containing the body of 2-year-old Mamie Kolhane into the street.

The car, it was said, was run at reckless speed.

Hugh Sunny, 74 years, of 411 West 32d street, who was knocked down by Halsey street car No. 2,148, is at his home in a precarious condition. He was badly cut about the face and hands.

Collisions Continue.

At 9 o'clock in the morning trolley car No. 1,958 of the Flushing avenue line, in charge of Motorman John Long, of Syracuse, N. Y., collided with a truck at the corner of Fulton and Prospect streets. The driver, James Smith, of 17 Hudson street, New York, was knocked off and receinved bruises about the body. The dashboard of the car was smashed in.

About 12:20 p. m., car No. 181, of the Backett street line, going east, in charge of Motorman Joseph Miller and Conductor Albert Spencer, residing at present at the Atlantic avenue depot, collided on Sacket street, near Smith street, with a doctor's phaeton, owned by Dr. Frank H. Ross, of 128 Sands street.

Henry Clark, of 223 Hudson avenue, the driver, was badly shaken up, but was not hurt. The damage was slight.

The wagon of Hewett & Robinson, of 48 Boerum place, was smashed by a Halsey street car near Sumner avenue. The horse's leg was badly cut.

About 1 p. m., car No. 1,938, of Flushing avenue line, broke the pole and damaged the cooper wagon of Paul Wrederman at Greenpoint avenue and Franklin street.

Green Men and Switches.

Because the motorman failed to see the switch at Manhattan avenue and Nassau street, car No. 1,911, of the Flushing avenue line, collided with car No. 1,517. Both cars were damaged. No one was hurt.

A Ralph avenue car, manned by a green motorman, struck a wagon owned by Frank Stumpf, of 209 Montrose avenue, at 2:50 p. m., on Broadway, near Flushing avenue. The wagon was badly smashed.

Car No. 924, of Court street line, about 9:50 a. m., crashed into a truck of Carroll & Krekeller, of 416 Hamilton avenue, on Court street, between Degraw and Sackett streets. The wagon was smashed and the car slightly damaged. The accident was due to the carelessness of William Peterson, the motorman, of 103 Charles street.

The truck of Stringer & Sherman, of 351 Adams street, was wrecked by car No. 122, of Seventh avenue line, about 9 a. m.

Moral Suasion a Failure.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 7.—The sweat shop of Samuel Kratz was visited by about forty striking cloakmakers yesterday who tried to induce Kratz's employes to join them. The latter refused, whereupon a general fight began. Machines were upset, flat irons thrown about and the place was practically wrecked before the police could arrive. Many of the participants in the fight were cut or bruised. Ten arrests were made.

One Killed; Two Injured.

Richmond, Que., Feb. 7.—Charles Laneban, aged 18, a fireman, was killed at South Durham station last night in a collision between a snow plow special and a pilot engine on the Grand Trunk road. Fred Driver, the engineer of the pilot, and Conductor Charles Davids, of the special, were badly injured.

Pleased with the Ex-Queen's Actions.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Members of the house expressed their gratification that ex-Queen Liliuokalani had abdicated her rights to the throne, and the opinion was general that her action would give greater stability to the republic.

TO MEET HIS GOD.

The Governor Refuses to Interfere, and Byars Must Hang.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 7.—Eugene Byars will hang to-morrow at noon in the yard of the Jefferson county jail. He was tried and convicted about a year ago for the murder of a cousin, a United States soldier at Behrn's park, on the outskirts of this city. His attorney appealed to the supreme court, but that body sustained the decision of the lower court. Governor Oates was appealed to on two separate occasions, but he decilined to interfere.

The following letter to George M. Morrow, sheriff of Jefferson county, Ala., from the office of the governor, explains the last appeal and his final decision:

I have duly considered all the applications made to me to interfere with the sentence of the court in the case of Eugene Byars. I have twice heretofore decided not to interfere.

I am now appealed to for a postponement of the day of his execution for thirty days on the ground that he has not had sufficient time to prepare for death. I find that the sentence of the court is affirmed by the supreme court on the 20th of December last, some six weeks ago, which has given him ample time to realize his situation and I must decline again to interfere with the sentence of the law.

You will please communicate this fact to the prisoner, to Rev. Dr. Morris, and to the relatives of the prisoner, without delay.

THE DOCTOR SHOT.

Bullets Through His Breast—Widow Quinn Confesses to the Shooting.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 7.—Dr. John E Rader, a mountain physician and of shooting notoriety was found dead yesterday in the house of Mrs. Catherine McQuinn, a widow, four miles from Jackson, Breathitt county. Two bullets. Hurst was shot five times but reeach one of which would have been fatal. Mrs. McQuinn said she did the shooting and surrendered. She refused to assign any reason for committing the deed. T. M. Smith, her paramour, is suspected of having been the real murderer and the officers are looking for him.

Rader was 35 and leaves a widow and three little children without a dollar. Rader is the man who created a sensation in Lexington by going to the grocery of John Hurst on Ellerslie avenue and filling him full of bullets. Hurst was hot five times but recovered. Rader was sent to the penitentiary for two years, but was released a month ago. Hurst then left Lexington for a while fearing Rader would again try to kill him. Hurst killed Rager's brother six years ago, and the doctor swore he would avenge his brother's death.

THEIR MAMMA DEAD.

Died from Heart Disease While the Father Was at Work.

Williamsport, Pa., Feb. 7.—A pathetic story comes from Cogan Valley, this county, where three children ranging from six to two years, were found alone in their home with the body of their dead mother, having survived cold and privation two days and nights. Moses Ohart, a woodsmen, left his home on Sunday for a lumber camp and returned last evening to find his wife dead in a chair, and the almost frozen children huddled together in a bed.

Mrs. Ohart had died Sunday soon after her husband left and the children had remained alone and unattended until the father's return. Most of the time the temperature was twelve degrees below zero. The 6-year-old child ran to the door once to hail a passing sleigh, but her weak voice was not heard by the occupants. The woman died from heart disease.

FOUR DAYS OVERDUE.

Anxiety Increasing for the French Steamer La Gascogne.

New York, Feb. 7.—No encouraging news for the many anxious friends of the passengers on board the overdue steamer La Gascogne had been received up to midnight, and all kinds of conjectures as to the cause of the delay are indulged in. Among the theories advanced is one that seems plausible. The big White Star steamer Teutonic, which sailed from Queenstown January 31, should have reached here during Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning, but she has not yet been sighted, and it is thought possible that she may have fallen in with La Gascogne and, finding her in a disabled condition, is assisting her into port.

For the Old Constitution.

Concord, N. H., Feb. 7.—In the house a resolution was adopted that the historic old frigate Constitution, now lying at Kittery navy yard should be preserved as a relic of the old navy, and that the New Hampshire senators and representatives be urged to do all in their power to secure an appropriation from congress sufficient to fit her out in a manner similar to when she fought her memorable battles.

Discouraging News.

Woonsocket, R. I., Feb. 7.—Notices were posted in the Alice mill of the United States Rubber company yesterday announcing that the entire works would shut down on Monday, Feb. 11, for an indefinite period. The officials would give no idea how long the shut-down would last, but it is feared for several months. The Alice mill employes 1,400 hands.

Mysterious Disappearance.

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 7.—N. B. Brown, who came here a few days ago from Atlanta, started an afternoon paper here and printed it for two days. Yesteday Brown wrote a letter saying that his life had been a failure throughout and he intended to drown himself in the river. Since that time nothing has been heard or seen of him.

Brute in Human Form.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 7.—John Brewer quarreled with his wife yesterday, and while in a rage he snatched up his three-weeks-old babe from the cradle, dashed it to the floor and then kicked the prostrate form. There are hopes for the child's recovery.

Three Died in Their Sleep.

New Orleans, Feb. 7.—Three men went to sleep in the cabin of a coal boat on the rive last night. They had made a fire on a piece of sheet iron. The three were found dead this morning, asphyxiated by gas from the coal.

MURDER AND SUICIDE

Double Tragedy in a New York Lodging House.

William Becker Is Shot Through the Heart by Carl Fenecke, Who Ends His Own Life—The Murdered Man Broke the Tenth Commandment by Coveting His Neighbor's Wife.

New York, Feb. 7.—A double tragedy occurred in the Germania hotel at 116 Greenwich street, a resort for immigrants of the poorer class. William Becker, age 30, was murdered there by Carl Fenecke, with whose wife Becker is said to have been intimate at one time. After killing Becker, Fenecke killed himself, shooting himself through the heart. Becker was shot in the back of the head. The exact time at which the shooting occurred is not known. The bodies of the two men were discovered late in the afternoon.

Enemies in Death.

Fenecke and his victim arrived here from Hamburg on Sunday. Fenecke's wife, who is several years younger than her husband, accompanying them. Fenecke was about 32. Becker secured lodgings at the Germania hotel, while Fenecke and his wife went to live with the latter's brother-in-law, Adolph Henck, a grocer, living at 511 West 28th street. Fenecke left Henck's house at an early hour in the morning, saying he was going to see the sights. He went to the Germania hotel where he found Becker. The two sat in the barroom for awhile and then went to Becker's room. At 4 p. m., a porter knocked at Becker's door, wishing to put the room in order. His knock was unanswered, and he tried in vain for a time to push the door open. When he finally gained entrance, he found Becker and Fenecke lying dead, side by side, both fully dressed. Close beside Fenecke lay a 38-calibre revolver, with two chambers discharged. On the lapel of Fenecke's coat was pinned a note in German, which read:

"Your dear, honest husband has to make an end of his life in such a way. Your Carl cannot do anything else." The note was signed "Carl," and the address, 511 West 28th street, was added.

Her Shameful Confession.

The police were at once notified and a messenger sent to Fenecke's wife. On getting word, she hastened to the Church street station, where she was questioned by Captain O'Connor. He says that her story was to the effect that she left her husband some time ago in Hamburg, and went to live with Becker in a nearby town. Her husband eventually learned of her whereabouts and tried to induce her to leave Becker. She refused, and a compromise was affected by which all came to this country. Fenecke's jealously finally became so bitter that he resolved to kill Becker and commit suicide, as his wife had again threatened to leave him.

FOUND DEAD.

Deserted by His Wife—It Looks Like Murder.

Paterson, N. J., Feb. 7.—Thomas Nolan, 55 years of age, proprietor of a tavern, known as the half-way house on the Goffle road, two miles from this city, was found dead in a room in the rear of the bar room yesterday. The neighbors think that Nolan was murdered. An overturned chair and a hammer were found near the body. He is thought to have been dead since Monday. Nolan's wife deserted him on Saturday and he was living alone. There were bruises and markes on his face which seem to indicate that he was murdered.

Coke Strikers Win.

Uniontown, Pa., Feb. 7.—The coke companies will yet have a great deal to pay out before the expense of breaking last year's strike is concluded. Five of the suits brought by the imported negroes for fulfillmest of contract have been decided in favor of the men who get the full amount of their claims. The coke companies have withdrawn the 28 remaining cases and privately paid off the claims of the men, thereby saving court costs. There now promises to be a deluge of these suits by the second men who were employed under contract and who all claim back pay.

Carried Concealed Weapons.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 7.—Special Officer Sidney Jones arrested N. Fallett, aged 23 years, of Attleboro, Mass., on the charge of carrying concealed weapons. The prisoner is a conductor of the Atlantic Avenue railroad. When searched at the police station a five-chambered loaded revolver and a slungshot were in his possession. Before he was put in a cell the prisoner said that he thought he had a perfect rigt to carry a pistol to protect himself if assaulted by strikers.

Stormy Voyage of the Majestic.

Queenstown, Feb. 7.—The steamship Majestic, which passed Brow Head at 8:30, reached Daunt's Rock at 11:40 last evening. Capt. Parsell reported that from the banks she had terrible weather with east-northeast gales, high seas and bitter cold. On the 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th she proceeded at reduced speed, losing in all fifty-seven hours. Early this morning a vessel with a light was sighted, but vanished suddenly as the Majestic was steered towards her.

Shot His Mother-in-Law.

New York, Feb. 7.—Shortly after 8 o'clock last night, Patrolman Denis O'Leary, of the Madison street squad, during a quarrel with his wife, shot his mother-in-law, Margaret White, 68 years old. The bullet took effect in her right shoulder, causing a probably fatal wound. The woman was sent to Gouverneur hospital, and O'Leary was placed under arrest.

MUNYON'S BEST DEEDS.

STORIES THAT WELL-KNOWN PEOPLE LIKE TO RECALL.

The Learned Professor a True Philanthropist—His Humane Methods Praised Everywhere.

Charles J. Mutch, of 99 South Division street, Buffalo, says: "For the past 20 years," said he, "I have suffered terribly from dyspepsia. I could not eat scarcely anything and at times was unable to even retain water on my stomach. When I ate the food seemed to lie in my stomach with a hot, burning sensation. There was a pain on my right side that caused me intense agony. Usually within four or six hours after eating I vomited my food. when the pain in my side would stop until hunger compelled me to eat again. I was troubled with dizziness, was very nervous and my whole system was so run down that words cannot describe how I felt. I had four doctors, besides trying every medicine I ever heard of and spending hundreds of dollars without receiving any benefit. Just one month ago I began using Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. I did not have much faith in it, but my friends who had been cured with his remedies urged me to try it. The first few doses improved me so much that I continued taking it, and am now thoroughly cured. I have a good appetite, can eat and digest any kind of food and am in excellent health. My friends are greatly surprised at the change in me, as they did not believe I would ever be a well man again. I owe it all to Munyon's Remedies."

Munyon's Homœopathic Remedy Company, Philadelphia, put up a cure for every disease. No matter what the disease is or how many doctors have failed to cure you, ask your druggist for a 25-cent vial of one of Munyon's cures, and if you are not benefited your money will be refunded.

With Munyon's Remedies, every one can doctor themselves.

HORRIBLE SUFFERING.

Raised from Complete Helplessness.

SOME OF THE DANGERS WHICH CONSTANTLY THREATEN US.

How Bad Blood and Its Terrible Diseases Lead to Death.

If your blood is bad you are never safe. Rheumatism, cancer and scrofula result directly from diseased conditions of the blood, and as long as these terrible complaints lurk in your system you are treading on a volcano which may at any instant break forth and destroy your life.

Rheumatism is a most dreaded disease because it affects the heart and causes serious and deadly heart complaints. If you value your life and health don't neglect such diseases a moment. You cannot too quickly seek relief. Read the frightfully narrow escape of Mr. T. H Roleau, of Essex Junction, Vt.:

"For three years I was terribly afflicted with a most severe case of rheumatism. For twenty-three months I could not walk a step, and I never expected to walk or work again. I was completely helpless and suffered the most horrible agony.

"No man in these parts ever suffered as I did. I took everything that I ever heard of, but never found anything that did me the slightest good until I began the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

MR. T. H. ROLEAU.

"And now comes the most wonderful part of all. In a short time this splendid medicine made me completely well. It is the best remedy I ever saw or heard of, for it raised me from a condition of utter helplessness and constant agony to perfect health. It saved my ability to work, which was entirely gone. I am now entirely well and strong, and owe health and my life to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I advise everybody to use it."

If you hesitate longer about taking this wonderful medicine after reading such a strong testimonial as that, you do not deserve to get well. Bad blood is filthy as well as terrible. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy makes it pure and rich giving a beautiful complexion and splendid health.

Why waste time in trying uncertain and untried remedies, when here is a physician's prescription, a discovery made by the greatest living special st in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st, New York City. If you take his medicine you can consider yourself under Dr. Greene's direct professional care, and you can consult him or write to him about your case, freely and without charge. This is a guarantee that this remedy will cure, possessed by no other medicine in the world.

THE PRESIDENT'S VETO

Referred to the Committee on Claims.

Much Discussion on the Currency and Banking Bills—Mr. Brosius' Eloquent Appeal—Populists Watch Their Interest in the Senate—The Proposed Cable Line to Hawaii.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The boundary dispute between Venezuela and Great Britain, over the delimitation of the frontier of British Guiana, was the occasion of the passage of a joint resolution by the house, recommending the parties to submit the controversy to arbitration. The joint resolution was reported from the committee on foreign affairs and was in accordance with the suggestion of President Cleveland in his last annual message.

Veto for Relief.

The presidents veto of a bill for the relief of a Texas postmaster, sent to the house Tuesday, was referred to the committee on claims. Bills were passed, to obviate objections to the original measures pointed out by the president, to pension Richard R. Knight, and to grant the Gila Valley, Grove & Northern Railroad company a right of way through the San Carlos Indian reservation in Arizona. The currency and banking and gold loan bill was discussed five hours; after 2 o'clock under the five-minute rule, when amendments were in order. The principal speech in general debate was made by Mr. Brosius (rep., Pa.), a member of the committee reporting the bill, who made an eloquent appeal in the name of patriotism and duty for united action to relieve the country from its present condition. The amendments proposed by the committee, with two exceptions, were agreed to, after an interesting and at times exciting debate, during which there was much confusion on the floor.

The house then proceeded, in committee of the whole, to further discuss the banking and currency bill, Mr. Brosius being the first speaker. He said it was apparent that the committee on banking and currency had not met with much success in its efforts to reach a conclusion on the subject that would be satisfactory to a majority of the house. But that did not excuse the house from failing to act promptly by unity of effort, to meet the crisis which faces the treasury and the country. While congress waited, the difficulty increased. Patriotism and duty were the only two words which should actuate members at this time. His own remedies for the trouble were three:

First. To compel the payment of half of all custom dues in gold.

Second. To stop the redemption of greenbacks which do not stay redeemed, until the present exigency be passed—to kill the auriferous tape worm that wriggles back and forth between Wall street and the treasury.

Third. To authorize the secretary of the treasury to borrow money sufficient to meet legitimate demands upon the treasury.

Mr. Brosius closed with an earnest and eloquent appeal to all members to lay aside every consideration that could divide them in this hour and admit only rivalry as to which could carry the banner of the country farthest into the ranks of the enemy. (Applause.)

In the Senate.

Another acquisition to the strength of the republicans in the senate was made yesterday in the person of Mr. Clark of Wyoming, who appeared and took the oath of office. The senate now consists of 87 members, of whom 43 are democrats, 39 republicans and 5 populists. The diplomatic and consular appropriation bill was taken up, and a long debate took place upon an amendment reported from the committee on appropriations for the construction and maintenance by the United States government of a telegraph cable between the United States and Hawaii, and appropriating $500,000 as part of the cost. The debate drew out a reference by Mr. Hale (rep., Me.) to the United Press dispatch from San Francisco announcing the abdication of the late queen in favor of the republican government, and this act Mr. Hale treated as a removal of one of the obstacles to a peaceful solution of the difficulties there, and as leaving the existing government strong and not likely to be disturbed. The debate was continued by Senators Teller (rep., Col.), Gray (dem., Del.) and Platt rep., Conn.); and the matter went over till to-day without action, and with a point of order pending against the amendment as general legislation on an appropriation bill.

In the closing minutes of the days session the senate substitute for the house bill appropriating four millions for the new Chicago postoffice was taken up and agreed to, the bill passed, and a conference with the house asked for. The substitute makes no direct appropriation, but directs the work to be let out in contracts, the aggregate amount of which shall not exceed four million dollars.

Extreme Cold in Canada.

Toronto, Feb. 7.—Extremely cold weather prevails throughout this part of Canada and has not been equalled in years. In this city the thermometer registered 21 below zero, the lowest since 1886. At Parry Sound, in the northern part of the province it is 38 degrees below; at Brockville, in the eastern section, 39 below; Montreal, 23 below; Owen Sound, 36 below, and at Brantford 29 below.

Together in Death.

Greensburg, Pa., Feb. 7.—Frank and Arthur Kaufman, two of the victims of the powder explosion in the fire clay mine at Hunker station on Jan. 24, died at their homes near the scene of the accident. Frank was aged about 23 and Arthur 16. Both will be buried in the same grave to-day.

No Drinks on Memorial Day.

Harrisburg, Feb. 7.—Among the bills read in the house yesterday was one by Mr. Mattox, Venango, prohibiting the sale of liquor on Memorial day and fixing the penalty at not more than $500 fine and three months imprisonment.

SUSPENDS PUBLICATION.

Death Struggle of the Newark Times as an Evening Paper.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 7.—Announcement has been made by the publisher of the suspension of the Newark Times. This was the penny afternoon paper that made its appearance about nine weeks ago. It had been previous to the change, a morning paper. From the beginning there was little hope of the success of the undertaking for the sufficient reason that under existing conditions a penny paper in Newark cannot thrive. There has been a tremendous change wrought in the newspaper business in this city within the decade, and any undertaking in the direction of a daily publication with any hope of reasonable success must be equipped in every department with all the best of modern appliances and must be in the field with a keen sense of duty to the public.

The non-success of the Times may be attributed to the labor element of this city.

HER LAST LETTER.

Thought To Be Friendless? Home, She Had None.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 7.—The body of Mrs. Alleta Bellows, who was picked up at the corner of Market and Broad streets on Tuesday, Jan. 27, and who died at the City hospital the next morning, has been lying at Mullen's morgue ever since her death, while the undertaker and several friends sought to find the whereabouts of her relatives. A letter addressed to Mrs. Bellows was received in this city on Monday and proved to be from her daughter, who lives at Tamworth, N. H. The letter was in answer to one written to the daughter on the day that Mrs. Bellows died.

Word of the woman's death was immediately telegraphed to the daughter, and she has arrived in this city. Private funeral services will be held, after which the body will be taken by the daughter to Tamworth for interment.

HUNGER DROVE HIM TO CRIME.

May Be a Murderer—Prisoner Shows Signs of Insanity.

Pittsburg, Feb. 7.—Driven to desperation bordering on insanity, from hunger and poverty, Louis Williams, colored, made a probable successful attempt to murder his wife at their home on Stockholm street, in the Twelfth ward. Without a word of provocation or an instants warning Williams crushed his wife's skull with a flat iron, afterwards kicking her almost lifeless body in a fiendish manner.

Williams immediately attempted suicide by taking what he supposed was rough on rats. It proved, however, to be soap bark and resulted only in making him very sick. At the police station Williams showed unmistakable signs of insanity and seemed happy when told that his wife would die.

SNOW IN THE HIGHLANDS.

Travel Made Difficult Throughout Perthshire, Scotland.

London, Feb. 7.—In the Scotch highlands snow has fallen almost incessantly since Tuesday night. The roads are blocked and railway travel is impossible. A train is embedded in an enormous drift near Loch Rannoch, Perthshire, and all efforts to start it have been futile, as the snow is piled up by the high wind as fast as it is shoveled away. All travel by land or water has stopped north of Inverness, on Moray Firth.

Barns and sheds have been isolated by the drifts. Many cattle are dying under cover. Thousands of sheep and deer have perished from cold and hunger or from suffocation in the drifts. Small game has suffered more than before in ten years.

Caught in the Act.

Buffalo, Feb. 7.—Car robbers and policemen had a desperate encounter in a New York Central freight car at East Buffalo yesterday. Railroad Detective Hulbert found four Poles robbing the freight car and summoning Sergeant Cantlin from station house No. 11, sought to capture them. The robbers opened fire on the two officers and a regular fusilade of shots were exchanged, but on account of the darkness none took effect. John Peters, aged 19 years, was clubbed into submission and arrested. The other robbers escaped.

No Free Speech Here.

Rome, Feb. 7.—There will be arranged in this city to-day thirty socialists, some of whom are barristers, some doctors and some journalists. The prisoners are charged with having been members of certain socialist societies, now dissolved, and also with having excited and fomented hatred among various classes of the people. Some of them have admitted that they were guilty of the charges brought against them and expressed regret for their actions.

Turkish Soldier Runs Amuck.

Constantinople, Feb. 7.—Last evening a Turkish soldier rushed from his quarters in the city, shouting "Allah" and wildly slashing with his sword in the crowded streets. He wounded five men mortally and eleven others seriously. Three women also were slightly cut. Eventually the soldier was overpowered. Among the mortally wounded was Mr. Sharp, secretary of the Pera & Galata railway. He died within an hour.

Killed While Bathing.

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 7.—News has just reached here that on Saturday night last, while Joseph H. Hurst, a good citizen of Choctaw county, was bathing, preparatory to retiring, an assassin fired a load of buckshot into his head, killing him instantly. There is no telegraphic communication with the place and further particulars cannot be learned.

Fire in Frogmore Woolen Mill.

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.—The Frogmore Woolen mill, in Frankford, a suburb of the city, run by Walker & Richmond, was burned last night. The loss is about $70,000, but the insurance could not be learned. The fire was caused by an explosion in the cellar of the mill.

Jack Frost at Bar Harbor.

Bar Harbor, Me., Feb. 7.—Yesterday was the coldest day ever known in this city, the thermometer reaching 16 below zero and the wind blowing a gale. The roads are badly drifted. A party of summer visitors are here to see Bar Harbor in the winter.

DEATH OF MONARCHY

Expression of Hawaii's Deposed Queen.

She Makes Her Abdication Most Complete and Definite—Steps from the Troubled Throne with Humble Obedience—Her Letter to President Dole.

Honolulu, Jan. 30, via San Francisco, Feb. 7.—Ex-Queen Liliuokalani, who since Jan. 16 has been a prisoner in the executive building, has signed a document abdicating all claims to the crown, declaring that the monarchy is dead forever, and that the republic is the only lawful government in Hawaii.

The paper was presented to President Dole on the 28th. Liliuokalani says:

After a full and free consultation with my personal friends and with my legal advisers, both before and since my detention by military order in the executive building, and acting in conformity to their advice and also upon my own free volition, and in pursuance of my unalterable belief and understanding of my duty to the people of Hawaii and to their highest and best interests, and also for the sake of those misguided Hawaiians and others who have recently engaged in rebellion against the republic, and in an attempt to restore me to the position of queen, which I held prior to the 17th day of January, 1893, and without any claim that I shall become entitled by reason of anything that I may now say or do to any other or different treatment or consideration at the hands of the government than I otherwise could and might legally receive, I now desire to express and make known, and do hereby express and make known to yourself, as the only lawful and recognized head of the government, and to all the people of the Hawaiian islands, whether or not they have yet become citizens of the republic, or have been adherents of the late monarchy, and also to all diplomatic and other foreign representatives in the Hawaiian islands, to all of whom I respectfully request you to cause this statement and action of mine to be made known as soon as may be, as follows, to wit: In order to avoid any possibility of doubt or misunderstanding on the subject, although I do not think that any doubt or misunderstanding is either proper or possible, I do hereby fully and unequivocally admit and declare the government of the republic of Hawaii as the only lawful government of the Hawaiian islands, and that the late Hawaiian monarchy is finally and forever ended and no longer of any legal or actual validity, force or effect whatsoever, and I do hereby forever absolve all persons whomsoever, whether in the Hawaiian islands or elsewhere, from all and every manner of allegiance or official obligation or duty to me and my heirs and successors forever, and I hereby declare to all such persons in the Hawaiian islands that I consider them as bound in duty and honor henceforth to support and sustain the government of Hawaii.

In many quarters of the ex-queen's abdication is regarded as a ruse to save herself. When her house was searched on the day of her arrest the officers found thirty-four rifles, eleven pistols, several swords, a quantity of cartridges and twenty-one dynamite bombs. The next day her papers were searched, and it was found she had already determined upon who should constitute her cabinet in the event of her restoration being successful. It was to be as follows: Robert W. Wilox, minister of foreign affairs; Samuel Nowlein, minister of the interior; C. T. Gulick, minister of finance, and C. W. Ashford, attorney-general. As associate justices she named Antone Rosa and V. V. Ashford. W. H. Rickard was to be marshal. Governors for the different islands were selected. A new constitution was prepared by C. T. Gulick. In fact, everything was in readiness for the restoration.

Jan. 29, Attorney-General Smith replied to the ex-queen. His reply began:

As you were under arrest at the time this instrument was signed, it is desired before accepting and placing the same on file to make clear to you, Mrs. Liliuokalani Dominis, in order that no misunderstanding may hereafter arise, the views of the government in the matter.

He then says that the government does not recognize that Liliuokalani has had any claims to surrender since Jan. 24, 1893, and that the document cannot be taken as exempting her from liability for the part taken by her in the recent uprising; but the attorney-general adds: "So far as your communication may be taken as a notice to the disaffected that it is your desire that the republic shall be recognized by them as the sole and lawful government of the country, it is fully appreciated."

Wreckage from the Elbe.

London, Feb. 7.—A fishing smack brought to Lowestoft last evening a trunk containing clothes, books and letters marked with the name of Charles Wix. The trunk was picked up about thirty miles off Lowestoft. Wix was a first cabin passenger on the Elbe. His home was in Orange, N. J.

The Way of the Transgressor Is Hard.

Leipsic, O., Feb. 7.—Frank Spark, a pretended detective from Decatur, Ind., was taken from the home of a relative at Shawtown by a band of men, given a coat of tar and feathers, and ordered to leave. He eloped with a saloonkeeper's wife two weeks ago, but she left him at Decatur and he followed her home.

Firemen in Peril.

Gallipolis, O., Feb. 7.—Fire broke out in E. T. Moore & Sons boog store last night and raged fiercely until daylight, when it was gotten under control. Four firemen were buried under the falling walls, and are thought to be fatally injured.

Launched for the Spring Regatta.

London, Feb. 7.—The Yaching World is informed that A. B. Walker's new yacht Ailsa will be launched to-day and will sail south in time to take part in the Mediterranean regattas.

Murat's Cavalry Charge at Eylau.

The 7th of February is the anniversary of the battle of Eylau between the French and Russians in 1807, up to that time the bloodiest encounter in Napoleon's wars. Early in the morning during a blinding snowstorm, Augereau's French division charged upon the Russians, and while their cannon mowed down his regiments the terrible Cossack hordes dashed up on both flanks, cutting down thousands and capturing thousands more. When the storm cleared, only 3,000 out of that gallant corps of 16,000 veterans remained. The battle was to decide the fate of his empire, and Napoleon ordered a grand charge of the Imperial guard and all the cavalry—his noble reserve. Murat, whom Napoleon styled "the best cavalry officer in the world," rode at their head. Slowly gathering momentum as they descended the snow covered slope, the squadrons, mustering 14,000 sabers, broke into a rapid pace across the field, where Augereau's line had been destroyed. Their leader could be singled out by his streaming white plume, and as he spurred on into the mass of Russian horsemen, hewing a pathway by his own fiery strength, his white plume, like the pennon of Marmion on the field of Flodden—now sinking and again flashing high as the excited charger leaped onward into the shattered ranks of Cossacks—nerved his followers to quicker, fiercer blows. The shock of the onset drove the Russian horse back upon the infantry. There Murat's squadrons were checked. Seeing a line of Russian foot soldiers whose bullets emptied his saddles more rapidly than Cossack sabers had done, he spurred his horse upon their blazing muskets. Instantly the men of the Old Guard who had clung by him through all the storm closed in behind their valiant leader. With flashing sword in one hand and pistol in the other, the bridle reins in his teeth, he dashed into the Russian line with a fury that swept it from the field, routed as thoroughly as the mass of Cossacks had been by the ardor of that first magnificent galloping charge.

The plea of a correspondent in this issue for a speedway in Plainfield will find endorsement among many progressive citizens. Active and energetic work would forthwith establish such an institution here, and Plainfield would materially benefit. Now is the time to begin on what can be made a prominent glory of the town

Y. W. Runyon, ex-city auditor, is trying to squirm out of the responsibility of auditing the bill which he declared irregular. He seeks to show that the office of city auditor is an empty name Why, then, does the Council pay $400 a year for a man to fill it, and if Mr. Runyon performed no service in that office why does not he return his city auditor salary to the Council as a conscience fund? And if it is irregular for a city official to audit his own bills why did Mr. Runyon stock the city up with printing from his own shop on his own authority and then pass his own bills in his capacity as city auditor?

Donation to the Dominie.

The mountain party held at the residence of H. G. Smith last evening, given by the women of Union Village, to the pastor of the M. E. Church was in every sense a success.

The kindness of the host and his estimable wife in offering their house for the occasion was appreciated by all. The inclement weather kept many away, but those present entered into the sport of the evening with the greatest zest. Music and singing in the early part of the evening, several selections on the piano, solos, duets and choruses, were enjoyed until supper was announced.

The tables fairly groaned the weight of the good things provided for the occasion, to say that it was enjoyed, and ample justice done would not express an idea of the attention paid to the feast.

The rest of the evening was passed in playing games, music, and dancing by the younger members of the party.

The hours passed all too quick, until with a pleasant good night to host and hostess the party broke up voting it one of the pleasant times to be remembered by all. Professor Kilner kindly played on the accordeon. Robert Clark sang several college songs. Mrs. Robert Willmont and Miss Lena Redner sang a very pretty duet; and Miss Kate Watson played several selections on the piano.

Melted in Grace.

LIKE A MIRACLE.

Salt Rheum, Impure Blood and a Racking Cough That Baffled Physicians, Finally Cured.

Springfield, Mass., Republican.

In the town of Amherst, Mass., Mr. Geo. B. Pierce and his mother are the proprietors of the Amherst Creamery Association. Mrs Pierce has suffered for a long time with Salt Rheum and a cough that forboded consumption, but they have given way to health and vigor. Hearing of this a reporter called on Mrs. Pierce, and the following experience was related.—

"For a long time I suffered from Salt Rheum" said Mrs. Pierce, "but about two years ago I slipped and hurt my knee, which made it worse. I can't begin to tell the agony I was in, my limbs became a mass of raw flesh covered with running sores. My friends would say I could not live long and I thought so too. Well, I heard of Dr David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and Dr. David Kennedy's Salt Rheum Cream; I commenced using them, and in three weeks I walked out of doors. Last night I walked a mile, and I am sixty-three years of age It shows that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and Salt Rheum Cream can do more than the physicians, for they made me well after my doctors told me I was incurable. I must also tell you of another preparation Dr. Kennedy advised me to use, which did as much for me It was Dr David Kennedy's Cherry Balsam. I have had a wretched cough for the past fifteen years, the best doctors in the state united in saying that it was incurable, and that it was only a matter of time before my lungs would give—my sleep was restless, I would lie awake for hours. I well recollect the first time I used Dr Kennedy's Cherry Balsam. It relieved my throat at once, and I slept all through that night, the first full night's rest I had in several years. It seemed like a miracle. I took but two bottles and was cured.

Dr David Kennedy's Cherry Balsam cures asthma, bronchitis, coughs, colds, incipient consumption, whooping cough or croup. Taken with Favorite Remedy it never fails. Price 25c. 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Dr. David Kennedy's Salt Rheum Cream is sold at 50c a package. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy costs $1.00 a bottle or six bottles for $5.00.

Favorite Remedy ranks with the medical profession as the most perfect of all blood and nerve medicines It restores the liver to a healthy condition and cures constipation. It is a certain cure for all diseases peculiar to women, and affords protection from attacks that originate in change of life. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, tumors, rheumatism, dyspepsia, all kidney, bladder and urinary diseases, gravel, diabetes and Brights disease. In this last disease it has cured where all else failed.

DIRECTIONS for using CREAM BALM.

Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostrils. After a moment draw a strong breath through the nose Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

ELY'S CREAM BALM opens and cleanses the nasal passages allays pain and inflammation heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. Price 50c at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

REMOVAL.

Dr. Lighthill begs leave to give notice that he has removed to

NO. 132 CRESCENT AVE.

(a few doors from his former location) where he can be consulted on all chronic diseases of whatever name and nature.

Dr. Lighthill refers with pardonable pride to the success of his practice in Plainfield and submits below a few of the many testimonials which he has received from grateful patients. A mass of similar ones can be seen at his office.

AN ALMOST MIRACULOUS CURE.

The Statement of Mr. Edward Teel, Jr., of Dunellen, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

From a sense of duty I desire to call public attention to the almost miraculous cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in the case of my wife. For eleven years she had been afflicted with piles of an unusual severe and distressing character. She suffered every day of her life the most intense pain, attended with frequent and profuse hemorrhage. This state of things debilitated her entire system until she became a perfect wreck of her former self.

We made every effort to obtain a cure but they all resulted in bitter disappointment, although a number of physicians of excellent reputations for skill in that direction had treated her case. She grew worse and worse all the time, the pain became perfectly unbearable and I felt she could not bear the strain of her condition much longer. In this extremity, a friend of mine, Mr. W. E. Dilts, a resident of Roselle, N. J., a passenger conductor on the New Jersey Central told me that he had been similarly affected, and had been permanently cured by Dr. Lighthill, after other medical skill had failed. He assured me that the doctor would cure my wife, no matter how severe her case may be, and his prediction proved perfectly correct. In spite of her desperate condition, Dr. Lighthill, I am glad to say, has effected a complete and perfect cure in her case, and has given her new life.

Since the cure has been effected she has gained in health and strength and is so improved in appearance that her friends scarcely recognize her. They all consider her cure as almost miraculous, and Dr. Lighthill's praise is heard on every side Our gratitude to Dr. Lighthill is unbounded and we only hope that other sufferers may be benefited by this publication.

EDWARD TEEL, Jr.

A Flattering Testimonial from Colonel John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing with which I was afflicted.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly; they were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleeping and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 132 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOMAS CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card From Mr. T. R. VanZandt,

of Nos. 304 and 306 Park ave.,

Plainfield, N. J

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks, but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose flattering testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

FORMAL OPENING OF OUR

Grocery Department!

SATURDAY, FEB. 9.

A few plain remarks in connection with this new departure we think is opportune.

A few months ago I rented and fitted up at a heavy expense my present elegant and spacious stores, with the intention of giving Plainfield a department store second to none in the State

As I have progressed from one improvement to another, I find that if I fulfill my plan, I must of necessity, add a first class Grocery Department, in order to compete with New York and Brooklyn department stores, as many of my patrons are buying these goods there, and desire me to furnish them with their Groceries together with their Dry Goods, Housefurnishings, etc.

I am very much surprised as I have talked to people in regard to this movements, to find that there is such a large proportion of this trade going to New York department stores, and I shall make a strong effort to induce it to remain at home—where it belongs.

I shall do all I can to counteract the too prevalent idea abroad that Plainfield is an expensive place to live in on account of the high prices on articles of food, as real estate agents often say they are obliged to meet this objection when trying to sell or rent houses to New York and Brooklyn people.

We shall, therefore, sell our goods, which will always be of the best quality to be had, at what may be known as cut prices

JERSEY CAPITOL ON FIRE.

Origin of the Blaze a Mystery.

Trenton, Feb 7—The New Jersey Capitol buildings were on fire this morning.

The fire broke out in the conference room in the rear of the Supreme Court room.

Its origin is shrouded in mystery, but the supposition is that it caught from the old wood fireplace.

The floor of the room for a space of fifteen feet long and three feet wide, including three heavy floor beams, was burned away.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Col. C. K. Moore has sent to Gov. Werts his resignation as justice of the peace.

Bennet Brittain of Front street and Clinton avenue is recovering from his illness.

W. J. Luckey of 320 West Second street is confined to his bed with a severe attack of the grip. Dr. Adams is the attending physician.

Head bartender Patrick O'Keeffe was stricken with an apoplectic fit while on duty in Rafferty's saloon this forenoon He is recovering under the care of Dr. Berg.

Morton Pierson of Roselle, member of the Junior class of the High School, has been very ill of pneumonia, and his many friends in Plainfield are glad to learn that he is convalescing.

A number of young people from Plainfield attended a dance at Bound Brook last evening. A very enjoyable evening was spent and the Plainfield party returned in the wee-small hours. An elaborate collation was served during the evening. Among those who went from this city were: Miss May McLoughlin. Miss Mary French, Miss Georgie Fountain, Mr. McLoughlin, Mr. DeMezs, Oscar Nightingale, Albert Woltmann, Edgar Serrell, John McLoughlin, and Frank Richards.

A GOOD NIGHT ALARM CLOCK.

Of Assistance to Young Men Who Find It Hard to Take Their Departure.

A young man stood in the portico of an apartment house in Washington park, Brooklyn, the other evening, and on the step above him stood a pretty girl. It was late, and the street was deserted. Despite the darkness it was apparent to the occasional passerby that the young man had the daintily gloved right hand of the young woman within his own, while his left hand rested over it like a cover to keep it guarded. The young man was apparently trying to say good night, and the young woman evidently could not hear him, for she was bending her head close to his. They stood in that attitude for nearly 15 minutes and might have been discovered in the same pose by the gray dawn of the morning had not something intervened.

That something was round and bright, and it came out of a sixth story window. It descended slowly, the moonlight shimmering on its silvery surface and making it conspicuous. Soon it could be seen that it was a string and was being lowered by an elderly woman. When it dangled over the portico, there was a sudden burr-r-r-r-r-r-ring, and the young man and young woman parted like an overstrained hawser. The young man seized the round and bright object, which was still ringing, and held its face to the electric light. The hands on the alarm clock were clasped at midnight. He raised his hat to the young woman, murmured a few words in a low tone and disappeared. The alarm clock was hoisted up quickly, but the young woman was up stairs before it finally reached the open window.—New York Sun.

Utica's Unique Tollgate.

Utica enjoys the doubtful distinction of being probably the only city in the United States which has a tollgate within its boundaries or anywhere near it, for that matter. The old days of toll roads and tollgates have passed away, and it is well that they have. The company which maintains the Deerfield gate has a legal status that cannot be done away with without the consent of those who own the property. The last legislature passed an enabling act which makes it possible for the parties interested to do away with the tollgate, and it is something to which the attention of the authorities may properly be directed.—Utica Press.

The Youth of Americans.

Elizabeth Powell Bond, Dean of Swarthmore College, delivered a most entertaining and instructive lecture on the youth of William Lloyd Garrison and Ralph Waldo Emerson, replete with personal reminiscences and anecdote, for with both these eminent Americans, as also with their families, the lecturer was fortunate in being a personal friend.

A. M. Powell followed the lecturer, remarking upon several incidents in the lives of both men not touched upon by the speaker of the evening and Rev. Hobart Clark also spoke on Emerson in his usual happy manner. All who were so fortunate as to be present last evening enjoyed an intellectual treat.

Edsall's Enterprise.

Seely Edsall, who deserves great credit for his courageous enterprises of the past and for educating the people into buying at home at less than New York prices, today makes an important announcement concerning his new grocery department. He says he is bound to wean away from New York department stores the grocery trade that now goes there. As he succeeds in everything, so he 'll succeed in this.

Sergeant Kiely's Score Soon Beaten.

Last evening on the Trade Temple alleys Sergeant Kiely made the unusual score of 233 in a practice game, starting in with a break and following with seven strikes and two spares.

This morning, to uphold the dignity of the Plainfield bowlers, John Emmons put on his war paint, stepped to the alleys and pushed 235 of them over with apparent ease in one, two, three order.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure.

Smoke, But No Fire.

A still alarm sent to Headquarters over the 'phone by Dr. Tomlinson at 9:30 a.m. today called Chief Doane with No. 2 hose carriage and a company of firemen to the Crescent Avenue Church, where they found smoke issuing from the windows, and rushing in were met with a volume of smoke which filled the church. A careful examination disclosed the fact that the fire was confined to the furnace, and no apparatus was used. The fire had just been built.

NOW ON HAND,

Diphtheria Antitoxine.

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.

So limited has been the supply of GENUINE ANTITOXINE heretofore, that sales have been made only on condition of immediate actual use. But amid so large a population as ours, an urgent demand for the new treatment may arise at any hour, night or day, Sunday or week-day. And delay in obtaining it might result fatally. I have therefore, with some difficulty, and at considerable expense, provided a complete outfit of Antitoxine Serum (with injector) and am prepared to meet such demand The cost of an outfit (Serum of two powers and Koch injector) is now about $12 being only one-fourth of the earlier price. At present sales will be made only on the order of a practicing physician.

AN ORDINANCE

concerning the removal of snow and ice from sidewalks and gutters.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the owner, occupant, lessee or other person having the charge of each and every dwelling house, store, or other building or lot or lots of ground, shall within the first four hours of daylight after every fall of snow or hail, or after the formation of any ice upon the sidewalk adjoining said premises, cause the said snow or ice (unless said ice shall have been strewn with ashes, sawdust or sand) to be removed from the flagging, cement, concrete, planks, crushed stone, graveled surface or other artificial covering thereof; and shall also cause the gutter in front thereof to the width of one foot outwardly from and adjoining the curb line to be cleaned out so as to allow the water to run freely along the same, and any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall on conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding five dollars; provided that this section shall not apply to any sidewalk which shall not at the time have been laid either to the whole width or a part thereof with flagging, cement, concrete, planks, boards, crushed stone, graveled surface or some artificial covering.

Section 2. That as to all sidewalks and gutters of any street or highway that is graded, curbed and flagged, the street commissioner shall at an expense not exceeding one cent per front foot, in all cases in which the owner of the land shall fail to remove the snow and ice within twenty-four hours after such sidewalks or gutters were covered with snow or ice, remove said snow or ice from said sidewalks and gutters as directed by the statute in such case made and provided, and in such case the costs and expense paid and incurred by said street commissioner for removing the snow and ice from any sidewalk or gutter as aforesaid shall be certified by said street commissioner to the city assessor, "and the same shall be added to the taxes of the lot or lots or parcels of land in front of the sidewalks and gutters from which the snow and ice was removed, and shall be a part of the same as a first and paramount lien upon said land and premises".

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

CANONIZING MRS. EDDY, FOUNDER OF THE SECT.

Effects of the Faith Said to be Excellent for the Complexion and Good for Overcoming Balky Horses. Formula Used in Healing.

St. Theresa and St. Elizabeth would open their eyes at the good fortune of Mrs. Eddy, founder of the Christian Scientists. Mrs. Eddy, yet in life, is undergoing canonization, with all modern conveniences. The new church of the Christian Scientists, just dedicated in Boston, has what is called a Mother's Room. This is for the exclusive use of Mrs. Eddy. It is enriched with white marble and mosaics. The dominant tone is pale green, relieved with pink. In front of the room is a sunburst, with a seven-rayed star cut in the centre.

There are several other novel features in the new church, including many of the most elegant full length mirrors. Christian Science, however, has never disdained the purely practical.

There is a woman in Boston who is frequently quoted as having carried Christian Science further than any of its votaries. She wanted but one thing—money. She made up her mind if there was anything in the religion she had adopted she would have it. So morning, noon and night she thought of nothing but money. In this faith she persisted, and at length money, in the most unlikely way, and by no other conscious effort of her own, was vouchsafed her.

Her theory appeared to start from the Scriptural assertion that "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof." We are his heirs, his children, therefore we have a right to all that this world affords. We are born to prosperity, as we are born to eternal life. Those who claim it will come into their birthright, and nothing can imperil it.

Attention is called to the fact that Christian Scientists are always well-to-do. Their strongholds are in the great cities among the rich. Its disciples are found in Saratoga, and not in fishing villages beside a lonely lake. After eighteen centuries Martha and Mary are on hotel piazzas in ruffled muslins and bronze slippers. Eighteen centuries will accomplish a good deal. Christian Scientists also call attention to their good complexions. One of their teachers once said:

"If I were not afraid of being called a charlatan I would advertise a series of lectures on Christian Science as a cosmetic. I am sixty years old and look at my skin!"

It was indeed dazzling with its rose and snow.

"Our constant feeling of exaltation," she explained, "through faith in our birthright, sends the blood dancing through our veins, restoring, renewing, carrying life to every part of our body. The work of creation, of recreation never ceases. It is this that transforms the skin to satin, and that paints it with the glow of health, and sends living light into the eye."

There are others who have gone further into this matter, who assert further that when the Scriptures say, 'the oil of gladness maketh the face shine," it is not a symbolic truth, but a physical fact. The sense of being heirs to the universe is a perpetual reservoir of happiness, they contend, and reacting physically, opens the little sacs of oil that underlie the cuticle. These not only nourish and lave the skin, keeping it moist and fresh, but from them proceeds an ineffable perfume, so that when persons are so fully launched in this new belief that they live in it and move in it, it surrounds them like an aura.

One young woman says that when she experiences this happiness at full tide, and puts her hand to her face, she feels the transformation in the caressing touch of the skin, the warm, dewy fragrance of her finger tips, and is a delight unto herself.

All this is to show how far the methods of self-denial and contempt for the body that characterized the old Christian belief have been swept away by the luxurious new faith.

Yet Christian Science as an organized religion is not more than fifteen years old. Mrs. Eddy is regarded as its founder. When only nine years old, it is related, she heard repeatedly a voice calling "Mary! Mary!" She thought it was her mother and would run to her. This troubled her mother greatly, for she did not believe her little girl would live. One night she read to the child the story of little Samuel, and told her if she heard the voice again to answer as he did, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth." The next time, however, she was too frightened to speak. Then she prayed for forgiveness. When the voice called again she answered, and never heard the voice again.

Henceforth she grew up in an atmosphere of spiritual aspiration.

Equally pertinent facts, however, are that Mary Baker, as Mrs. Eddy was then, in time was married, and subsequently divorced. She had had previously another husband, a Colonel Glover, a South Carolinian, who died after a year. Mrs. Eddy was very ill in 1855, after a very severe accident, and given up to die by her physician.

At this time there came along an old Vermont doctor named Quimby. He was a travelling doctor, and took Salem, where Mrs. Eddy lived, in turn. Hearing of her illness, he asked to treat her. He did so by the method now in vogue with the Christian Scientists, and she began to mend. They had many talks together, with the result that his patient began to study his practice of healing.

The Metaphysical College, as it is somewhat curiously called, was chartered in 1883. Here was the fountain head of the science of divine healing, to which disciples flocked from all parts of the land. There are few more profitable colleges. For a course of tuition lasting only a few months Mrs. Eddy was accustomed to get $500. She is now very rich, living in one of the most beautiful houses in Commonwealth avenue, Boston, overlooking the Back Bay Park.

One of the pupils has given to me the notes she made during this five-hundred-dollar course, and the secret formula of healing. I am bound to say that these convey very little to my mind beyond words, and of these much repetition. It appears, however, that a certain mental state is necessary on the part of the recipient for the comprehension of these truths.

This much may be gleaned: They affirm that spirit is the only substance, and spiritual transactions are the only reality. There are twelve of these lectures. The first six are explanatory; the following six relate to the patient and the healing. First is demanded a belief in what is called the "basic principle." This is the omnipresence of God. God is good. Good being present everywhere there can be no evil. Two bodies cannot occupy the same space at the same time. Evil being non-existent, why are we ill and sinful? We are not; that we are is merely an error of belief. Change the belief, we are well.

It is a singular fact, so all Christian Scientists say, that after the third or fourth lecture the listener becomes physically ill. The feeling is that of nausea and a sense of collapse, like that after some profound emotion or during an earthquake. This is called "chemicalization." It is the result of the tumult in the hearer's mind. The old beliefs are swept away, everything steadfast seems tumbling. The mind reels; new thoughts rush in and clamor for place. This mental disturbance reacts powerfully on the body.

One woman says she was attacked after the fifth lecture. This lecture is a terror. It disposes of the material world. She learned that when she was pinched she did not feel. Taste and sensation were absent. Her mind toppled and she went home reeling. There she threw herself on a lounge and called for the fieriest novel that could be found, as the only chance of getting hold on earth once more.

The sixth lecture restores mental calm and prefaces the course on healing. As only thought is real, each disease must be the externalization of some thought. In visiting a patient the first thing is to discover the thought that produces the disease. If he lives in a house in which he knows that the plumbing is bad, an evil thought has been at work. If the patient is a boy, somebody has been at work on its "unconscious mortal intellect."

As disease is a thought, it must be counteracted by thought. The proper thought will act more quickly on a case of fever than aconite. A book of telegrams was shown to me, in which pleas for immediate healing were filed from every part of the country. Many were from stage people. One begged the stopping of a sudden hemorrhage.

The "science of silence" is a common phrase. Silent treatment consists of denials and affirmatives. The formula for silent healing is not given until after the lectures are over, and some sort of a vow of secrecy accompanies it. At least that was once the case. In the formula shown me the healer was supposed to be treating a woman for rheumatism of the heart. The patient, man or woman, is called Mary Brown, a name with the same pertinence as John Doe. Six treatments are regarded as necessary. In the first the healer attacks the influence of heredity, or the belief in it. This is what the healer says, but only in her own mind:

"Now, Mary Brown, listen to me; hear what I have to tell you. All these things that you have told me about having rheumatism of the heart are not true. There is not a word of truth in the whole of it. The belief of your parents has no power to reflect upon you those conditions you call rheumatism of the heart.

"You are free. Realize it and assert yourself. You cannot be in bondage to this thing you call rheumatism of the heart."

The second treatment proceeds on the general head of "deception," or the mistake of everybody but the Christian Scientists as to the nature of disease. The formula is used in the same manner. The third treatment relates to the driving out of any evil thought that may have produced the illness. It is in this manner:

"The selfishness, envy, jealousy, malice, cruelty, revenge of your parents, Mary Brown, cannot reflect this thing you call rheumatism of the heart."

The same formula is used with relatives and associates.

At the fourth treatment the patient is expected to grow worse, owing to the breaking up of beliefs, and before he has fully got hold of the truth; this state of unrest pictures itself on the body. The healer's duty is now to allay all the disturbances of the mind. This is the formula:

"The unrest of the present is not reflected on you, Mary Brown, by your parents, for God is life, God is health, God is strength, God is peace."

The fifth treatment is to give courage. The sixth, if all goes well, is to be final. It is called the "spiritual baptism," and goes like this:

"Mary Brown, listen to me. You are the perfect creature of the living God—spiritual, harmonious, living, fearless, free. You reflect all the good of the whole universe. Truth flows to you from every side. You show forth all the good of your parents. You reflect the goodness of the whole race, love, sympathy, tenderness, compassion, beauty, joy, peace. You reflect the purity of all you meet daily. You show forth all that is good in me. You are good because God is good; you are strong because He is so. He is your peace. Rest and comfort surround you, lift you up and sustain you. You are the living proof of my words. You have peace of mind, knowledge of universal truth and health of body. I pronounce my work perfect. 'Lo, I am with you always.'"

After this Mary Brown is expected to be not only physically well, but to think no little of herself.

A young man who is a Christian Scientist suppports the doctrine further by assuring me that he once gave silent treatment to a balky horse and overcame him.—N. Y. Herald.

HOW TO SIZE UP THINGS.

Some Facts About Haberdashery That the Buyer Doesn't Know.

"Oh, that's about a size too small for you," said a salesman in a big clothing establishment, as he critically surveyed a coat into which he had assisted a patron.

"Yes, it is a bit too small," assented the other, taking off the garment, "but, just tell me how much is a size."

"In a coat," answered the salesman, "a size is one inch."

"Is that so!" exclaimed the customer. He had been living for nearly 32 years, was fairly intelligent, but never knew that fact.

And there are thousands just like him, who also do not know, for instance, that a size in underwear is two inches; in a sock, an inch; in a collar, half an inch; in trousers, one inch; in shoes, one-sixth of an inch; in gloves, a quarter of an inch, and in hats, one-eighth.

Equal to the Occasion.

Mother—Mary, that young man is too presumptuous. We shall have to sit on him."

Mary—Leave that to me, ma. I'll attend to it the next time he comes."—Tid Bits.

MONEY LOANED,

Local Representatives Wanted

Our system affords an opportunity to borrow on either personal or real estate security. The plan is superior to building and loan associations. The amount borrowed pay to returned in monthly payments without bonus, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum, it affords absolute security to investors with a reasonable guarantee of an annual dividend of from 8 to 10 per cent. We desire to secure the services of energetic, representative men in every community to act as local secretaries. The position will be sufficiently remunerative to amply compensate for services. If you possess the above qualifications write for particulars. Full information regarding our system of making loans as well as investments and agencies will be furnished by addressing S. S. Robertson, President, 1122 Walnut st., Philadelphia. 1 5 sm

WASHINGTON NEWS.

THE FINANCIAL PROBLEM WHICH IS TROUBLING OUR STATESMEN.

Indications that the Democrats Will Not Follow the President's Lead. Foreign Views of Difficulties. American Honor Discredited.

The speech of Mr. Joseph C. Sibley, the Democratic representative from the Twenty-sixth Pennsylvania district, delivered in the House, January 8, and "withheld for revision," now appears in the official record. It is preceded by a caption and a poetic contribution, as follows:

"Money has been defined as the wheels of commerce. We have taken away one-half the wheels and are engaged in guessing why commerce moves so slowly.

"We have read in the lore of long ago
That a symbol of our life below
Is a boat with palsied men to row,

The alliterative passage in the speech which excited so much comment at the time of its delivery appears in the revised version as follows:

"Mr. Chairman—If I have read the Constitution of the United States correctly, it defines the position and duties of the Chief Executive and the powers and duties of membership of the House; and I tell you if ever a rebuke was needed to one who has tramped down the prerogatives of the people, it is needed to-day to that man who has used his influence, or attempted to use it, to create himself the sole governing power of this nation. [Applause on the Democratic side.] It has come to a time when to be the government of this people requires something more than a combination of brains, belly, and brass. [Renewed applause.] The members of this House have duties to perform, rights to be respected, and are answerable to their own consciences, to their own people, and not to the President, and in the discharge of those duties are not to be awed into a violation of duty by an exercise of executive powers outside his constitutional prerogatives."

The speech is accompanied by voluminous addenda, consisting of "extracts from writings and speeches of dead and living statesmen, political economists, philosophers, and patriots, relative to the effect of a shrinking volume of currency upon the prosperity of the country."

All attempts to bring the Democratic party together in support of President Cleveland's financial recommendations, or any financial bill whatever, have failed, and it is now apparent, even to the most sanguine, that there will be no financial legislation at this session of Congress. The Administration men in the House are still hopeful, or they profess to be, that some proposition can be patched up that can get a majority, but in the Senate all hope has been abandoned. The attitude of the Republicans in the present emergency has given rise to the report that if an extra session is called they will not favor the enactment of legislation affecting the currency, but will pass an act merely increasing tariff duties, and thus putting money into the Treasury. The two or three speeches which have been made by Mr. Reed during the present session indicate that this is the popular Republican policy. He has held all along that all that is necessary to relieve the financial situation is to have the receipts of the Treasury exceed the expenditures.

The financial crisis in the United States is regarded as the gravest feature of the general monetary situation in London and in all European business centres. A careful canvass of representative London opinion yields results which deserve serious consideration. It may be said at once that Mr. Cleveland's message failed to produce any effect in monetary circles in London. This was chiefly because the message was everywhere accompanied by the announcement that there was hardly any possibility of its recommendations becoming law in the present Congress. The President's ideas are approved by most London bankers. The only important criticism was a charge of inconsistency, wherein the President declares that all money should rank alike, and later suggests that interest on the bonds should be payable only in gold. The opinion of London bankers with American connections regarding the causes of the enormous transfers of gold to Europe is highly significant. All agree that Englishmen have stopped making fresh American investments. The dividends and interest from American securities, which are usually reinvested in that country, must now be paid in cash. This, of course, can only partially account for the flow of gold. A more important explanation is found in the general discrediting of American finances, public and private, which has undoubtedly taken place throughout Europe. This has caused a great change in the manner of conducting commercial business within a few months. European exporters until recently sent their goods to America on six months' credit. A large proportion is now demanded in cash. The effect of this, especially with the increased foreign trade under the new tariff, has been a tremendous, extra, but temporary drain upon American treasuries. London bankers believe the new practice has become so extensive that it will account for a much greater movement of gold than has yet occurred. When confidence is restored and old methods are resumed, there will be another flood in the opposite direction. ROGER LEWIS.

His Will on a Postal Card.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger says: Register Smithers yesterday issued letters of administration, with a will annexed, on the estate of Edward F. Vansciver, who committed suicide in the county prison on Jan. 9. His personal effects were valued at $200. The testamentary writing which was admitted to probate was a postal card addressed to "Louis Sacks, 232 East Cambria street, Philadelphia, Pa.," containing the following words:

"Phila., Jan. 9, 1894.—Mr. Sacks, take everything from the prison. Everything is yours. Yours truly.

"We don't want any poetry," said the editor, haughtily.

"I know it," replied the pretty girl, just as haughtily. "This isn't poetry. It's some doggerel that my 8-year-old brother composed. After reading what you publish I shouldn't have thought of offering you poetry."

And the editor really felt relieved when he made her exit and slammed the door.—Washington Star.

THE CAT HELPED HATCH THE EGGS.

In Return, Biddy Saved Isham's Life in a Fight With Three Muskrats.

Gifford Bogue, of Washington's Crossing, N. J., owns a remarkable cat. The animal is of immense size and extremely pugnacious. It is a famous rat catcher, and Bogue declares that it has got more common sense than some whole families.

Last summer Bogue set a hen in a shed adjoining the barn. The barn was infested with enormous rats, and one day he heard the hen squawking as if in great distress. He started for the shed on a run, but before he got there Isham, the cat, dashed past him, and when he reached the shed he found the cat engaged in a fierce struggle with an enormous rat, which had evidently tried to rob the hen of the eggs on which she was setting. It was nip and tuck between the rat and cat for awhile, but Isham finally won, and the rodent's neck was snapped.

From that time a strong attachment existed between the cat and the hen, and when Biddy left her nest to take a constitutional Isham would crawl into the nest, curl up, and defy the whole colony of rats. Thus were the eggs kept warm and intact, and when the hen had rounded up her three weeks of labor she walked off the nest with thirteen pretty little chicks. Every egg was hatched.

Rats have a keen appetite for fresh young chickens, and those around the barn did their best to get a choice morsel out of biddy's brood, but Isham hung around her night and day until the chickens became capable of self-defence, and biddy went back to her roost and resumed business as a common, every-day layer of eggs.

This was an opportunity for the hen to repay Isham for its kindness to her presented itself, and she waded in to cancel the debt in a way that proved her gratitude. Muskrat skins are worth from 20 to 30 cents a piece at this season, and Bogue picks up a good many odd dollars in winter through them. Early in the season he conceived the idea of training the cat to hunt muskrats. He believed that if he could get a live muskrat and arrange a fight between it and the cat Isham would look for that particular game thereafter. He set a box trap on the bank of the canal and caught a muskrat. It was a good-sized animal, and when Isham was shut up in a room in the wagon house with it, it was apparent right away that there was going to be the liveliest kind of fight. The cat walked around the muskrat a few times and then jumped at it. The rat met the assault bravely, and set its sharp teeth into Isham's leg. The cat didn't take kindly to the trick, and entered into the contest with renewed vim. It was a hard fought battle, but the cat won.

After that the cat haunted the canal and made relentless war on muskrats. Not a day passed that it didn't bring one animal up to the house and sometimes it killed three. Bogue estimates that in the last two months the cat has been worth to him an average of twenty-five cents a day.

Last week Isham got rather more than it bargained for. It was down by the canal looking for game and it spied a muskrat fooling around the rotten timbers of an old barge in the basin. The cat sneaked up on the animal, and when it got within jumping distance it made a leap. It reached its prey, but had hardly alighted when two other muskrats jumped in to help their companion out of the scrape. The cat hadn't counted on this onslaught and it began to retreat up the bank, keeping up as much of a show of dignity as possible. The three muskrats kept close to its heels, and when Isham humped its back, crubbed its tail, and started for the house, the rats threw it down and fairly mopped the ground with it. In its distress Isham let forth a chorus of howls that attracted the attention of its friend, the hen, who was quietly feeding a short distance away. Biddy took a quick survey of the situation, and at once proceeded to help the cat out. She flew upon the struggling mass of fur and dug her claws and bill into the muskrats until they gave her some attention. This gave Isham an opportunity to get on its feet, and encouraged by the hen's presence, it waded into the fight with renewed vigor. The hen did good service. She aimed her blows at the eyes of the muskrats and soon had them blinded. Meantime Isham's fury was increasing, and it fought with such vigor that the three rats were soon stretched out lifeless.

The scrimmage yielded forty-five cents to Bogue, but it came very near costing him a valuable cat. The hen saved Isham's life.

HOWARD'S WISH.

"I wish," said greedy Howard, with a wide and beaming smile,
"That I could be the Mississippi River for a while;
For my mouth would then be three miles wide—my joy would be complete—
Just imagine for a moment what a dinner I could eat!"

Self-explanatory.

"I'm patient," said the man from Philadelphia, "but I think it's time to draw the line on guying my town."

"Who has been doing that?"

"The Government. The people have all been wondering what makes a warship so slow in coming. When it gets there they'll find it's the Philadelphia."—Washington Evening Star.

"Beginning" is Good.

"They are American-cut diamonds, Your Majesty," remarked Mrs. Runyon, wife of the American Ambassador, to Emperor William, who sat opposite her at the dinner he gave a few weeks ago to the Diplomatic Corps, and who had expressed admiration of the splendidly cut gems.

"Yes," rejoined the Emperor, smiling; "I notice that America is beginning to beat us in more ways than one."

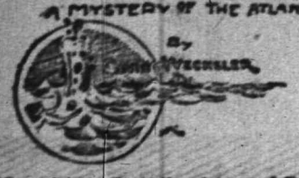
THE OCEAN GRAVEYARD

A MYSTERY OF THE ATLANTIC.

By [illegible] Wechsler.



[Copyright by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

A dead silence followed this extraordinary story. It had been told in such a way as to convince us that there was something in it. Even Capt. Lorton appeared to ponder over the facts. After a long pause Moxly said:

"I remember once hearing an old skipper from Dundee tell pretty much the same story."

It was plain to be seen that Linklater's strange yarn had made a deep impression upon every man present. After that last remark no one spoke. Perhaps if it had been told under different circumstances it might not have taken such a hold upon us; but somehow the pounding of the billows on the beach, the rumble of shingle and the furious gusts of wind that sent the rain dashing against the window seemed to deepen the effect.

"What do you think of all this, Capt. George?" I said, at length, turning towards him.

"I think Capt. Linklater is right," he answered.

"You believe in this mysterious rock, then?"

"I have seen it."

"Well, if that Scotch skipper could be found, three of us could bear witness to the fact, at any rate," remarked Linklater.

"It may be as you say, of course," said Capt. Lorton, doubtfully, "but how is it, if such a rock really exists, it has remained so long unknown?"

"I have my own theory as to that," replied Capt. George.

"Would you mind giving us the benefit of it?"

"My belief is this: that rock appears and disappears at intervals."

"Impossible!"

"Why so? How can you or I tell what goes on in the bed of the ocean? It is a sealed book to us. We are told there are hills and valleys there, just the same as on land. How do we know what forces are at work in these submarine tracts? In South America, and other parts, an earthquake will change the whole face of a district in half an hour. If such an alteration can take place on land, who dare venture to say it cannot occur at the bottom of the sea?"

"I should be slow to believe it," said the surveyor.

"Look at the Pacific," continued Capt. George, who appeared strangely interested in this question. "There you will find that not only a rock, but a whole island, will come to the surface in a single week. If you go to look for it a month later, most likely it will have vanished. What is to prevent a thing of this kind happening nearer home? Why, only the other day the hull of a brig which had been burnt at sea fifty years ago, was thrown up off the Faroe islands and towed into Galveston harbor. How do you account for that?"

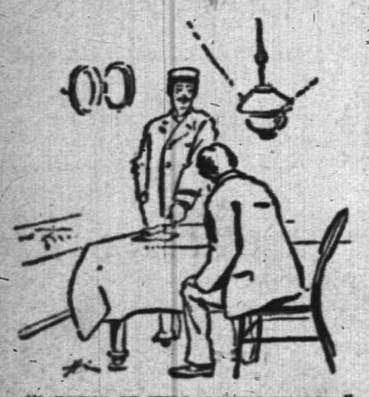
The question led to a pretty lively discussion, and it was eight o'clock before the party broke up. By that time the rain had ceased, and the wind was dying down. Capt. George asked for a lantern to signal the Wanderer to send a boat on shore.

"Come on board with me, Lawrenceson," he said, as he was leaving. "I want to have a chat with you about this matter we have just been discussing."

When we reached the wet, slippery deck of the yacht he led the way into the saloon, turned up the lamps, and pointed to a chair near the table. I sat down. He folded his arms, and walked backwards and forwards with gloomy look.

"A snug cabin this, Capt. George," I said, glancing around.

"Rather too large for my taste," he replied, "but one requires a roomy boat when their home is on the sea.



"I THINK IT WILL CONVINCE HIM."

It is strange, Lawrenceson, what disappointment will do for a man; it drives some to drink, some to a monastery, and some to an asylum. It has driven me to the sea."

I didn't exactly know what to say, for I had never seen him in one of these dark moods before, and thought it best to remain silent.

"Well," he said presently, brightening up a bit, "I didn't bring you off here to listen to my growling. About this rock, you heard what Linklater had to say, though, perhaps, you may think he was mistaken. He was not. I can give you pretty fair evidence of its existence."

He went to a sort of writing table at the head of the saloon, unlocked one of the drawers and took out a piece of torn, discolored paper.

"Read this," he said, laying it on the table before me. "You can take it on shore if you like and show it to your surveyor. I think it will convince him."

The writing was blotched and blurred, as if the paper had been under water a considerable time. Nevertheless, I had little difficulty in making it out. I have that scrap of paper still; I keep it with a few other curious relics of the sea. Here it is:

"Nevada struck unknown rock in mid-ocean. God have mercy upon us. We are all lost.
H. B. WEST. Elmira, U. S."

"A strange message," said Capt. George, "and it came into my hands in a very singular way. Some years ago I was cruising off the west coast of Ireland. One morning we put out a trawl, and in making a haul we captured an enormous codfish. When the cook opened it he found in the maw a silver match box, a plain gold ring and a small case of cedar wood. That case, which bore the initials 'H. B. W.' contained this scrap of paper. Though the water had soaked into it, I fancy it must have been floating when the greedy fish got hold of it. I infer this from the fact that there was an inch or so of string hanging from the case, as if it had been originally attached to a bottle, a piece of cork, or something of that kind."

"The Nevada," I said, repeating the name. "I fancy I remember hearing of that vessel."

"Very likely," he replied. "She was an Atlantic boat, running between Boston and London. If I'm not mistaken, she was lost in '78—another of those ocean mysteries, you see, for her fate is still a matter of mere conjecture in the shipping world."

"MAKING A RUSH WITH THE MAILS," CAPT. GEORGE REMARKED.

"I suppose you endeavored to trace the friends and relatives of this Mr West? for it looks like a man's handwriting."

"Not I. What good would it have done? His friends or relatives, if he had any, had long ago given him up for lost. Why should I open an old wound?"

"But at any rate you communicated with the owners of the vessel?"

"I did nothing of the kind. I should only have brought their representative down upon me; probably he would have followed me from port to port, and I had no fancy to be pestered in that way. Very possibly a newspaper man would have been set on my track, and I couldn't have given him the slip so easily. If he failed to find me in port he would have started off in chase of the Wanderer, and tried to interview me on the high seas as one of them did, you remember, in the case of Capt. Morrell of the Missouri."

"So you kept this information entirely to yourself?"

"I made good use of it. I went and searched for that rock; and I found it."

"Where does it lie?"

"You shall see for yourself; that is, if you agree to a proposition I have to make. When I discovered the position of the rock I determined, some day or other, to make a careful survey of the spot on my own account by sending down a diver to examine its formation. The conversation this afternoon has revived my—well, whim, fad, or whatever you like to call it. I am ready to set out on the expedition whenever I can find a diver bold enough—"

"I'm your man, Capt. George!" I exclaimed.

"Good; I couldn't ask for better. I think you will find it as profitable employment as staying at home and taking your chance of wrecks. This is not exactly the best time of year for the enterprise, but no matter! It will take a week or so to get the Wanderer properly fitted out and ship sufficient stores. Can you be ready within ten days?"

I told him I had no other work in view once we had finished with the Magellan, and, after that day's storm, I fully expected she would give us little further trouble.

"I will drop into Landport at the end of next week," he said. "Meanwhile, keep this project to yourself; I don't want it talked about, or to have any fuss made in the newspapers."

He accompanied me on deck, the boat was hauled up alongside and I returned to the shore. When I awoke next morning and looked out over the bay the Wanderer was gone.

On the 27th of September we commenced our remarkable voyage. I felt somewhat depressed, I don't know why, at leaving home on that occasion. There was something attractive in the idea of solving this great Atlantic mystery, which, if it really existed, must have caused untold disasters. Still, I was not altogether carried away by Capt. George's views, and entertained considerable doubt as to our success.

We steered west-sou'-west for several days. We sighted some of the big Atlantic liners in the distance. One evening a huge Cunarder passed within a mile or so of us, lights all aglow, her funnels belching out columns of smoke that trailed away far behind.

"Making a rush with the mails," Capt. George remarked as we watched her.

Next day it was blowing rather fresh, and we had a choppy sea. It struck me as strange that, up to the present, Capt. George had made no direct reference to the object of our voyage. That morning, however, after breakfast, he said to me:

"We must take our bearings at noon, Lawrenceson, or we may overshoot the mark."

We did so, and when we had picked out our position on the chart, the course was altered to sou'-sou'-west. This brought us more out of the track of Atlantic steamers, though we still sighted a number of sailing ships. I noticed that Capt. George kept a close eye on the chart during the next few days.

One morning, when he had made the usual daily reckoning, he came down into the saloon with a paper in his hand, upon which was marked the latitude and longitude.

"Get your diving gear ready, Lawrenceson," he said. "You'll want it before long."

"Is the rock in sight?"

"No, nor likely to be. Probably it is submerged, as I believe is generally the case, though at what depth is another question. All the same, we are not far off it."

That evening the engines were slowed down. Capt. George stood on the bridge, and for upwards of an hour he took entire charge of the vessel, altering the course from time to time. Then he gave the signal to stop.

The men in the bows were ready with the anchor, and presently I heard it splash into the water. We were provided with a special deep-sea cable, but I was rather surprised to find the depth was not so great as I had fancied. Capt. George descended from the bridge, and joined me.

"To-morrow morning we will get the long-boat out, if the weather holds fine," he said. "You will have to proceed more to the south, before you make your first descent."

I confess I did not sleep much that night. My mind was too full of the mystery of this ocean rock. Was the story true? Did the terrible spot really lie within reach of us? If so, what an appalling sight would meet my view when I stood beneath it, and gazed around at the havoc it had wrought! I felt I might be on the verge of some startling discovery.

I lay awake until long after midnight. Then I determined to get up and go on deck. As I passed Capt. George's cabin I could tell by his heavy breathing that he was sleeping soundly. I moved on, and stepped out into the cool night air.

How well I can recall the scene from the Wanderer's deck at that silent hour! The moon was on the wane; she was wading slowly through a mass of dark clouds emerging occasionally to flood the ocean with her silver light. Not a sound was to be heard, save the melancholy moan of the sea or the splash of the water against the yacht's side.

In the morning I felt more like myself; perhaps I was too busy with my preparations to think much of anything else. Following Capt. George's directions, we rowed away to the south, and when we got about half a mile from the yacht I went down.

[TO BE CONCLUDED]

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Diamondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY. $5 A YEAR.

A NEW JERSEY REFORMATORY.

Plan and Purpose of the Proposed Institution, to Be Established in Union County.

Assemblyman Eisele of Essex proposes to make a vigorous fight for a State reformatory in spite of the fact that the "steering committee" of the Republican majority has decided to push the bill for enlarging the State Prison. Mr. Eisele says he can tell the committee something which will open their eyes about the State Prison when the time comes.

The State reformatory scheme has been before other Legislatures. Gov. Werts stated in his last message that he favored such an institution rather than enlarging the State Prison, but he thought the latter could be done at less cost, and there was immediate need of some relief for this crowded institution.

The proposed reformatory is to be for the custody and confinement of criminals between the ages of 16 and 30 who have not previously been sentenced to a State Prison, and of persons convicted for the first time of a crime not involving moral turpitude. A commission of six persons is to have charge of the construction of the building, and to act as the board of managers after its completion until otherwise ordered by the Legislature. The commission is to be appointed by the Governor, and to receive $500 a year each. The institution would be erected on the Edgar farm in Union County, which belongs to the Sinking Fund, and the commission can spend $10,000 on the site for necessary adjoining property. The building must be planned to have a capacity of at least 1,000 prisoners. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars is appropriated for the work. Provision is made for two acting managers, a warden, deputy warden, clerk, assistant clerk, steward, and physician. The warden is to hold office for five years. There are to be superintendents of different industrial departments, whose salaries are fixed at $1 200 a year each. Criminals may be employed in agricultural or mechanical labor as a means of support and reformation. The system of labor shall be that known as the "piece-price plan".

How to Help Them.

There exists in the minds of many persons in Plainfield and elsewhere considerable doubt as to the best way to help the poor man or woman who applies at the door for assistance. Some are tempted to give money, others food and clothing; but of late we are getting to realize how hurtful to the applicant indiscriminate giving is. Others again, fearing to encourage pauperism and fraud, refuse aid altogether, but not without a certain regret and dissatisfaction.

The plan offered by the Citizens' Organized Aid Association seems a happy solution of the difficulty, and we urge the charitable people of Plainfield to avail themselves of the opportunity of helping the poor effectually which is furnished by the "householders' tickets". It is designed that each family of the city and borough shall be provided with a packet of these tickets to be given to persons asking for help at the door or in the street. When the recipient of a ticket presents it at the office of the association, he will receive prompt and careful attention, and, if so desired, a report of his case will be returned to the householder who sent him. In this way, if general co-operation can be secured, vagrancy and imposture will be checked, while genuine need will be speedily and wisely relieved. The association should have the hearty support of Plainfield's enlightened citizens in this attempt to promote social order and individual welfare. Packets of tickets may be obtained free of charge at the office, corner of North and Park avenues.

Any tramp asking for food in the daytime may be sent with a ticket to the wood yard of E. H. Holmes, 208 Madison avenue, where enough work will be provided to enable him to earn a good meal.

Sparks on a Windy Night.

Policeman Robinson sent in a still alarm at 10:15 last evening, the fire being in the attic of Caleb Dickinson's house on East Fifth street.

Mr. Dickinson started a fire in the third story of his house, causing sparks to fly promiscuously, and giving the policeman the idea that the roof was afire. Chief Doane and No. 2's hose wagon went to the place, but were not needed.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

THE INCOME TAX.

Facts Which Everyone of Large Income Should Know.

Notwithstanding the fact that The Daily Press has twice (on Dec. 14 and 26, 1894), published details of the income tax bill, many citizens seem yet to be in the dark regarding its provisions or method of collection.

One of Plainfield's leading jurists has been frequently approached with regard to the carrying out of this enactment, and states that he finds some who are not yet aware the law was ever passed, more wholly ignorant of its requirements, and many who are of the opinion that they need do nothing until called upon by the proper official in the matter, and few or none who are aware that all who have an income of $3,500, from whatsoever cause, be it gain from business, commercial or professional, partnership, bonds, stocks, mortgages, real estate, rents, interest, farming operations, dividends, "and from all sources not above enumerated", are required by the law to make accounting of same to the collector of their district or his deputy, on or before February 10, 1895, the said accounting to be computed on the business of 1894, and papers being returnable on or before the first Monday in March. Blanks will be furnished by the collector or deputy to all who are thought to come within the limitations of the act, but, failure to receive blanks will not be considered any excuse for not making such returns, the act providing that in case of such failure it shall be the province of the collector to make return for such delinquent based upon the best information obtainable, and shall add these to the 50 per cent. of the tax thus found to be collectable. Further, should the return made by anyone be found to be false, the collector shall add 100 per cent. to the amount collectable, but, it is further provided that the party or parties affected by either of the above provisions of this act shall have redress by applying to the collector, and can further appeal from his decision to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington. Returns having been made the money is payable on or before July 1, failure to pay which will incur a penalty of 5 per cent. on the amount payable and an additional sum of 1 per cent. per month each month thereafter until paid.

Bills are payable to the Collector of Internal Revenue, who for this district is James F. Connelly, of Newark, J. M. Pruden of Elizabeth, deputy, and all moneys so collected will be receipted for by John H. Mason, Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington. Hon. Jacob Klotz is the newly appointed deputy of Somerset County.

Affidavit must be made before a notary as to the correctness of the account submitted.

MAKING FUN OF FANWOOD.

New York Grins at the Suburban Institution Where the Greengoods Game Was Worked.

(From The Sun.)

When for the one hundreth time Mr. Suburbanite pointed out to Mr. Young Husband, while at luncheon, the desirability of a home in Fanwood, N. J., be reserved as a climax for his argument the beauties and convenience of the Fanwood Club-house. Not only did the club possess one pool table and two bowling alleys, but Charles VanDeventer of Plainfield, N. J, was its caterer, and served luncheons in the dining room on the second floor. A parlor furnished with a carpet, one chair, and a table adjoined the dining room. In this room Suburbanite, Jr., was in the habit of meeting Miss Fanwood after a bowling match. Whether the House Committee thought one chair was enough for two or considered the young man no better than themselves, and concluded that he could sit on the table, as they did, was never explained satisfactorily to the caterer, who supplied only one chair for one room.

The club-house was built and is owned by the New Jersey Land Improvement Company. In turn it has been the home of the Plainfield, the Crescent Oval, and the Fanwood clubs. Each one has been divided by internal dissensions, and the history of the revolutions is as intricate as the annals of a Central American republic. None of the clubs was self-supporting for any length of time. After the 8:30 p. m. train leaves Fanwood station the commuter locks up the town and goes to bed. It was necessary, therefore, to leave the club-house to young Clarence VanDeventer, who kept the alleys in shape, set up the balls on the pool table, and on dull nights rented the ball-room to the young people of Plainfield for dances. He charged the club members a nominal rent for the alleys on Wednesday and Friday evenings. Wednesday was ladies night and the attendance was large. The young club manager became so popular that the house was spoken of as "Van's" in the same way that a New Yorker speaks of "Del's."

—The ventilators at Dreier's store, corner of Front street and Madison avenue, were left open last evening, and this morning both front windows were filled with snow. There was slight damage to stock.

THEIR EARLY STRUGGLES.

How Hardy New England Life Developed the Manhood of Two Great Americans.

In her lecture in the Friends Meeting-house Wednesday night Elizabeth Powell Bond told many interesting stories of the life of Wm. Lloyd Garrison and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Garrison's father, she said, died while he was yet at an early age, and, there being a scarcity of money in the family, the future abolitionist was apprenticed to a shoemaker, but, finding this to be too much of a strain on the boy's health, he was bound over for a time to a cabinet maker; finally, however, finding his natural avocation in a printing office he became expert in the craft that he used frequently in later life, setting his own editorials without the aid of copy. He always held his mother in most tender and reverent regard, giving up his position in Newburyport, Mass., to be present at her death in Maryland, a journey which in those days took three weeks to accomplish.

When the abolition of slavery first became prominent in this country, Garrison devoted himself heart and soul to the movement, bringing to bear on the subject all the vast energies of a mind stored with the knowledge acquired by years of study and research, aided by his wonderfully retentive memory. He soon became the recognized leader of the movement and it was through his efforts, both by speech and through the press, more perhaps than those of any one man, that the matter was finally brought to its crisis.

Differing from Garrison, whose knowledge was almost wholly acquired by reading and observation, Ralph Waldo Emerson received the most careful and thorough early training, being obliged to parse a sentence of grammar and repeat a passage of Scripture daily before his breakfast. Emerson's parents were not rich in this world's goods, and the young man paid his way through college by being a waiter, his genial and kindly disposition being his marked characteristic, even at that early age.

The ministry was always his ideal, in fact he fitted himself for the church, but his marked ability as a writer decided him to follow this as a lifework.

NEW MARKET NOTES.

(From The Dunellen Call.)

Foreclosure proceedings have been instituted by the executors of the Peter Wooden estate against Mr. Crane, for money which was advanced on his property when owned by the late Dr. Abel Titsworth. Some years before his death the doctor traded the land with a Mr. Neilson for property in Plainfield who in turn traded with Mr. Mackin of Newark for a Delaware farm. The mortgage was transferred from one owner to another, but Mr. Crane claims that Mr. Mackin warranted the property to be free and clear from all incumbrance when he sold it to him and upon this statement he deemed it unnecessary to have the title searched. The sale will take place March 19.

George Cummings formerly a police officer of New York, has sold his market garden farm on Rock avenue, near Dunellen, to a man from Algiers, Africa, and has purchased the large farm below New Market formerly owned by John T. Brewster. He will build two greenhouses each 100 feet long and will also have 125 hotbeds for growing vegetables and plants for market. A 12 horse-power boiler will supply steam heat to the greenhouses and dwelling, to which he will entertain his many friends in old-time Connecticut style next Winter. Mr. Cummings has placed H. A. Stowe as general manager of his place, which will be known as the Cold Spring Market Garden Farm.

Wipert Is Heard From.

A Somerville despatch says: "Daniel Wipert of Martinsville, supposed to be lost in the mountains after his narrow escape from death by being dragged into the Dead River by his runaway horse near Liberty Corners, is lying in the hospital at Elizabeth with his skull fractured. Wipert's long absence and his final appearance with severe injuries so far away from home cannot be accounted for by his friends at this place."

To Join the Parade.

One member was initiated in Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., last evening, and one proposition was received. The Council received an invitation to join in a large parade in Brooklyn Washington's Birthday. The attendance was good considering the severe storm.

Four Big Successes.

All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

SNOWBOUND.

Substantial Reminder of the Blizzard of March 12, 1888.

THE WISE COMMUTER STAYS HOME.

Jersey Central Train Service Badly Crippled—Street Cars Blockaded—School Children Have a Holiday, and Business Is at a Standstill.

The fine powdery snow that began to fall heavily late yesterday afternoon was whisked by the high winds of the night into hard-packed drifts which interfered greatly with the morning traffic. The snowfall of the night was heavy, and though the moon tried to struggle through about 10 the storm kept up all night and well on to noon today, when the sun after sundry efforts succeeded in showing himself to the snowbound earth. The high winds continue, however, and the snow that has fallen is blown about as though a blizzard was still raging.

The Jersey Central passenger trains managed to pull through nearly on time up to 2:08 a. m., but freights were way off schedule. Officials Ohausen, Peddie and Chief Despatcher Freck of the Central were at the Jersey Central Station at an early hour this morning, getting despatches from all parts of the system regarding the storm. Fortunately telegraphic communication was complete in all directions, all railroad wires being in good condition. The first train for Jersey City pulled out of Plainfield station at 6:23 packed to the doors and was nearly two hours reaching its destination. Much trouble was also experienced in crossing the ferry, fully forty-five minutes being consumed in the trip

The next eastbound train, which was equally well loaded, pulled out at 8:29 and made but little better time than its predecessor. The train due at 8:27 from Dunellen arrived at 9:05. Train No. 2 from Easton due at 8 p. m., puffed into the station with two snowclad engines in the lead, 35 minutes overdue.

The blue line flyer from Philadelphia, two hours overdue, was roofed over with a solid mass of frozen snow over six inches thick, and the engineer sitting on his box by the open window was encased ina glistening coat of mail from hat to waist, so hard that it had to broken from his clothing with a hammer. Trains No. 4 and No. 6 were stalled for over two hours at Somerville, and 5:04 from Philadelphia on the "P and R", due here at 10:08 was delayed at Belle Mead by three coal trains which stood on the switches unable to move because of the storm. They were finally dug out sufficiently to make a passage for the express, which arrived at 11:23.

The Newark and the Long Branch divisions are still blocked solid by the drifts.

The South Branch road from Flemington was opened sufficiently to allow the train due here at 7:58 to arrive at 11:08 Conductor Sam Johnson and Engineer Joe Case of this train report frequent drifts between Somerville and Flemington seven and eight feet high, and state that the snowplow worked all night in a fruitless endeavor to keep the tracks free. 514, the East-bound Philadelphia express due here at 6:05, with two big moguls in the van, pulled into sight at 11:16, having been instructed to cover the trip of No. 6 from the west due at 10:04, as well as its own.

516, the eastbound Philadelphia express, which also brings through Pullmans from the West, due at 2:14 a. m., was nine hours overdue. Local trains were made up at Somerville and Dunellen to take the place of express trains whenever possible, and were run necessarily with but little regard to schedule time. Up to noon no western mails arrived in the city. Deep drifts are reported from Fanwood cut and Bergen Point curve. The "stable" (round-house) at Jersey City was filled to the doors with engines unable to get out because of the frozen switches, and the only westbound train to reach this city up to noon was the paper train which left Jersey City at 7:30, arriving in this city at 9:05. The train covered the time of Nos. 1 3 and 5, had two engines attached, and even then was forced to leave the passenger coaches at Fanwood and plow its way through, with but one baggage and one mail car, returning later for the day coaches. The switches in the Jersey City yard were frozen and badly drifted, the flying snow filling them up almost as fast as the nearly exhausted yard hands, who had been working all night, could shovel them free. The levers in the switch tower, which in most cases operate several switches each, could hardly be moved, and the result was a practical suspension of all westbound travel until a late hour. It took the ferryboat "Plainfield", which left the New York side at 2:30 a. m., over an hour to make her Jersey City slip.

For over two hours this morning the waiting rooms, telegraph office, and baggage room were filled with a jolly crowd of would-be passengers, chatting, laughing, smoking or keeping Operators Schermerhorn and Stults busy sending messages to New York business houses announcing non arrivals because of the storm. "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good" said he of the luxuriant white beard, as with his hand still on the key he glanced up with his accustomed smile from a big pile of silver coins which lay in front of him, "but I hope it won't blow this way all day".

No. 501, the Blue line flyer, 9 00 from New York, arrived here at 12:16, the second train to reach here from Jersey City today; and 517 which followed at 1:17 reported the road in fair condition. No further delay was between here and New York, but the early afternoon trains are late.

Milkmen from all suburban points report the roads badly drifted. A. B. Wolfe of Plainfield avenue and city line plowed through drifts fully four feet high at 6 this morning to reach his patrons.

W. H. Dorlan broke the roads from Oak Tree at 3 this morning through five foot drifts. Milkman Barrett of Greenbrook says the drifts along the Dunellen road are worse than during the blizzard of '88, while Mr. Slight from Rahway found travel with a wagon so difficult that he was tempted many times to turn back, but the thought of many little children in Plainfield crying in vain for milk urged him on and he arrived here at 5:30 chilled to the bone from his eventful trip.

Mr. Rose of Netherwood farms is almost the one from the suburbs who found the roads passable, the high winds having cleared the roads nearly the entire distance.

Some of the Plainfield commuters rash enough to trust to the trains this morning had to walk nearly a mile in Commonipaw, the trains getting stalled at the switches.

The morning papers and mails being hours late, and few people venturing outdoors, Plainfield business is practically suspended today.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

When the bell rang at 8:20 this morning as the signal that school had commenced, there were sixteen boys, three girls and two teachers present, but new recruits kept straggling in until the total was raised to about forty.

Of course there were no regular classes, and all the students adjourned to Assembly Hall, where, until 10, when all were dismissed, most of the time was spent in singing. Miss Grace E. Overton of the Junior Class gave a thrilling recitation, "Jack", and afterwards read another selecton in response to he generous applause.

About twenty were present in the Grammar School classes in the High School building.

The Class of '96 held a class meeting yesterday afternoon. Miss Grace E. Overton gave a recitation in her usual excellent manner; after which several amusing games were played.

Charles Noble was elected class editor in the place of Miss Elizabeth Allis.

Miss Grace E. Overton was elected vice-president in the place of Miss Alice Thompson, who has left school. After the meeting, refreshments and a social time were enjoyed.

North Plainfield School.

About 100 pupils attended the North Plainfield school this morning, but all were dismissed, and no school was held.

The Electric Cars Blockaded.

The electric cars were run up to 2 this morning, and in making the last trip to the house the cars and the sweeper got caught near Plainfield avenue, where they remained the rest of the night.

Nothing more was done till this forenoon when the scraper, attached to Frank Hand's horses, was taken out and an attempt was made to clear the tracks. Little headway was made, however, as the heavily drifting snow covered the tracks almost as fast as they were cleared. An extra effort will be made this afternoon to open the road.

The Somerset street branch is blocked from end to end.

Broke a Shaft.

Jed Smalley was out this morning on his butcher wagon, and in turning from East Third street into Washington avenue the wagon struck a stone The horse was frightened, and started on a run. Mr. Smalley succeeded in holding the horse, but the shaft was broken, and it was with difficulty that he got back to his stables.

His Ear Frostbitten.

While Frank Manchester was clearing the snow off the walk in front of his home on Lafayette place, this morning, his ears were frozen. He suffers considerable pain.

—David Weaver of North Plainfield reports the weather as 4 degrees below Niblo's at 5:30 this morning, and the wind west by northwest three points west off Washington Rock.

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm and that she has also used it for lame back with great success. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The Royal Blue train due here last night at 9:48 did not arrive till 12.

—"Shaft No. 2" being stormbound and not able to reach Plainfield, Music Hall will be closed tonight.

—Many grocery and market clerks took their orders afoot this morning, travel for delivery wagons being very bad.

—U. B. Crane says you can keep warm this weather by putting on wool gloves, caps and sweaters. His store is 120 West Front street.

—Edwin Barbour's thrilling melodrama, "Land of the Midnight Sun", will be the attraction in Music Hall Monday evening, Feb. 11.

—At the Commercial Palace about 12 of the women clerks are absent today. A few customers called, which the small force of clerks were able to wait on.

—An electrician has been rearranging the system of electric bells in the High School; several old ones have been replaced, and the one in the yard was put in order.

—The piano which did such satisfactory service at the Y. M. C. A. entertainment Tuesday night was loaned by Vanderbeek & Sattels from their large and excellent stock.

—A wire of the North Plainfield fire-alarm system parted on Westervelt avenue last night at 11:30, sending in a blow. The break will be repaired by Manager Runyon of the Telephone Company.

—Garrett Dreier and his brother Harry dissolved partnership today. The latter will conduct the business. Garrett has connected himself with a large clothing business in New York and Brooklyn.

—The police deny that any man applied to them for lodging Wednesday night. The Mayor's orders are for them to accommodate any that apply, and if a person is found injured from the elements through their neglect they will be held responsible.

—An immense pressure of business was put on the telephone exchange this morning. The operators were kept at a steady rush from 6 a. m., every wire being constantly in use, with many waiting for a chance to talk to their New York offices or elsewhere.

—The Plainfield Tea and Grocery Company, under the experienced management of H. F. Williams, announce their opening for tomorrow. They give in their ad today a sample list of prices, which though lower than ordinary are to prevail at their store every day.

Forgot Her Order.

A young woman in North Plainfield went to a butcher store yesterday to purchase some bacon for supper. When she reached the store, her memory failed her, and she had some trouble in remembering what she wanted. She asked finally for a slice of bacon, and wanted it cut very thin.

Her purchase cost one cent, and she went home with her package. She had invited a friend to take supper with her, and her embarrassment was felt when the one slice of bacon was brought on the table. An explanation was made, and additional bacon was sent for.

Does Not Affect Plainfield.

Vice-Chancellor Bird yesterday gave an opinion in a Paterson case that there is no State law against the use of music in barrooms. Corporation Counsel Marsh told The Press that this would not affect Plainfield, as the Plainfield ordinance was based on the city charter, which gives exceptional powers. Therefore the Plainfield ordinance against barroom music stands.

Surgical Instrument Factory Burned.

The factory belonging to Charles Castell of Gillette was burned down Tuesday night. The manufacturing of surgical instruments was carried on in the mill, and it contained a large stock, which, together with the machinery, would bring the loss up to $3,500, insured for $1,500. Another insurance policy had run out but a short time ago.

PATRIOTIC NEW JERSEY.

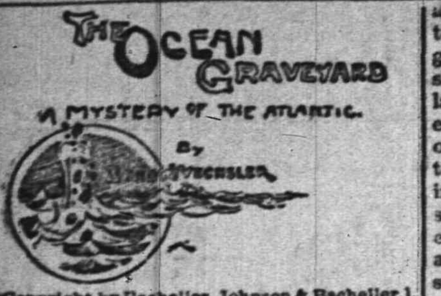
No Flag But the Stars and Stripes.

The bill which prevents the raising of any flag except the American flag over State building passed the Legislature yesterday unanimously.

Church Voices Wanted.

It is probable that a solo quartette will be needed for the choir which is being formed by Frank J. Smith, organist of the Crescent Avenue Church. This seems to be a good opportunity especially for sopranos and altos to make application. Mr. Smith will be at the church Saturday afternoon at 5.

O. W. O. Hardman, sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.



[Copyright by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

On reaching the bottom I stood for a minute or two looking around me. Which direction should I take? I struck out to the right and made a wide circle, but there was nothing unusual to be seen. The bed was hard, rising and dipping here and there, with loose rock lying about, and hardly any weeds. I paused again. I tried to remember in what direction the yacht lay, and moved, as I thought, away from her. I walked on and on, until it was time to ascend, and on getting to the surface I found I had wandered east of the vessel.

"Try further south this afternoon," said Capt. George, when I made my report. "By the way, what did those loose rocks look like?"

"Most of them were rough and jagged," I replied. "In some places they were thrown together in heaps, and in others only two or three were to be seen."

"Ah, I thought so! Don't despair, Lawrenceson, you're not far from the mark."

At three o'clock I made a second descent, a good deal further to the south. Soon after I touched the bottom, I found something that aroused my interest. It was an iron stanchion, evidently torn from a vessel which must have foundered close at hand. I went on, and then stood still.

What was it made me pause? I scarcely knew at first, but I had a sort of instinctive feeling that I was near some unseen danger. I moved on very cautiously, and halted a second time. With a strange sense of awe stealing over me, I became aware of a singular circumstance for which I could not account. There was a slight but peculiar tremor in the water around me, much like the vibration in the air after a distant peal of thunder. Once or twice, too, I fancied I felt a faint heaving in the ground under my feet.

It was some little time before I could bring myself to proceed. I walked first ahead, then to the left, then to the right, and back again towards the point from which I had started. I made no further discovery. Sometimes the tremulous motion in the water seemed to grow more distinct; frequently it died away until it was hardly perceptible. I was puzzled. I thought it better to go up, and see whether Capt. George could give any explanation of this singular occurrence.

"You were within reach of the rock," he said, when he had heard what I had to tell. "The next time you go down try and ascertain from what point that tremor proceeds. Follow in this direction; it will lead to your goal."

The next morning I set out again. I was now thoroughly bent upon pushing on with the search, no matter what risks might lie in the way. I had placed a buoy over the spot where I had descended the previous day, and told the men to keep rowing slowly to the south while I was under water, for that was the direction I was determined to take.

I still noticed that strange tremor I have described, but I soon grew accustomed to it, and walked boldly ahead. As I proceeded the disturbance increased; the ground seemed to sway under me; it was as if waves of motion were passing beneath my feet. Once or twice I felt half inclined to turn back; I was just a little bit—well, I remembered I had a wife and family depending upon me, and it looked like tempting Providence to proceed further. But I set my teeth hard and pressed on.

Presently, the ground began to shelve downwards. The commotion around me was now so great that at times I had some difficulty in keeping my feet. I was nearing the awful spot, then! I grew reckless. I cast aside every fear. If I succeeded in locating this rock, what an inestimable service I would render to mankind.

As I descended into a kind of hollow, I became aware of something like a dark wall rising before me. At first I thought it was the rock; but no; it was long, low, and regular in outline. I approached it; then I gave a sort of gasp inside my helmet. Good heavens! It was a ship!

A big steamer, too! What a sight she presented as she lay there on her side, rising and falling with the undulating motion of the ground! Her masts and funnels were gone, her decks torn up, and her bows battered in, almost down to the foremast. Around her, the place was littered with wreckage, cargo of every description, and the bones of her gallant crew. What was her name? I groped my way to the stern, held up my lamp, and read: "Ontario, Liverpool."

Scarcely had I left her, and moved further along the hollow, than another hull appeared in sight. A sailing ship this time! After that, almost every step I took brought me in view of a sunken vessel. They lay scattered around in all directions, and in all positions; some mere shells, others just beginning to break up, and a few which showed they had been afloat within the last year or two. The battered bows of each told the same terrible story. Ships of every size—and of almost every nation, I suppose—were huddled together in this awful valley of death. Here stood the remains of an old three-decker, and by her side lay the skeleton of a small vessel, not much bigger than a schooner. I turned away; I had seen enough!

At the opposite side from which I had approached, I noticed there was an upward tendency in the ground. I determined to proceed in that direction. After walking for a few minutes the ascent grew steeper. I made slow progress, and was nearly hurled back into the hollow more than once. I went down, and tore an iron bar from one of the vessels. Armed with this I renewed the attempt, and found it afforded me great assistance in the climb.

Steadying myself with the bar, and taking advantage of every piece of projecting rock which might aid my ascent, I crept up the steep slope. On I went, panting, and half stifled, not daring to pause lest I should be swept away by the strong current which seemed to beat down upon me from above. At last I reached a sort of narrow platform, and stood there, with my bar thrust into a crevice. I looked up. Above me rose a great, towering, irregular mass of solid rock!

I scarcely remember how I got back to the boat, for I was feeling terribly exhausted, and my head was dizzy. When I reached the deck of the yacht, it was only to drop into the nearest seat. I must have looked scared and white, for Capt. George hurried to my side.

"Whatever is the matter, Lawrenceson?" he said. "You look as if you had just escaped from the jaws of some sea monster."

"I have escaped from the jaws of death itself!" I replied.

"You found the rock?"

"I did."

He turned hastily, and gave an order to one of his men, who darted away towards the saloon. Presently the man came running up with a glass and a bottle of brandy.

"Here, swallow off this," said Capt. George, handing me a pretty stiff dram. "I can well imagine the sight was enough to give any man a bit of a shock."

After dinner he made me go through the whole story of my adventure that morning. He listened attentively, never interrupting me once.

"Just as I thought," he said, when I had finished.

He rose from his seat, and walked up and down in silence, as if pondering deeply over what he had just heard.

"Do you know, Lawrenceson," he said, suddenly halting before me, "I would like to go down and have a look at the place myself."

"Don't do it, Capt. George," I replied, hastily.

"Why not? It is not often a man gets a chance of witnessing a sight like that. The risk, if there is any, does not deter me; I shall ask for the loan of your diving dress this afternoon, and make the attempt."

I knew he was not the sort of man to be lightly turned from his purpose, so I had to give in. I told him he would have little difficulty in finding the spot, as the boatmen had stationed a buoy over it. I did not accompany him, for I was feeling a bit out of sorts, and laid down on a couch in the saloon. I was soon fast asleep.

An hour or two later I was aroused by a step on the cabin stairs. I looked up, and saw Capt. George entering the saloon. He went straight into his own cabin, without even glancing in my direction.

When he had changed the diving dress for his ordinary yachting suit, he came out into the saloon, and sat down.

"Well, Capt. George, what did you think of it?" I asked.

"It might well be called 'The Graveyard of the Ocean,'" he replied, solemnly.

There was silence for a minute or two; then he said:

"That three-decker must be the old Redoubtable, I fancy. She left Bermuda in the autumn of '63, and has long been returned as 'missing' at the admiralty."

After another pause I ventured to say:

"Now that we have found the rock, what's to be done next?"

"Blow it up," he answered, gravely.

I looked at him in amazement.

"I have brought out a quantity of tonite for this very purpose," he went on. "It is a rather powerful explosive, four times the strength of ordinary blasting powder, and equal to No. 1 dynamite. As the rock appears to be fissured, it will save us the trouble of boring. The cartridges must be encased in waterproof packing or india rubber bags. When you have laid the charges, we can retire to a distance, and explode them by means of an electric cable and battery. If we even succeed in splitting the rock, it would answer our purpose."

I entered heartily into the scheme for my whole thoughts were bent upon getting rid of the danger. Though I might have to encounter some risk in placing the charges, it was a small matter compared to the advantages that would follow if we were successful. For several days I was busily engaged in inserting the powerful cartridges, and, as I had some experience of this kind of work, I laid the charges so as to give the explosion the greatest effect possible.

At last the work was completed, the cable laid, and all in readiness for the final moment. It was a bright, sunny afternoon, I remember, not much like the general run of October days. I looked around the wide expanse of ocean. Not a sail was in sight.

The Wanderer had weighed anchor that morning, and had full steam up, ready to depart for home. Capt. George stood on deck, with the battery before him. He was about to attach the ends of the cable.

"Now," he said, when it was done, "prepare to see the last of this mysterious rock!"

I kept my eyes on the spot where the buoy still marked the position of the rock. Suddenly a column of water rose into the air, and we heard a dull report as of distant thunder. But we were little prepared for the full result. Almost instantly with the first report—so quickly, in fact, as to appear part of it—came the roar of a mighty detonation that shook the yacht from stem to stern. A vast body of water was flung to a height of several hundred feet, and carried with it huge masses of rock, some of which fell thirty or forty yards away. It was a grand, but an appalling sight! Never before had I witnessed such a mighty upheaval. The foundations of the sea seemed to have been torn up.

The commotion on the surrounding surface was so great that the Wanderer wsa lifted on an immense ridge of water, and carried away at such tremendous speed we had to hold on to the woodwork to keep ourselves from being dashed across the deck. When all was still again Capt. George turned to me, and said:

"We didn't count on the pent-up forces which lay beneath that rock. The explosion of the tonite must have given them vent, and they finished the work more completely than we ever could have done. I expect there is little left either of the rock itself or the vessels that lay around it. Well," he continued, gazing back towards the spot from which the Wanderer was fast gliding away under full steam, "I owe little to mankind, and, as yet, mankind has owed little to me. From henceforth, however, those who traverse this sea in future, will, without knowing it, be debtors to me for their safety."

[THE END.]

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

A GREAT AGREEMENT.

25,000 Physicians of One Mind.

Food for Strength First.—Medicine for Cure Second.—The Least Food that will give Most Nourishment, the Kind.

In this enlightened age, the old theory held by physicians—to get as much medicine in the least possible time into the system of a patient, even at the expense of stomach, blood, brains, nerves, and often, in the end, life itself—has been abandoned.

The old way was to "dose." If the patient had a tremendous constitution, he sometimes "pulled through;" if not, which was more often the case, that special disease was considered more dangerous, as it had claimed another for its own.

But this is all changed now. All prominent physicians agree on one subject, anyway. It is this—build the patient up first, give him new blood and strength, add flesh to his bones. He's then ready to receive the benefit of proper medical treatment.

To do this effectually, that must be given which will, in the least quantity, produce the greatest amount of vitality,—not a stimulant which quickly reacts disastrously, but a genuine food, a muscle, bone, and blood maker. Such a food was long sought for, and at last discovered in that original and only raw food extract—Bovinine.

By the use of this wonderful life-generating preparation, every organ of the body becoming strengthened by nourishment, naturally begins to perform its ordinary functions, and at once the patient is on the road to recovery.

It is this result, obtained in hundreds of cases where Bovinine has been used, that has caused its indorsement by 25,000 prominent physicians in America.

In addition, thousands who have been benefited can vouch for the wonderful results obtained by the use of Bovinine, for invalids, the old, convalescents, the over-worked, or, in fact, all who have found it necessary to maintain strength, flesh, and vigor.

A WOMAN MISER.

PECULIAR CHARACTERISTICS OF HETTY GREEN, MILLIONAIRE.

Questionable Methods of a Crafty Woman. Accusal of Forgery Nearly 30 Years Ago Recalled By Suits Now in the Courts.

That remarkable character, Mrs. Hetty Green, the richest woman in America, whose closeness and eccentric habits of life most readers are familiar with, is about to figure in the court once more in a suit in which the most remarkable charges will be made on either side.

In Mrs. Green's suit against Henry A. Barling, the sole surviving executor of her father's will, for an accounting has already been going on for three years. Very recently Mrs. Green, in addition to her charges that, through the executor, many hundreds of thousands of dollars have been withheld from her, she also made the startling accusation that both her father, Edward Mott Robinson, and her aunt, Sylvia Ann Howland was murdered.

From these two relative who died nearly thirty-three years ago, Mrs. Green received about $10,000,000, which little nest egg she has rolled up like a snowball until her present fortune of $65,000,000 has been amassed.

If the affidavits which she has collected purporting to show that her father and her aunt was foully dealt with, are used in the coming trial, there is every likehood that the old charge of forgery against Hetty Green, which came so near being proved 30 years ago, will be revived.

The N.Y. World says:

The Howland will case is famous in court annals. There never was another case like it before or since. Hetty Green was the contestant. Three years after the death of her aunt, Sylvia Ann Howland, she came to the United States Circuit Court in Massachusetts with a will which she wanted substituted for the one already probated. The will was in Hetty Green's own handwriting, and the most famous experts of the day declared under oath not only their belief, but their almost positive assurance, that the two signatures which it contained were not made by the aunt, but were traced by Hetty Green herself over an original signature of Sylvia Ann Howland.

After a litigation in which some of the most famous lawyers in the country were engaged, and the expense of which amounted to $172,000 the case was dismissed in the lower court on a technicality.

While an appeal was being made to the Supreme Court of the United States, a private settlement was reached among the litigants, and as the whole matter was thus taken out of court, the charge of forgery could not be formally proved against Mrs. Green, who at the time was Miss Hetty Robinson.

The public knows that Hetty Green is miserly, tricky, ungrammatically in her speech, shabby in the extreme as to her dress and even untidy in her personal habits. They know that she has lived in hall bedrooms in cheap boarding houses, and eaten her meals in the kitchen with the servants from choice. They know that she walks daily across the Brooklyn Bridge to save three cents fare. She is not a woman of refinement, of culture, or of polish, but—and this a fact about Mrs. Green which is not generally realized—her family is one of the oldest and best in this country.

She is a Howland of New Bedford, belonging on her mother's side to the "Round Hill Howlands," so called from a certain locality in New Bedford, where the family has resided continuously for nearly three centuries. The old maritime city of New Bedford was founded by her ancestor, John Howland, the Puritan, who christened it after Bedford in England, his family home.

Hetty Green has the greatest estate today ever controlled by an individual woman, with the exception of Baroness Coutts. Hetty Green is worth $65,000,000 and no one has yet succeeded in compelling her to pay her taxes.

Everything Except Preaching is Illegal and the Law is Enforced Rigidly.

"Toronto is probably the tightest tied-up town on this continent on Sundays," said a traveller, as he called attention to the news that a Toronto newspaper publisher had been fined for printing an edition of his paper to give the news of a big Saturday night fire.

"Connecticut's old blue laws are mild compared with the modern ordinances of the second city in Canada. Every kind of business except preaching, must suspend absolutely on Sunday, and about the only legal thing a citizen can do is to go to church, and he must be careful to go there in legal fashion.

"Street cars, omnibuses, cabs, and all public conveyances stop running Sundays, and it is against the law to hire a rig at a livery stable. The only way to get around is to walk, and the people wearily plod out to the city's beautiful park and are so tired when they get there they are unable to walk about in it and appreciate its attractions. I don't know if its against the law for a man to use his own carriage on the streets Sundays, but I don't remember seeing any vehicles about during many Sundays I have been there. Everybody walks. Maybe its against the law to run; I would not be surprised.

"The saloons, of course, are closed tight and totally. They close up early Saturday night—about 8 o'clock, I believe, in order to remove temptation from the path of the workingman, just in possession of his wages—and remain closed until Monday morning. There are no side doors. All the stores are closed, too, and it is impossible to buy a cigar or a stick of candy on Sundays.

"Sunday newspapers, of course, are not allowed. Nor alone this, but it is against the law to buy or sell a copy of Saturday night's paper on Sunday. A great many American newspapers are subscribed for in Toronto, but none are delivered on Sundays, and you get two newspapers on Monday morning. Maybe Toronto's Sunday closing laws are no stricter than those of some cities this side the line, but they are rigidly enforced, and Toronto is the driest and dullest town on this continent on Sunday."

HE GOT HIS PAY.

An Odd Coincidence That Occurred Between Borrower and Lender.

"Here is one of the odd coincidences of life," said my friend Williams. "Some time ago an acquaintance came to me and told me that he was in great need of $15, and at considerable trouble to myself I let him have it. He promised to return it in a few days.

"When three weeks had elapsed I mentioned the matter to him, casually, and he was profusely apologetic—would send it to me the following day, sure. It did not come, though, nor did I get any message from him. About two weeks after that I met him. He declared it was a shame I hadn't got my money, and vowed he wouldn't let another day pass without paying me.

"It went along, then, for a week or ten days, and, as my expenses were very heavy, I was considerably embarrassed, and needed the money badly. One night when I was feeling particularly discouraged, I sat down and wrote him a note. I said:

"'My dear sir—About six weeks ago I loaned you $15. Lest the paying it should occasion you any inconvenience, allow me to hereby make you a present of the money.'

"That will bring it if anything will, thought I. Judge of my surprise when by the next morning's mail I received a letter from the man, enclosing the $15. By the same mail exactly he must have received mine making him a present of it, and by the dates, both letters were evidently written at about the same hour."

NORTHERN INDUSTRIES GO SOUTH.

New England May Lose Its Prestige for Various Reasons.

A Boston journal publishes an interview with Mr. T. Jefferson Coolidge, the treasurer of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, on the subject of the removal of mills from New England to the South. Labor at the South, he declares, is lower than in the North, the mills are nearer the cottonfields, and there is a large saving in freight charges. Again, Southern railroads take cotton as fifth-class freight, while Northern ones take it as second and third class. Then, coal in New England costs $4.50 a ton, while in the South it does not cost more than $1.50.

It appears to be the opinion of Mr. Coolidge that, for the reasons which he gives, the number of Southern mills will continue to increase. He furnishes also another reason to which very little attention has been paid so far, but which certainly deserves a prominent place as one of the most important considerations in determining the course of our manufactures. Employers in the South are not hampered by the restrictions established by trade unions. They are not menaced by strikes. They are not interfered with by legislation advocated or secured by labor agitators; and the spectacle of the walking delegate or the strike manager is not constantly present before their eyes. Commercial business is permitted in Southern States to run in the ordinary channels established by the law of supply and demand; and many New England manufacturers, harassed by the artificial conditions established by some New England Legislatures, are betaking themselves to the South. Thus there has been of late a very marked increase in the number of mills and factories in that quarter.

Fire-horse Flash's Joke.

A horse in the Marion, Ind., Fire Department displayed rare intelligence this week. Flash is a sorrel of powerful build and full of playful tricks. Tuesday Flash grew tired of standing in his stall, and by some means opened the doors, releasing himself and mate. He then went to the fire-alarm switch board, and with his mouth turned the key, sounding the alarm. Both horses then backed under the harness, ready for the usual run. The firemen were about to drive out when the trick was discovered. The horses looked at each other in a knowing way, evidently enjoying the joke they had perpetrated on the astonished firemen.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

What Henry Clay Did With His Razor.

James Woddel of Jackson, Washington County, N. Y., exhibited a razor in an excellent state of preservation which was owned by Henry Clay about 1838. The instrument shows the name of its former owner finely engraved on the handle. It was given by the master to his slave, and descended to its present owner.—Troy Press.

Dr. Lighthill begs leave to give notice that he has removed to

AN ALMOST MIRACULOUS CURE.

The Statement of Mr. Edward Teel, Jr., of Dunellen, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

From a sense of duty I desire to call public attention to the almost miraculous cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in the case of my wife. For eleven years she had been afflicted with piles of an unusual severe and distressing character. She suffered every day of her life the most intense pain, attended with frequent and profuse hemorrhage. This state of things debilitated her entire system until she became a perfect wreck of her former self.

We made every effort to obtain a cure but they all resulted in bitter disappointment, although a number of physicians of excellent reputations for skill in that direction had treated her case. She grew worse and worse all the time, the pain became perfectly unbearable and I felt she could not bear the strain of her condition much longer. In this extremity, a friend of mine, Mr. W. R. Dilts, a resident of Roselle, N. J., a passenger conductor on the New Jersey Central told me that he had been similarly affected, and had been permanently cured by Dr. Lighthill, after other medical skill had failed. He assured me that the doctor would cure my wife, no matter how severe her case may be, and his prediction proved perfectly correct. In spite of her desperate condition, Dr. Lighthill, I am glad to say, has effected a complete and perfect cure in her case, and has given her new life.

Since the cure has been effected she has gained in health and strength and is so improved in appearance that her friends scarcely recognize her. They all consider her cure as almost miraculous, and Dr. Lighthill's praise is heard on every side Our gratitude to Dr. Lighthill is unbounded and we only hope that other sufferers may be benefited by this publication.

EDWARD TEEL, JR.

A Flattering Testimonial from Colonel John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE, Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing with which I was afflicted.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly; they were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill of No. 132 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOMAS CALLAHAN, 214 Richmond street.

A Card From Mr. T. R. VanZandt, of Nos. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks, but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr J. V. E. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose flattering testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

Storming of the "Swamp Angel."

Feb. 8 is the anniversary of Burnside's capture of Roanoke island in 1862. Landing while the gunboats shelled the bluffs and woods, the troops found the solitary road across the island blocked by a little fortress mounting three guns. The road led though a wooded swamp almost impassable for infantry, and the ground in front of the redoubt had been transformed by heavy rains into a sea of mud.

The brigades of Foster and Reno chased the graycoats along the road as far as the swamp, where the roadbed was elevated to form a causeway through the dense morass. Wherever the ground appeared solid enough for a foothold the surface had been barricaded with fallen trees. On the right and left of the battery there were long log and earth parapets sheltering 2,000 soldiers, so that the cannon, with their rifle re-enforcements, easily turned the advance of Reno's and Foster's men into a bloody march. Nothing daunted, however, they went on. Finally, Reno put three of his regiments to the charge on the right, Foster rushing his troops in on the left. There was no halting because of the enemy's bullets; only for miry pitfalls. The last Union regiment to come up was Hawkins' zouaves (Ninth New York). Stealing through the woods, ankle deep in mire like all the rest, the red capped line dashed by the left flank into the road and giving a wild cheer, which was started by Major Kimball "on his own hook," the zouaves stormed the sally port, bayonet in hand. Three Union battleflags arose above the parapet about the same moment.

Roanoke lacked not a hero among heroes. Colonel de Monteil of the D'Epinenil zouaves, a regiment not engaged, fought in other ranks as a private. When Hawkins' men leaped into the road and started on the run for the sallyport, he was among the foremost. Cheering on his comrades, he was a shining target and soon went down, shot through the temple, the only one of the party killed in that charge.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

Important changes in the time-table of the Plainfield mails are made today. The official list is published in another column of this paper.

A bill introduced in the Assembly by Mr. Codding of Westfield proposes that public school pupils shall be regularly drilled and instructed in military tactics and be enrolled in a military body to be called the American Guards. It is in line with a movement that is being advocated in many States, but the Newark News opines that it is one that even those well disposed toward it might desire to see begun on a smaller and experimental scale.

A most excellent bill, and one which Congress ought to pass, is Senate bill 2523. It in no way interferes or infringes upon the constitutional prerogative of the President of the United States in relation to the power of appointment and discharge. The bill is now in the hands of the Hon. Postmaster-General for his approval, which is confidently expected as it is identical with his famous order No. 235, dated June 28, 1894, and is in line with the policy he has pursued from the beginning, so aptly expressed by President Cleveland—"A public office is a public trust"—a sentiment destined to live and flourish in the hearts of the people; while that of President Jackson, "To the victor belong the spoils," will be dishonored and forgotten.

The bill reads as follows:

"That on and after the passage of this act no letter carrier, postoffice clerk, or railway postal clerk shall be removed or requested to resign (except when arrested for a crime, when suspension or removal may take place at once in the discretion of the Postmaster General) until after written charges shall have been preferred against him, and after the charges shall have been examined into by the Postoffice Department upon such reasonable notice to the person charged and in such manner of examination as the regulations of the Postoffice Department may prescribe; but letter carriers, postoffice clerks, or railway postal clerks may be suspended by the Postmaster-General pending the examination herein provided for."

The proposed legislation is in the direction of a just and wholesome change, for no substantial benefit to the service or to any party in power can be subserved by subjecting the class of employes referred to to the political whims of the head of the Department. Their duties are clearly non-political, they should have none other than non-partisan recognition, there should be no considerations of party favoritism in their appointment. The Washington Post well says that their removal for political reasons should only be in cases where they render themselves amenable to penalty by offensive partisanship on their own part; and of whatever dereliction they may be accused, they should assuredly have fair opportunity of self-defense.

—In spite of the raging storm, two women visited the store of the Two Vans about 9:30 this morning to make needed purchases. The senior Van and one clerk were the only attendants able to weather the storm up to that time.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Dr. G. H. Clark is able to be about the house.

Charles Davis of North avenue is out again after his recent illness.

Mrs. Wilbur Fiske of Arlington avenue gives a tea tomorrow afternoon.

Edward S. Weaver of West Second street is confined to his home by illness.

Mrs. Seeley Edsall and Mrs. John L. Edsall are confined to their homes by illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Adams of East Sixth street gave a dinner party last evening.

The mother of Chief Grant's wife, Mrs. Cornelius Stults of Jersey City Heights, is very ill.

Miss Mabel Wilson of Putnam & DeGraw's was detained at home today by the storm.

Mr. and Mrs. Groendyke left town for New York today, to spend the rest of the Winter there.

Mrs. R. H. Trewin is very ill at the home of her father, G. R. Rockafellow of West Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Banks give their bridal homecoming reception in Hotel Netherland today.

Ebenezer Hoyt, uncle of Dr. Rushmore, died this morning at the home of Dr. Rushmore's mother, where he was visiting.

Mr. Travell, teacher of the Senior class of the High School, is still confined to his home with a return of the grip. His place was temporarily filled by Miss Sherwin.

Rev. Dr. Studdiford of Trenton and Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes of Plainfield will exchange pulpits Sunday. Dr. Studdiford will be the guest of his cousin, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen.

J. M. Pickell of New York, who has many friends in Plainfield, has accepted a position in the Plainfield Tea and Grocery Company's store, 106 East Front street, and has leased a flat in Manning's Block, West Front street, which he and his family will occupy next week.

BY THE WAY.

—As this issue goes to press, the despatches bring no news from the overdue ocean steamships.

—The Y. M. C. A. meetng Sunday will be specially devoted to the coming convention. W. D. Murray will lead.

—The awning in front of J. H. Tier & Son's candy store on Park avenue was blown down during the gale last night.

—George Conover's van, with a load of Mr. Sutton's furniture from Brooklyn for Plainfield, is stormstalled in Elizabeth.

—Frank Day, old-timer though he is, seldom had a more unpleasant drive than while coming from Bound Brook yesterday afternoon. On arriving here his eyelids were frozen and he was numb from the cold.

—F. L. C. Martin and a party of friends braved last evening's storm to attend a dance in Dunellen. They were driven up by Tom Stevens in Adam Blair's wagonette, and returning, at 4 a. m., suffered much from the cold and wind, Stevens being almost unable to climb down from his seat on arriving at the stable. Capt. Hand was to take the party up but changed his mind because of the storm.

The Plainfield Boys in Trenton.

Past-Commander William C. Smith of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, left the Encampment at Trenton last night at 5:40 to come home and attend the business meeting of the Reform Club. He arrived here about 7:30. He says the Plainfield delegation is getting along all right. Capt. Wm. Hand returned last night from Trenton. Mr. Smith was not able to go back to Trenton as he had anticipated, on account of the inefficient train service.

Death of R. W. Rice.

Robert W. Rice, head of the North Plainfield firm of R. W. Rice & Co., died last night in Philadelphia of Bright's disease and heart trouble. Mrs. Rice was with him. He leaves one son.

—The officers of Senate lodge K. H. were installed last evening.

—As usual during severe storms Chief Doane has taken extra precautions in case of fire. The horses will be doubled up on all hose wagons, and a team of four is in readiness to pull the heavy steamer if required.

CARING FOR THE POOR

Nearly 300 Orders for Coal Given to the Needy.

Newark's Unemployed in a Pitiable Condition—Cold Weather Hard on Those Who Feel the Pinch of Poverty as Well as the Biting Winds Help for the Unfortunate.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 8.—The poor of this city have, indeed, been having a hard time of it since the mercury started to manoeuvre around the zero point. It was during the past few days that the resources of the city's poor and alms department and the various socities whose work is given to charity have been taxed to their capacity in affording relief.

Overseer of the Poor Baldwin had until Feb. 1, last, 1,232 names on his list, and for the six days of this month the new applicants for relief averaged ten each day. Each and every one of these applicants is entitled to bread and coal tickets, and the clerks have been busy since Monday in distributing the pasteboards to worthy applicants. Coal, especially, is in great demand, and the month's supply of one-quarter of a ton to each family is almost all distributed at the present time. Yesterday alone the number of coal orders given out was 292. The overseer says that Monday and Tuesday were just as busy days as the last, so it would seem that the poor folks are doing all they can to keep the bitter cold out of their humble abodes. Bread tickets are also given out in large numbers.

At the office of the bureau of associated charities Superintendent Smith said the cold snap had not driven many people to his society, as the number of applicants or transient customers had not been materially increased during the past few days. A different tale is told by Superintendent Kimball of the Children's Aid society. It is at the little antiquated building of this society, on Market street, that newsboys and street urchins are wont to congregate. Mr. Kimball says his permanent lodgers have not increased of late, but in the early part of the past few nights the rooms were crowded with youngsters, who were glad to escape the piercing wintry blasts, which made outdoors so unbearable.

At Police Headquarters.

The lodgers' rooms at police headquarters have also been more than usually well patronized during the past two or three nights. As many as 200 men have been crowded into the two well heated, zinc floored, twenty-two feet square rooms on the top floor of the William streeet building.

Another really good, practical charitable work for the benefit of the poor is being carried on at Bethel mission, located at the head of the city dock. Here each day over one hundred men are fed with soup and bread. The meal is provided by the Christian Endeavor society of the Park Presbyterian church and is distributed under the direction of Duncan Forbes, who presides over the mission. It was started on Monday last and will be continued for two weeks, probably longer, if any society can be found to take up the work where the Park church people will leave off.

A reporter visited the mission as the daily rations were being distributed. The time set for the meal is 1 o'clock, but long before that time an unusual crowd of men could be seen loitering around the bridges and corners in the vicinity, cracking their heels together and clapping their hands in their efforts to keep the blood circulating. All eyes seemed turned toward the humble little building over which the sign "Bethel Mission" can be seen. A look of wistful expectancy was noticed beneath the rough countenances of the uncouth and rugged characters.

Waiting for Him.

Presently a pleasant-faced, well-dressed man approached the building and disappeared within. This was Mr. Forbes. The crowd evidently knew him, for with one impulse every one of the loiterers was moving toward that building.

"We won't be late to-day," remarked one to another as the pair passed the reporter. Soon a crowd of perhaps fifty surrounded the door and shivered, waiting for admission. When the proper time arrived the pleasant-faced man again appeared and, opening the door, he greeted the throng with a smile and bade them enter. The first to get inside was a forlorn-looking ragged little urchin, whose patched clothes did not shield his knees from exposure. He carried a huge basket that had seen better days and a tin pail. He was followed by another and another of the same stamp of youngsters, each carrying baskets and pails, and a few moments later the trio emerged from a side door, their baskets containing bread, and steam escaping from the pails showed that they had been filled with hot soup. The lads hrurried off in different directions, apparently to their homes.

In the meantime the seats within Bethel mission were being rapidly filled by men of all sizes, ages and color, who had whetted their appetites for what was to be in many cases the first meal of the day. While the stream of humanity was pouring in two men were busily engaged in a rear room filling pint mugs with hot soup, the odor of which was extremely appetizing in itself. On a side table bread was stacked up in high piles, and it looked enough to feed a small army.

Died at Monte Carlo.

Medina, N. Y., Feb. 8.—News has been received here of the death at Monte Carlo of S. Manville Burroughs, of the big wholesale drug firm of Burroughs, Welcome & Co., of London, England. Mr. Burroughs was a native of Medina and lived here until the death of his father a few years ago when he went to England and built up a prosperous business throughout that country and her colonels.

Arthur and the Southern Pacific.

San Francisco, Feb. 8.—Chief Arthur and the grievance committee of engineers met the Southern Pacific railroad officials yesterday but failed to arrive at any settlement. It is believed, however, that there will be no strike.

CAPT. ROBT. COOK, Camden, N. J., says:

KILLED BY THE TROLLEY.

While Going at the Usual Terrific Rate it Kills a Boy.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 8.—Henry Havemeyer, aged 18 years, was instantly kiled last night by being run into by a trolley car of the Myrtle avenue line, at Sumner and Myrtle avenues. The car was in charge of Motorman Edword P. Mahoney and Conductor Christopher H. Crowell. Both men were arrested and locked up the Thirteenth Precinct station house charged with homicide. Havermeyer was driving a coal cart along the Sumner avenue track when the collision occurred. From spectators who witnessed the collision it is said that the car was going at a terrific rate of speed. Havemeyer had got half way across the Myrtle avenue track when a car on that line came along and struck his cart in the centre. The force of the collision overturned his cart, throwing him from the seat and he rolled under the wheels of the car. Before the brake could be applied the car passed over his body, killing him instantly. The body was taken to an undertaking establisament and Coroner Kene notified.

Marion Canfield, 34 years old, of Chicago, Ill., a non-union motorman in charge of trolley car 3,338 of the Cross-town line, this afternoon collided with a coal cart at Columbia street, near Harrison. Canfield was intoxicated. He was taken to the Third Precinct station house, where on being searched a 44-calibre revolver, fully loaded, was found strapped to a belt around his waist. The driver of the cart escaped injury. Canfield will havea hearing in the Butler street police court to-day.

Died Under a Stroke of Paralysis on a Visit to a Relative.

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 8.—Jefferson Adams, 79 years of age, who was enleavoring to make his way from Carnile, Me., to Toledo, O., where he has a brother-in-law, suffered a stroke of paralysis just as he stepped into the police station to ask for lodging and assistance. The old man fell unconscious and was taken to the hospital. In his pockets were found a testament and papers, including recommendations from prominent citizens of Portland, Bangor and Carmile, Me. The Y. M. C. A. at Carmile had furnished Adams transportation to Portland. Up to 1891 Adams was engaged in the hardware and lumber business in Carmile. He and his partner were forced to assign because Adams' brother-in-law failed and Adams was on his paper. He lost $5,000 and was left penniless.

During the same year Adams' wife and child were killed in a railroad accident at Carmile.

Adams is a member of the Patriotic Order Sons of America, Sons of Temperance and American Sons of Liberty and the Presbyterian church.

FOUGHT LIKE TIGERS.

Dr. Riegel Carried a Revolver, but Cried for Mercy.

Belvidere, Feb. 8.—In the Riegel-Bibler trial here yesterday Dr. Riegel gave his version of the duel with Bibler, alleging that the latter opened fire on him and he acted in self-defense. The doctor's account of the affair was thrilling. He exhibited his clothing that was punctured by bullets, and described what he called his hairbreadth escape from death.

When the defense opened Bibler, the prisoner, was placed on the stand. His manner was rather pleasing. He told of the stormy meeting at Beers' and of the walk on the railroad track and the duel which followed. He said he saw the doctor feeling in his pocket for his revolver, and at once drew his and began firing. After both had emptied their pistols they clinched and fought like tigers, the doctor getting the worst of the fight and crying for mercy. The case will go to the jury to-day.

Died at His Door.

Montpelier, Vt., Feb. 8.—Nelson Pratt, aged 55, was found dead in his dooryard, two miles out from Worcester, thisfi morning, with arms and legs frozen. He left a store in Worcester last night to walk home. When his wife looked out this morning she saw his body lying in a snow bank, the hands pressed over his heart. It was a bitter cold night, and it is supposed that his exertion brought on an attack of heart difficulty just as he entered the yard which caused death. He leaves a wife and one child.

Killed His Brother and Himself.

New York, Feb. 8.—Two young men, believed to be the brothers Don Ernesto and Enrique Marques, from Guatemala, were shot and almost instantly killed last night in a private dining room attached to the saloon and restaurant of Mrs. John H. Meyers, at 517 Lexington avenue. It is supposed by the police that Don Ernesto, who is thirty-six years of age, shot and killed his brother Enrique, 26 years of age, and then turned the weapon upon himself.

Close Their Mines.

Columbus, O., Feb. 8.—A special to the Post Press from McArthur, O., says: "The Maderia Coal Company, of Chillicothe, have closed their mines at Elko, this county, on account of the low price paid for coal. For several days there has been a war waged by the operators in the Jackson district, and the result is that coal is selling in the markets for less than it costs to mine it."

An Inventor Missing.

Boston, Feb. 8.—John M. Parker, an inventor of Pawtucket, R. I., is missing, not having been seen by his friends since he left his home, January 10, on his way to Portland, Me. He was interested in a spool machine, and intended to visit Locke's mills, Maine, to look after his interest in his patents.

FORMAL OPENING OF OUR

Grocery Department!

SATURDAY, FEB. 9.

A few plain remarks in connection with this new departure we think is opportune.

A few months ago I rented and fitted up at a heavy expense my present elegant and spacious stores, with the intention of giving Plainfield a department store second to none in the State.

As I have progressed from one improvement to another, I find that if I fulfill my plan, I must, of necessity, add a first class Grocery Department, in order to compete with New York and Brooklyn department stores, as many of my patrons are buying these goods there, and desire me to furnish them with their Groceries together with their Dry Goods, Housefurnishings, etc.

I am very much surprised as I have talked to people in regard to this movements, to find that there is such a large proportion of this trade going to New York department stores, and I shall make a strong effort to induce it to remain at home—where it belongs.

I shall do all I can to counteract the too prevalent idea abroad that Plainfield is an expensive place to live in on account of the high prices on articles of food, as real estate agents often say they are obliged to meet this objection when trying to sell or rent houses to New York and Brooklyn people.

We shall, therefore, sell our goods, which will always be of the best quality to be had, at what may be known as cut prices

TWO WARSHIPS SUNK

The Chinese Lose Their Largest Vessels.

Storms and Cold Weather Block the Opposing Forces — Bombarding Li-Kunk from Outside the Bay—China Increasing Her Forces Near Yeng Kow.

London, Feb. 8.— The correspondent of the Central News at Wei-Hai-Wei telegraphs, under date of Feb. 7, that the Chinese ironclads Chen-Yeun and Ting-Yeun have been sunk.

Great loss of life is feared as both vessels were heavily manned.

They were the most powerful ships belonging to an Asiatic power. Each had a displacement of 7,430 tons and 5,200 horse-power. They had belted 14-inch steel compound armor and heavily armored barbettes. The primary battery of each consisted of four 30½ centimetre Krupp rifles, two 15-centimetre rifles and four one-ton guns.

The Ting was launched in 1881, the Chen the next year. They were fourteen-and-a-half-knot ships, with dimensions as follows: Length, 308 feet 6 inches; breadth, 20 feet; beam, 59 feet.

Both vessels were engaged in the great battle at the mouth of the Yalu river early in the war, when so many Chinese ships were sunk, but escaped with slight injuries.

Blocked by Ice.

A dispatch from Tokio says the ministry of marine has received reports that on account of violent storms and extreme cold, the naval operations at Wei-Hai Wei heve been slow. From Jan. 31 until Feb. 3, the squadron maintained a heavy bombardment upon the forts at Zhih and Eastern Li-Kunk from outside the bay. The warships Ting-Yuen and Lai-Yuen, with two gunboats, assisted in the defense of the forts, keeping up the fight each day until dark.

Latterly the firing from the Zhih fort became greatly diminished. The principal Japanese squadron has been waiting outside the bay expecting the Chinese fleet would either engage the Japanese ships or be destroyed by Admiral Ting to prevent them from falling into the hands of the Japanese.

Soldiers retreating from Wei-Hai-Wei continue to arrive at Che-Foo.

The correspondent from Shanghai says:

"The Ting-Yuen and Chen-Yuen were struck with torpedoes in three fathoms of water.

"The peace envoys have now been fully empowered to treat and will remain in Japan. Both countries are anxious to conclude the war, but Japan does not mean to leave China a loop-hole for backing out."

CONSCIENCE STRICKEN.

The Pension Bureau Reaps the Reward of Religion.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The bureau of pensions has received a letter from Augustus Bannigan, of Paterson, N. J., enclosing a check for $419 which he returns as pension money received by him, to which he says he is not entitled.

In his letter Mr. Bannigan says that he was converted by the Salvation Army and since conversion desired to make amends to the pension bureau. He had his pension discontinued last fall and since then saved this amount, which he states is about what he had drawn. The check has not yet been cashed and the contribution will be forwarded to the office of the treasurer of the United States.

He Felt the Depression.

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 8.—Edwin M. Hall, carpet dealer here for six years, and for twelve years of the leading dry goods firm of Marsh & Hall, has surrendered to business stress. Inventory not yet made. He has made no assignment but five chattel mortgages aggregating some $12,000 were filed yesterday by the bank at which he did business and by those to whom he is indebted for cash loans. His surrender is a startling surprise as he ranked the brightest, most popular and successful young merchant here. He has returned large shipments of goods which had been sent to him. His indebtedness for goods is entirely in New York. Universal sympathy accompanies his failure because of his high business standing and personal popularity.

Could Not Confuse Debs.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—The cross-examination of Mr. Debs occupied the entire afternoon session In a deliberate manner he narrated the part he took in the proceedings of the American Railway union convention and during the continuance of the strike until the members of the American Railway union were discharged from the employ of the Pullman company, when he ordered a boycott of the Pullman cars. All efforts of the government counsel to confuse the witness were without avail, he carefully considering each question put to him before answering. He will resume his testimony to-day.

Perished from Cold.

Hastings, Neb., Feb. 8.—Reports reached here last night that a family in this county had perished from cold. Their names could not be learned. According to the report, the father had gone to the village of Juniata for provisions, but was overtaken by the blizzard and froze to death and his family perished during his absence. Coroner Irwin said that he had received no official notice to hold an inquest. The weather is so bitterly cold that an investigation has been delayed.

On Trial for Murder.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 8.—Mrs. Nellie W. Pope was arraigned in police court here on a charge of murdering her husband, Dr. Horace E. Pope. She pleaded not guilty and her examination was set for Feb. 21. Wm. Brusseau, her paramour, will be arraigned to-day or to-morrow.

He Sympathizes.

New York, Feb. 8.—Mr. Beerbohm Tree yesterday afternoon at Abbey's theatre acted Captain Swift for the first time in America and gave the receipts of the day to the afflicted sufferers of the wreck of the steamer Elbe.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

NO DOG IN HER HOUSE.

A Boarding House Keeper Tells Why She Has Made This Rule.

Persons with dogs and other pets meet with a cold and clammy reception in New York boarding houses. They may occasionally steal into fashionable flats, where the landlord or agent has no direct means of circumventing them, but when it comes to the boarding house things are a little more definite.

A nice looking married couple went into a Twenty-third street boarding house the other day and were made comfortable. After the first dinner the lady was observed scraping together some dainties from the board to take to her room. The landlady, who is a woman of great decision of character, heard of it, and her knock was shortly afterward heard at the door of the new boarders. The latter were immediately notified that either they or the dog must vacate at once.

"If I cannot keep my darling Xenophon, we'll move," protested the owner of the dog, who practiced the principle of "Love me, love my dog."

"Then you'll have to move," said the landlady firmly. "I'm not keeping a dog kennel."

"How in the world they ever got that dog in here without my seeing it," said she, after the obnoxious Xenophon had been disposed of, "is more than I can understand. I've had all I want of dogs. A gentleman used to keep a small but ferocious bulldog in his room where I once lived. He was the ugliest brute I ever laid my eyes on—the dog, not the man. That dog wouldn't let anybody but his owner tamper with him. The man used to lug him around with him everywhere he went. One night, when the man came in, he was feeling so oblivious to earthly things that he left his dog locked in the vestibule. The next boarder who came in got no farther than the vestibule and landed down the steps with a square yard of trousers missing. He was soon joined by another boarder, who wanted to come to bed. They rang the bell until several of us came down to see what was the matter. On opening the door the dog sprang for us as if he hadn't been fed for a week and wanted anything that came handy, but we slammed the door to again just in time. As we could not awaken the owner we had to leave the dog there till morning, and those who were outside had to go to a hotel. In the morning everybody had to go and come by the servant's entrance until the owner of the animal came down and got us out of the fix."

"What did he say?"

"Say! Why, he abused us all as a set of brutes for keeping his dog locked up there and gathered it up under his arm and took it up stairs as if had been a piece of Dresden china! And the boarders who had been locked out left the house for good the next day. We got rid of the dog, but not until it had half depopulated the establishment."—Chicago Tribune.

A Bearded Freak.

One of the earliest of the American bearded freaks was Louis Jasper, who lived in southern Virginia at about the time of the close of the Revolutionary war. His beard was 9½ feet long and correspondingly thick and heavy. He could take his mustache between his fingers and extend his arms to their full length, and still the ends of the beards were over a foot beyond his finger tips.

The press is the best instrument for enlightening the mind of man and improving him as a rational, moral and social being.—Thomas Jefferson.

Wounded by Unknown Men.

New York, Feb. 8.—Andrew Tonso, of Spuyten Duyvil, was taken to the Charles street police station yesterday suffering from a fractured skull. He was walking along Tenth avenue, near Fourteenth street, with the blood streaming from a wound in his head. He said that two men assaulted him and one had struck him with a club.

Cherokee Bill Guilty.

Fort Smith, Ark., Feb. 8.—The jury in the case of Bill Cook, "Cherokee Bill," has returned a verdict of guilty. The conviction is for robbing the Wells-Fargo Express Company and the St. Louis and San Francisco Road at Red Forks, I. T., on the 8th of July last.

Just the Same.

She stood at the window of the water tax office and the clerk to whom she had paid her money asked her what else he could do for her.

"I want a recipe," she answered.

"Madam," said the clerk, "this is not a cooking school; we give receipts, not recipes, here."

"All right," she tittered. "I don't care what you call it. I know I had to stew and boil to get the money to pay it. S'long." And she pocketed the paper and sailed off.—Detroit Free Press.

$100 Reward $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure.

Salvation Army.

The meeting at the Salvation Army Hall last evening was successful, notwithstanding the severe storm, and a good-sized audience was present.

Col. Eadie, Chief Secretary of the United States Army, and Adjutant Wood commanding the newly-formed Northern New Jersey Central Division, with the staff brass band from New York were present.

Col. Eadie read the Scripture lesson, and made a few remarks. Adjutant Wood conducted the meeting. Several new songs were introduced, and members of the band sang a number of solos.

The original plans for the meeting were disturbed somewhat on account of the weather, but the service was an exceedingly interesting one.

—George Schwab, with his two children, aged four and six years respectively, and a sky-terrier dog, journeyed from Union Village to Plainfield in the storm last night and took passage on the 1:12 a. m. train for Cleveland, Ohio, where he goes in search of work.

The experience of Geo. A. Apgar, of German Valley, N. J., is well worth remembering. He was troubled with chronic diarrhoea and doctored for five months and was treated by four different doctors without benefit. He then began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, of which one small bottle effected a complete cure. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. NOW ON HAND,

Diphtheria Antitoxine.

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.

So limited has been the supply of GENUINE ANTITOXINE heretofore, that sales have been made only on condition of immediate actual use. But amid so large a population as ours, an urgent demand for the new treatment may arise at any hour, night or day, Sunday or week-day. And delay in obtaining it might result fatally. I have therefore, with some difficulty, and at considerable expense, provided a complete outfit of Antitoxine Serum (with injector) and am prepared to meet such demand The cost of an outfit (serum of two powers and Koch injector) is now about $12being only one-fourth of the earlier price. At present sales will be made only on the order of a practicing physician.

MARY A. LIVERMORE.

A DISTINGUISHED WOMAN OF THE PRESENT CENTURY.

She Did Valiant Service During the Civil War and Became a Patriotic Platform Orator. Retiring from Active Life to Pursue Literary Duties.

No woman was ever more appropriately claimed by every portion of her own extended land than Mrs. Mary A. Livermore. No woman was ever more widely known personally. She has lived in the North, the South, the East and the West. She has lectured in nearly every State in the Union, and even Europe has its claims upon her, for she has lectured in England and Scotland, and on the Continent, through interpreters.

Mrs. Livermore is a link between two generations. She knew and thought with the great thinkers of a generation ago. Garrison and Wendell Phillips were her compatriots. She not only lived with Emerson, Whittier, Longfellow, Lowell, Hawthorne and their contemporaries, but, with Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, she has lived to see the "last leaf" flutter from the bow where it clung, for Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes was the last man of a group of brilliant literary lights of which Boston may well be proud.

A mere slip of a girl, she left her father's home to go into what seemed the far South, in response to a call from a family school in Southern Virginia.

While she was in the South, Mary Ashton Rice, as she was then known, saw unutterable deeds of barbarism, and was brought face to face with the miseries of slavery, which she did not fail to study, and which fired her with enthusiasm for a cause to which a good portion of her energies were to be devoted, for she had not then thought of the suffrage question, in which she is now so deeply interested.

When she left her position in the South and returned to Massachusetts, teaching a school of her own in Duxbury, and afterward relinquishing it, in 1845, to become the wife of the Rev. D. P. Livermore, she was ready to sympathize with the anti-slavery sentiments constantly growing warmer in the North, and after moving with her husband to Chicago in 1857, she made use of the columns of the paper Dr. Livermore published there for soliciting the co-operation of the public in behalf of the Union soldiers of the civil war.

After moving to Chicago Mrs. Livermore wrote for every department of her husband's paper, besides attending to all her household duties, and the care of her children, at the same time furnishing stories and sketches for periodicals. But with the work of the United States Sanitary Commission began the most telling work of her life.

MRS. MARY A. LIVERMORE.

It was about that time that the lyceums, which were always on the lookout for novelties, frequently asked her to go and relate her experiences in working for the soldiers on condition that she was to have the entire evening's proceeds for the benefit of the commission. Such offers were not to be refused, so she always went.

"I had never dreamed that anybody knew who I was," said Mrs. Livermore, in relating her experiences, "or that my experiences were of interest to any body, until we began to have our great sanitary fairs for the benefit of the commission, and then I began to read in the papers that Mrs. Livermore had done this or that, and with the success of our first fair began the real trials.

"There had been a great deal of anxiety on our part, for the starting of the fair had involved a debt of $10,000. But there were no fears after the first day, when we took $25,000. Everybody entering the halls in which the fairs were held was obliged to pass under the national colors, and even the traitors not only passed under the colors, but came to ask us if there was anything they could do to help us."

In beginning her lecturing, however Mrs. Livermore's interest in the suffrage question was by no means cooled. She had in one savings bank $8,000 in her own right. She informed her husband that with this she intended to establish a paper to be devoted to the cause of woman suffrage.

The result was a pronounced success for the Agitator. When in 1870 the Boston suffragists wished to establish a paper there was nobody among them who felt competent to assume the responsibility, and Mrs. Livermore was asked to become its editor. William Lloyd Garrison, Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Lucy Stone, Dr. Henry Blackwell, and Mrs. Julia Ward Howe were the founders of the Boston publication, but of them all only Garrison had had any newspaper experience, and Susan B. Anthony's Revolution in New York was the only publication of the sort in the country, aside from Mrs. Livermore's.

And now, after an active public career of forty years, one of America's most famous women has decided to make herself a little less of a living sacrifice to public demands.

Such is the life of a wonderful woman of the age, who has witnessed progressive changes in every sphere relative to women, who has seen the development of philantrophies, the establishment of colleges, the revolutionized attitude of the press and the legislation for women where a half a century ago there was practically none. All this she has witnessed, in all these things she has participated, yet, never failing to mingle with the young people surrounding her, she has failed to grow old.

Beauty without amiability is a flower without fragrance.

CAN ANTS TALK?

The Precocious Insects of Merry England Evidently Can.

A correspondent of the London Quiver says:

I was one day standing in my garden near the trunk of an old willow tree, up which a scattered line of ants was crawling. After a time I observed an occasional straggler coming down in an opposite direction. Here and there a couple of ants, ascending and descending, happened to meet, but there was no stoppage and no talk. Presently, at about five feet from the ground I smeared a little hollow in the trunk with a large spoonful of thick treacle, to see how long it would remain undiscovered.

I then went away for a short time, and on my return found about a dozen ants busily feasting on the treasure. A minute or two later one of the feasters came slowly down the trunk with heavy feet, and when near the ground met a friend, whom he suddenly arrested on his way up, and with his atennæ, which he plied vigorously, held a good talk. What was said I know not, but the friend knew, and thereupon marched steadily on up the tree to the newly-found treasure. Meanwhile the bearer of the good tidings made his own way quickly back to the nest, a few yards off in the grass, to which I watched him. He was soon lost to view, but, beyond all doubt, he soon spread the news of treasure trove throughout the colony.

Within half an hour of that time a long line of hungry ants was marching direct to the tree, making straight for the feast, remaining there for a time, and then returning to the nest in another line on the other side of the willow. This procession of ascending and descending termites went on for some hours, in fact until dusk, when the numbers of advancing guests grew less and less, and finally ceased. Before it was dark not a single ant was to be seen, though early the next morning a fresh band of adventurers set out in the same fashion, coming and going all day until every morsel of the sweetness had disappeared.

Contrasts.

I. Lady (on the pavement, to her husband)—Look at the splendid carriage Councillor A—— and his lady are driving about in. I only wish we were as lucky!

Privy-Councillor's Wife (to her spouse)—I am getting quite ashamed of this old coach. Look how the people stand still and look at us with contempt. If you don't wish to drive me to despair, you must buy a new turnout.

II. Woodchopper—Here I've to chop firewood for that rich property owner, while he sits doing nothing the livelong day. I'd give anything to change places with him for one week.

Property Owner—I am the unhappiest man in the world, or I am much mistaken. It doesn't look as if I should ever get well again. The doctor says I ought to work. To be sure, if I had a strong constitution like that woodcutter outside there, I would chop wood from morning till night, and be as happy as the day is long.

III. Briefless Barrister—When I see His Excellency overwhelmed with honors and distinctions on the occasions of his jubilee, I feel as if I could burst. How miserable to pass through life unnoticed and uncared for!

Prime Minister—I would gladly forfeit all these distinctions if for one short year I might be young once more like that young lawyer, for instance, who is carrying on an animated conversation with his fair companion at the other end of the table.

IV. Young Man—There goes Lieutenant N—— with his wife, the loveliest and most amiable creature I ever set eyes on. Aye, these lieutenants always have the pick. Ah! poor me!

Lieutenant N—— (to his wife)—It will perhaps be best for us to part. You have made me wretched enough. I'd rather have wedded the poorest and plainest girl in creation than put up with such a vixen as you are!—Humoristiche Blatter.

Brother Jones Cracks a Chestnut.

An amusing incident occurred at the close of Sam Jenes's sermon at Pulaski the other day. Stepping down from the pulpit and looking solemnly over the audience, the revivalist said:

"I want all the women in this crowd who have not spoken a harsh word or harbored an unkind thought towards their husbands for a month past to stand up."

One old woman, apparently on the shady side of sixty, stood up.

"Come forward and give me your hand," said the preacher.

The woman did so; whereupon Jones said:

"Now turn around and let the audience see the best looking woman in the country."

After taking her seat the revivalist addressed the men:

"Now I want all the men in this crowd who have not spoken a harsh word or harbored an unkind thought towards their wives for a month past to stand up."

Twenty-seven big, stapping fellows hopped out of the audience with alacrity.

"Come forward and give me your hands, my dear boys."

Jones gave each one a vigorous shake, after which he ranged all of them side by side in front of the pulpit and facing the audience. He looked them over carefully and solemly, and then, turning around to the audience, he said:

"I want you all to take a good look at the twenty-seven biggest liars in the State of Tennessee."—Argonaut.

Exceptionally Honored.

A good old Methodist lady attending service in a Methodist Episcopal church one Sunday became happy under the preaching of the Word, and ejaculated "Glory!"

She was admonished to keep quiet by two of the brethren and nodded assent, but soon becoming forgetful responded, "Hallelujah!"

The brethren again called her attention to the annoyance and told her that if she did not keep quiet they would be compelled to remove her.

The sermon proceeded and the old lady, becoming very happy and forgetful of her surroundings, shouted out:

"Glory to God!"

This was too much for the brethren, who tried to lead her out; but she refused to walk, so they carried her. On the way she said:

"I am honored above my Master, for while he was carried by an ass, I am carried by two."—Philadelphia Record.

MONEY LOANED.
Local Representatives Wanted

Our system affords an opportunity to borrow on either personal or real estate security. The plan is superior to building and loan associations. The amount borrowed may be returned in monthly payments without bonus, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum, it affords absolute security to investors with a reasonable guarantee of an annual dividend of from 8 to 10 per cent. We desire to secure the services of energetic, representative men in every community to act as local secretaries. The position will be sufficiently remunerative to amply compensate for services. If you possess the above qualifications write for particulars. Full information regarding our system of making loans as well as investments and agencies will be furnished by addressing S. S. Robertson, President, 1122 Walnut st., Philadelphia. 1 5 3m

IN THE DEEP, DEEP SEA.

Fishes that Are Killed by Falling Up from Its Profound Depths.

At the monthly meeting of the Society of Natural Science of Hartfor, dProf. H. W. Conn of Wesleyan University delivered an interesting lecture on the "Bottom of the Sea."

Prof. Conn had a large number of instructive views of apparatus used in sounding and dredging, as well as photographs of many of the unspeakable creatures that the dredges has brought up. There is no sensible amount of light at a greater depth than 300 or 400 feet, the most sensitive photographic plates being unaffected even by prolonged exposure. The fishes are therefore obliged to hunt their food by the aid of dark lanterns, as Prof. Conn expressed it; in other words, they are phosphorescent, and see by the aid of the light that they themselves emit.

One of the great difficulties of deep-sea exploration is that it takes about all day to throw out one dredge and haul it up again, even although the line is worked by steam power. The dredges used until recently had a habit of becoming tangled immediately upon being thrown overboard, so that the day was entirely wasted. The great pressure at the bottom of the sea (from three to six tons on a square inch) will crush glass to a fine powder, so that it has been difficult to obtain good measures of the temparature in the deeper parts. The professor described an ingenious thermo-electric apparatus by means of which this difficulty has been overcome.

The greater part of the bottom of the ocean consists of red mud and globigerina ooze, the dead shells of a minute foraminiferous creature, so abundant that its shells make up a big part of the ocean floor. There is no life below three miles. In speaking of some of the fishes that inhabit the lower depths, the Professor said that they often "fall upward" to the surface and are killed by the reduction of pressure. The air in their swimming bladders, he explained, is compressed by the pressure of the ocean into very small space. When the fish is so unwise as to leave its native haunts to explore regions half a mile or so above him, the deminution in pressure causes the air to expand, and the fish become so buoyant that he cannot swim back again, and the further he rises the worse his plight becomes; and after a time he reaches the surface, by which time the expansion of the air has become so great that the fish is often literally blown to pieces, and is found floating about in this condition.

The Professor said that in the lower depths of the sea the quiet is so profound that in comparison with it the most barren deserts on the surface of the earth are scenes of the greatest activity; for on the desert there are variation in wind and in temperature, and alternations of day and night, while in the great depths of the ocean there is no life, there are no currents, the temperature is uniformly 33 degrees year in and year out, and night reigns perpetually. The surface of the ocean is the poet's favorite metaphor for unrest, but there is nothing so quiet and changeless as its profoundest depths.—Hartford Times.

Menaced by a Waterspout.

Capt. Echoff, commanding the Dutch tank steamship, La Hesbaye, from Antwerp, tells of a thrilling escape from being engulfed in the centre of a tremendous waterspout, which, during the prevalence of a terrific snow storm on the afternoon of the 21st inst., shot under her stern.

The huge and destructive water spiral by reason of the condition of the atmosphere, was not seen until it was almost on board the ship, although the deafening noise of its approach was heard fully three minutes before it was seen. Had it struck the vessel, as it would but for the prompt manoeuvring of the ship by her officers, none would have been spared to relate the experience. All on board for a time were panic stricken, and those who were on deck were drenched through and through by flying spindrift.

In speaking of the waterspout Capt. Echoff said that at the time it passed under the vessel's stern a dense and blinding snow storm was raging, and it was almost impossible to see the ship's bow from the bridge. The seas were rough and their washing up against the vessel caused the spindrift to fly in all directions. Dead ahead the deafening noise of the rapid approach of this phenomenon was heard, and in a few minutes it appeared a little on the port side of the ship. It was a huge formation fully a hundred feet in width through the centre, and had it struck the ship she would have been rent asunder.—Philadelphia Press.

Caprices of a Princess.

Although the Princess of Wales has not yet reached the throne, she is credited with some queenly caprices. When she travels a favorite white cat must always go with her, and another indispensable accompaniment is an assortment of little china animals, such as can be had in any toy shop. This latter necessity means no little trouble to her attendants as she never permits her room to be dismantled until the last moment, and the packing of the fragile pets has been the means of losing more than one train.

Jersey Ladies' High Hats.

Mr. Duncan of Newark has introduced a bill in the New Jersey Legislature which is intended to prevent women from wearing high hats in theatres or other public halls, at entertainments where an admission fee is charged, and where an unobstructive view is necessary. The penalty is to be summary ejection, and, on conviction before a court, a fine of $10. The bill was referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Business.

We'll Get There.

Though the night be dark and the road be long,
We'll get to the end bimeby!
We'll rest in vales where the roses thrive
And the birds will break into sweetest song—
We'll get to the end bimeby!

Though the storm may rave and the ship be tossed,
We'll get to the end bimeby!
The roughest sea will be safely crossed,
The light will shine for the sailor lost—
We'll get to the end bimeby!

FREAKS OF NATURE.

MADE SO BY THE GRAFTING AND SPLICING PROCESS.

Dr. Born Makes Playthings of Tadpoles. He Cuts Them Up and Destroys Their Individuality by Giving Them Other Bodies to Grow Up With.

One of the most startling pieces of scientific intelligence has recently come before the public, masquerading in the staid garb of a matter-of-fact paper read before a German scientist society. It is a description of a series of experiments by Dr. C. Born, but it reads like an extract from the laboratory notebook of a mediaeval wizard.

Dr. Born has been carving up living creatures into bits and piecing the bits together in all sorts of ways. This, of course, is easy enough. The late P. T. Barnum was a pioneer in the art when he pieced together his celebrated mermaid with a monkey's body and a fish's tail. Dr. Born, however, can not only go him one step better, but he makes that step across the widest chasm in nature—the gap that separates death from life—the abyss between a pulsating, wriggling growing creature and a lump of flesh fast becoming putrid.

He not only pieces his bits together, but actually makes them live and grow, thus producing things with tails growing out of their heads, things with two tails and no head or with two heads and no tail things with two hearts and things with no hearts at all—enough to make the astonished beholder flee at once to his home and sign the pledge in an agony of remorse.

The creatures that Dr. Born has succeeded in patching together in this marvellous way are tadpoles and allied forms or amphibians—frogs, toads and the like—in the larval or undeveloped stage, when they are half flesh and half reptile.

This is as far as he has gone yet, but then he has only made a start. When he gets his hand in well there is no telling how far he may go, and the sanguine imagination refuses to allow its horizon to be hemmed in by a tadpole. It expands far beyond the Reptilia and ascends to mammals, and even unto the human family itself. Why not?

Tadpoles show such a wonderful ability to heal wounds and such unequalled energy of growth that the first hesitating blundering experiments are naturally made with them. But men can heal as well as tadpoles, and the human frame can take to itself bits of foreign tissue, too—witness the wonderful surgical transplantations of recent years!

This is how Dr. Born was led to make these experiments:

He was trying to see how far he could carry the wonderful power of regeneration shown by these larval amphibians and found that when one was cut in two the wounded surfaces soon became covered with skins and the pieces lived separately for eight days.

Curiously enough, he had the best success, not with two pieces that, when put together, would form a normal tadpole—that is, with the head of one, and the tail of another—but with two tail pieces. These experiments succeeded not with only two individuals of the same species, but also with those of different species, different genera, or even different families. He thus produced a monstrosity that was half frog and half toad. None of these lived to complete its metamorphosis from the larval stage into that of the full grown animal, but there seemed to be no reason why, with sufficient pains, they should not be made to do so.

Lest any one should suppose that the union was a mere growing together of the outside skin, Dr. Born dissected many of his productions, and established the fact that the entire tissue had grown into one so that the resulting creature was a physiological unit.

Startling as this discovery may seem, it is yet consistent with a principle pointed out by Darwin, but whose significance has not yet been fully realized by the scientific world. This principle is that nature does not oppose the growing together of two living substances not only of the same family but of different families.

We see every day a tree of one kind grafted upon another. Many varieties of luscious fruits have thus been artificially produced. You can tone down the acidity of a pear by grafting upon the tree when young a slip of a peach or plum tree.

In the animal kingdom the results of such experiments are even more surprising. Thus a mule was invented. Mules are a unique species. They were never seen until somebody crossed the horse and donkey families.

Theodore Roosevelt, in his book, "Hunting Trips of a Ranchman," mentions an extraordinary dog which was one of the household at his ranch in the Bad Lands. This dog was half dog and half wolf. In the daytime he was a dog, barking like other dogs; but at night he was a wolf, and he gave the true howl of the wolf on the still, northwestern plains.

These are the results of cross-breeding. They show that different species and different families can be ingrafted, the one upon the other and that nature is favorable to the process.

Now comes Dr. Born to prove that, while yet alive, living animal organisms can be spliced. This, however, is merely an advance upon what surgery has done in pumping the blood of one man into the veins of another, or in grafting the skin from one person to another, where as everybody knows, it grows and remains healthy.

TIRES OF HIS HOBBY.

A Millionaire's Peculiar Freak Will Go For a Song.

The New York Herald says that in a few days the house No. 929 Fifth avenue, which millionaire William Pickhardt, a wholesale dealer in chemicals, has been building for nearly fifteen years, will be sold at auction, with its costly stables.

The house is a four story brownstone one, with a handsome entrance and very large windows. In height the house is almost as tall as a downtown seven story office building. It has never had a tenant. Fifteen years ago Mr. Pickhardt determined to erect a home in proportion to his wealth, which would rival if not surpass, A. T. Stewart's mansion at 34th street and 5th avenue, which at that time was considered the acme of palatial residences. He purchased the ground at Seventy-fourth street and Fifth avenue, facing Central Park, and immediately sought a competion of English, German, and American architects for the plans of his new home.

The plans submitted by one of the Americans were accepted, and orders given to at once prepare the ground for the foundations. The question of cost was not to be considered. Each stone which went into the building was to be imported, and a special representative was sent to Germany to watch the stone quarried and cut to order.

When the foundations were laid work was suspended for a time, as the owner wanted to change the plans. In about a year work was resumed on the building and progressed rapidly until the first story had been erected. The walls were three and a half feet thick, and the rough raw edges of the stone gave the building a commercial appearance. Several changes were made and work resumed till three stories of the house had been built, when one day the owner of the house went to the architect and said there were some changes he wanted made and mentioned them. The architect replied that to make such changes the building would have to be torn down and built over again. After remonstrating with Mr. Pickhardt, who threatened to pull the building down himself and spend every dollar he owned rebuilding it to suit him, the architect withdrew and resigned his contract.

A contractor named Knaut was then engaged by Mr. Pickhardt. New and elaborate plans were drawn up by him for the mansion, which necessitated the demolishing of the two upper stories. Before Knaut's plans had been carried out he returned to Germany for a short vacation, but he died there shortly after his arrival.

On hearing of Knaut's death, Mr. Pickhardt remarked:

"It looks as though fate were against my home, but I'll not stop now, I'll try it again."

A third architect, an American, was engaged, and the building resumed. It proceeded very slowly on account of the frequent and important alterations insisted on by the owner. Finally, in 1889, when the walls were up and the roof was on, and little to do except finish the inside of the house, Mr. Pickhardt was dissatisfied with the result of his labors and expenditures, and said:

"The house isn't as I want it at all; it isn't what I intended it should be, and I'll never live in it, never! It has cost me already over $1,000,000, but that is not enough to ever make me live in such a house."

The only tenant the house has had since its erection is the watchman. A $50,000 organ which Mr. Pickhardt imported specially for his house nearly seven years ago has never been unpacked and is now lying in a storage warehouse.

Making Newspapers in Syria.

A learned Syrian traveller, at present enjoying a sojourn in Buffalo, said that the Syrian papers probably contained not the most distant allusion to the massacres in Armenia. After observing the ways of American newspapers he declared that the Yankee editor was in Paradise and didn't know it.

In Beyrout, said he, there is a censor, an officer of the Turkish Government, and to him must be submitted the first copy of every newspaper, and until he approves it not another one may be taken out of the pressroom. As there are some thirteen daily papers in Beyrout, it is easy to imagine what an inconvenience this is. It will not do to give the censor proof slips. He must see the entire sheet as it is intended for circulation. While the press waits the censor runs his eye over the journal. If there is a line of news which the Government would prefer not to have published, if there is a leader reflecting in the slightest degree upon the conduct of affairs in Constantinople, the censor draws his pencil through it, and the matter must come out.

In anticipation of such an occurrence, Syrian editors always keep in reserve several columns of matter in type. This is all most laudatory of the Grand Vizier, of all Turkish officialdom. It is carefully made up in portions of varying length, stickfuls, two-stickfuls, half columns, columns and squibs. If the censor orders part of the first forms out, these tales of fulsome flattery are immediately substituted, a fresh impression is taken, the censor approves, and the presses are started up.—Buffalo Courier.

The Barber Meant Well.

"I don't object to religion or its attendant features unless my life is endangered by it," remarked the club kicker yesterday, as he fished a piece of lemon peel out of the bottom of his glass. As nobody paid any attention to this rather irrevalent remark, he continued:

"You see, my barber was shaving me the other day and I was almost in a doze when he had finished lathering my face. He hadn't said a word during this operation, but suddenly he leaned over with his razor poised just over my jugular vein, and hissed in my ear:

"'Are you prepared to die?'

"Well, frankly, I wasn't, and I didn't propose to die in that way, at any rate. So I gave him a shove, sprang out of the chair, and made a bolt for the street. As my face was full of lather, one of the other barbers followed me to see what was the matter, and caught up with me just outside the door, when he explained. Do you suppose that barber had designs upon my life? Not a bit of it. He was merely concerned about the welfare of my soul. I heard that he had gotten religious, and had adopted this rather startling mode of spreading the Gospel."—Phil. Record.

SNOW STORM RAGING

The Weather Is Still Intensely Cold.

Great Suffering Among Settlers—Fears Entertained That Many People Are Frozen in Kansas and Nebraska—Travel Greatly Delayed All Over the Country.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—The weather is forestalling the prophecies of the weather bureau. According to schedule the thermometer was to have begun falling slightly before noon yesterday and from that time on it was predicted its downfall would be rapid. The thermometer did not wait, however. After hovering in the neighborhood of 6 degrees above zero all night it began early in the morning to drop. Between 7 and 8 o'clock the fall was 8 degrees, and the cold increased every minute. The wind blew from forty to fifty miles an hour, but the fall of fine dry snow stopped after obstructing all the street railway lines and crippling the mail trains on every system running into the city. Without exception, all mail trains due here were several hours behind time. Last night the temperature fell to fifteen below zero.

Great Suffering.

All sections of the country heard from so far report that the cold wave is holding on firmly, with little prospect of cessation. In Kansas and Nebraska great suffering prevails on account of the severe blizzards, which were general over both states. In the latter state sand mingled with the snow. Illinois and Indiana are in the grasp of the snow storm and business is almost entirely suspended in some of the smaller towns and villages. The storm is due to an exceedingly high area which developed in the far northwest. Accompanied by a furious northwest wind, it came down the Missouri valley with a rush. It is good for two more days at least. At Milwaukee the thermometer registered 8 degrees below. The snowfall was general throughout Wisconsin. About four inches fell on the level. All railroad trains were from two to six hours late.

At St. Louis the wave arrived on schedule time and at 9 o'clock in the morning the quicksilver touched 5 degrees below. A strong northwesterly gale is blowing accompanied by flurries of fine, hard snow. The worst blizzard in several years is raging this morning.

Worst in Years.

At Dennison, Tex., the mercury reached 5 degrees below. Throughout Missouri and southern Iowa a fearful storm raged all night, and reports state that there is no sign of abatement.

Dispatches from the Des Moines weather office to 100 postmasters notified them of the coming blizzard which came upon the state early yesterday morning, although not in so serious force in the central sections as was expected. Trains on all railroads are delayed. The Rock Island has abandoned all freights in Iowa and Nebraska. The mercury stands at zero here and the wind is blowing twenty-five miles an hour, but at Council Bluffs, on the western border, the mercury is 8 degrees below and the wind velocity forty miles. Snow is drifting badly this morning and a general blockade of the railroads is expected.

Cold of unexampled severity prevails throughout the upper peninsula of Michigan, and great suffering is reported from the homestead country, where the inhabitants are isolated and live in scantily furnished cabins exposed to the winds. Several fatal cases of freezing have been reported.

The oldest inhabitant of Wichita, Kas., fails to remember any such storm as that which is raging here now. A fearful storm of sand and sleet prevailed here yesterday. News from many points in southern and western Kansas tell of the same conditions and the suffering among the settlers on the bleak prairies must be terrible.

The weather at Little Rock, Ark., was the coldest ever known there yesterday, the temperature falling to 3 degrees below zero.

Fifty Miles an Hour.

A howling blizzard with the wind blowing fifty miles an hour is the report received from Denison, Tex. It is the worst storm in years. Thousands of cattle are dying from exposure.

Oklahoma Territory reports that the blizzard raging there is the worst that the territory has experienced in twenty years. All day yesterday the thermometers registered from 10 to 15 degrees below zero. The wind blew a hurricane from the north. No trains have arrived here since Wednesday night.

Condition of the Iron Trade.

Pittsburg, Feb. 8.—The American Manufacturer in its editorial on the official quotation of the iron and steel trade will say: It is evident that there is something of an improvement in the iron and steel trade, as the better condition noted some weeks ago continues, and there is considerable activity in several lines. At the same time the better state of affairs has not yet produced any effect on prices which with a few exceptions remain as they have been for some time past.

Boiler Explosion.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 8.—As an eastbound freight train was going into a switch at the curve tank here the locomotive boiler exploded and Fireman Dean Henry was instantly killed and Engineer John King died from his injuries. He was blown to the river bank, some distance away, and his body was not found for thirty-five minutes. Both men reside in Roanoke.

Mated but Not Matched.

Richland, Mich., Feb. 8.—Jos. Grant, aged 77, shot his wife twice yesterday, once in the hand and once in the head. He then turned the revolver against himself and fired a shot into his breast, dying instantly. Mrs. Grant is not fatally injured. Family quarrels were the cause of the shooting.

Killed in a Coal Mine.

London, Feb. 8.—Seven men were killed by an explosion in the Timsbury colliery near Bristol yesterday.

ARE THE VESSELS SAFE?

La Gascogne Five Days Overdue and the Teutonic Late.

New York, Feb. 8.—With a blinding snow storm prevailing off Fire Island and at Sandy Hook it would be impossible this morning to convey the tidings of the sighting of the overdue French line steamer La Gascogne, even should she make her way up through the ice floes.

The marine observer at Sandy Hook telegraphed last night that the weather was so thick that he could not see the channel, and signals from any incoming steamer would be unobserved. The first news, therefore, will probably come from Quarantine, should La Gascogne make this harbor this morning.

While La Gascogne is now nearly five days overdue, the White Star steamer Teutonic, which should have reached here Wednesday morning, has not been heard from.

August Forget, the agent of the French line in this city, said to-day that he had not yet begun to grow anxious. He is confident that some trifling accident has happened to La Gascogne's machinery.

The anxiety about the ship has taken practical form among the marine underwriters in this city.

The Rhynland, from Antwerp, is also more than a day overdue, all of which sets forth the fact that the delay is general all round.

A dispatch from Halifax yesterday afternoon is the effect that the steamer Alpha, from West Indian ports, is three days overdue, and it is thought possible she may have some information regarding the missing French.

ELBE'S AGENTS INDIGNANT.

They Object to the Publication of Sensational Stories.

New York, Feb. 8.—The North German Lloyd Steamship company has sent out the following statement:

"Pending the official inquiry into the collision and sinking of the, Elbe neither the company nor its agents can make reply to the sensational stories and charges printed, further than to point to the conflicts in the statements made."

Passengers' stories must always be received with even more than the proverbial grain of salt, and the stories going the round of the press with respect to the behavior of the crew on board of the Elbe in that terrible moment do not seem worthy of credence. The North German Lloyd has been practically found to blame by some journals on the strength of a few distorted facts given by irresponsible people laboring under the excitement naturally born of a great disaster, and eked out by other details which are on the face of them conflicting.

The same papers publish a letter signed by British shipowners strongly urging a suspension of judgment in the face of the conflicting statements, pointing out that the mouths of the crew, owners and agents are closed pending the official inquiry.

THE STORM ON THE OCEAN.

Ships Arrive Telling of Violent Gales and Heavy Seas.

New York, Feb. 8.—The Anchor line steamer Circassia, from Glasgow, Prince line steamer Black Prince, from Mediterranean ports, and Trinidad, from Bermuda, arrived last evening, each in turn telling a story of extremely violent gales and heavy seas during the latter part of their voyages.

On Feb. 5, the Black Prince, during a heavy westerly gale, was boarded by tremendous high seas, which started and smashed two of her port bow plates, flooding the gangways and forecastle. Bales of waste were used to fill up the holes in her bow. The vessel had bad weather all the passage.

The Circassia ran into easterly gales when she crossed the banks and had a succession of gales to port, but sustained no damage.

The Trinidad had heavy west and northwest gales all the voyage and was twenty-four hours late.

The Alvena, from the West Indies, had strong northeast gales throughout her voyage.

Children Meet Death.

Concord, N. H., Feb. 8.—At Andover Centre yesterday, two little girls, children of Frank J. Boyd, a brakeman on the Northern railroad, were burned to death in their home. Mrs. Boyd went out to make a call on a neighbor, leaving the children to amuse themselves by cutting paper dolls. When the mother returned after an absence of less than half an hour she found the older child dead and the other so badly burned that she died in two hours.

Last of the Cook Gang.

Tulsa, I. T., Feb. 8.—Jim French and "Verdigris Kid," two of the members of the Cook gang, were killed last night while attempting to rob the general store of W. C. Patton & Co., at Cattosa, fifteen miles east of here. Sam B. Irvine, manager for W. C. Patton & Co., was shot and seriously injured, although it is not known how badly. These outlaws were members of the noted Cook gang and are the last of the desperate lot.

Wreck on the N. O. & N. Railroad.

New Orleans, Feb. 8.—A northbound freight on the New Orleans & Northeastern railroad was wrecked near Purvis, Miss., about one hundred miles north of here yesterday, killing one negro tramp and mortally wounding two others. The train was ditched, smashing fourteen loaded cars. The train crew were uninjured. The accident was caused by a broken drawhead.

Death of a Journalist.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Edward Quinn, formerly correspondent here of the Milwaukee Times, and afterwards of the Milwaukee Journal, dropped dead in the rooms of the National Capital Press Club at an early hour this morning. He was lately engaged as press agent of Prof. Fanciulli, of the Marine Band.

Whiskey Did It.

Binghamton, N. Y., Feb. 8.—Elmer Walker, 34 years of age, coachman for Dr. J. G. Orton, took a large dose of carbolic acid while in an intoxicated condition Tuesday evening and died from the effects of the poison yesterday.

Bank Robbery.

Durant, Miss., Feb. 8.—Burglars entered the bank here last night and secured between $500 and $1,000. Two suspicious characters have been arrested, and a posse is pursuing several suspicious parties.

THE BOND BILL KILLED

Administration Measure Is Defeated in the House.

Bryan's Amendment Rejected—The Schemes Sprung by Reed and Others Failed—No Fire Water for Indians—Good Feeling Among Senators Restored.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The house discussed plans for financial relief three days and refused by decisive votes to pass any one of them. When the committee of the whole met, three propositionsitions were reported to the house for its action—the original Springer bill (known as the administration bill) proposing the issue of $500,000,000 3 per cent. 50-year gold bonds, as amended by the committee of the whole; the substitute proposed by Mr. Reed, authorizing the issue of 2 per cent certificates of indebtedness to meet current deficiencies in the revenue, and bonds to cover the deficiency in the gold reserve with an amendment proposed by Mr .Bryan (dem., Neb.), reaffirming the declaration of the Matthews' resolution of 1878, to the effect that coin obligation of the government are payable in standard silver dollars at its option and the substitute of Mr. Cox (dem. Tenn.), containing a rehabilitation of state banks, with an amendment proposed by Mr. Cobb (dem., Ala.), expressly declining to confer the right to issue bonds upon the secretary of the treasury.

Mr. Bryan's amendment was rejected—yeas, 127; nays, 169; then Mr. Reed's substitute went the same way by a vote of 109 to 187. This was nearly a party vote, the populists and democrats in opposition and republicans in favor of the substitute.

In the Senate.

The personal altercation between Senators Mitchell (rep., Ore.) and Harris (dem., Tenn.), a few days ago, was recalled yesterday by the action of Mr. Mitchell, in presenting the report which he had withdrawn on that occasion, and in making the explanation of it which he had been prevented from doing. The report and the remarks had reference to the claims for sugar bounties, and the effect was (as the committee on claims was equally divided), simply to leave the matter—amounting to about $8,000,000—to be passed upon by the committee on appropriations and the senate. At the close of the day's session suitable expressions of regret for the unpleasant occurrence alluded to, were made by both the senators. The diplomatic bill was before the senate up to the hour of adjournment, when it went over without action on the item for the construction of a telegraphic cable between the United States and the Hawaiian Islands.

Speeches were made by Senator Higgins (rep., Del.) in favor of the item and by Senators Palmer (dem., Ill.) and Caffery (dem., La.), against it.

Mr. Palmer, reciting a sentence from Mr. Teller's (rep., Col.), speech of the previous day: "Oh for an hour of Marcy, Clay and Webster," exclaimed "Oh for an hour of Charles Sumner, who would not consent to the annihilation of the negro republic of San Domingo. Is there no one who will speak for the helpless people of the Hawaiian islands who have been robbed and who are now governed by agencies that are as desperate as can be imagined?"

An amendment offered by Mr. Bland to redeem the treasury notes issued under the Sherman law in accordance with section 3 of that act and to coin the seigniorage of the silver bullion in the treasury into standard dollars, was defeated by a vote of 114 to 209.

The house committee on Indian affairs authorized a favorable report on the bill to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors to Indians under the charge of the United States or on lands allotted to Indians.

Dr. Mallory of Florida from the committee on interstate and foreign commerce reported to the house the house substitute for the senate Nicaragua canal bill. In his report he says that in the judgment of the house committee the house bill heretofore reported by it possesses essential features that will commend it to a more favorable consideration in the house than will be accorded the senate bill.

Navigation Stopped by Ice.

Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 8.—The steamer Advance and four powerful tugs were kept at work last night and this morning breaking the ice in Staten Island sound between here and Tremley Point, so that the numerous factories along the sound could get their supplies. The vessels had hard work, and it was with the greatest difficulty they managed to make any headway, as the ice froze together again almost as fast as broken and navigation through the Kills is suspended to-day. A number of vessels are ice-bound at the wharves in this city.

Landed from a Wreck.

Panama, Feb. 8.—Some 200 passengers from the French steamer Amerique, which went ashore near Cape Augusta, several days ago, were landed at Colon yesterday by the steamship Ville de Marseille. They say that the Amerique, her mails and her cargo are a total loss. Her hull is now under water and only her masts are in sight. The passengers, who were taken ashore in small boats, lost all their clothing and most of their money, but none of them was drowned. The only person lost in the wreck was a sailor.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY, $5 A YEAR.

DEATH OF J. AUG. HINCHMAN.

He Was a Prominent Figure in Hotel Netherwood Life.

Col. J. Augustus Hinchman died suddenly of apoplexy yesterday morning at Van Court Inn, Roselle, where he had been spending the Winter. He was at the head of the Bureau of Information of the Metropolitan Telephone Company, 18 Cortlandt street, New York, and was well-known among the business men throughout the city. He was born in Morris County, this State, 68 years ago. In 1850 he went to California, and was for several years Assistant Postmaster of San Francisco. He returned East in 1862 to accept a position with the Western Union Telegraph Company in New York city Later he became chief clerk to Postmaster James. For the past three years he had been connected with the Metropolitan Telephone Company. For several seasons he was prominent in the social events of Hotel Netherwood, and was a valued Summer-resort correspondent of The Daily Press.

Buds That Feel the Cold.

Some rash black birches were betrayed into swelling their buds during the January thaw, with the result that the cold of the last two weeks destroyed the embryo leaves. It rarely happens that plants indigenous to the region suffer thus. The annual danger to the peach trees lies in the fact that they grow north of their natural habitat, and doubtless the same is true of the oranges in this country. The fig escapes the frosts of many Winters as far north as the southern extremity of Maryland, but it is nipped now and again, just by way of reminder that it is out of its latitude.

To Accommodate Travel to the Catskills.

Kingston, Feb 8—The Ulster and Delaware Railroad Company has decided to extend its tracks to Kingston Point, a mile up the Hudson from Rondout. This will allow the Albany day boats to load their Catskill Mountain passengers direct at the trains instead of at Rhinebeck, across the river. At Kingston Point a large dock and terminal station will be built. The work will be begun in the Spring.

Want to Get Back.

It is reported that Arthur A. Zimmerman and Harry O. Wheeler are greatly dissatisfied with professional racing and are anxious to secure reinstatement to Class B. With this object in view they propose, it is said, to apply to the National Assembly at their meeting Feb. 18.

Struck by the Blizzard.

A hackman at the North Avenue station yesterday afternoon had considerable difficulty in attending to business, on account of being under the influence of liquor. After securing a passenger from one of the trains, he had to be assisted by a friend in getting the man to his destination.

Body-Building.

Since Jan. 1, Physical Director MacPhie of the Y. M. C. A., has examined 119 young men and 46 boys for work in the gymnasium.

To accomodate the increased growth in the gymnasium classes, 30 extra pairs of dumb bells and 30 Indian clubs have been purchased and put into use.

Monday Afternoon Club.

The Monday Afternoon Club will hold a special meeting for instruction in parliamentary rules and practice, in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church next Monday, Feb. 11, at 3 p. m. David P. Hall of this place has kindly consented to speak on the subject.

Patriotic Red Men.

Miantonomoh Tribe, I. O. R. M., will celebrate Washington's Birthday in a fitting manner. There will be an address, entertainment, dance and collation, and all the friends of the tribe will be invited to accept their hospitality.

Haymakers to Eat.

Miantonomoh Association, No. 118½, Haymakers, will be revived Friday evening, Feb. 15. State President E. S. Lake will be present and make an address. A collation will be served afterwards, under Rule 17.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. THE BLOCKADE BROKEN.

Traffic Resumed in Town and on Railroad.

TRIBULATIONS OF THE POSTMEN.

They Plough Their Way Through Heavy Drifts, and Keep Snow-bound Householders in Touch with the Outside World.

It was a lucky thing for the men who recently took the mail-carriers civil-service examination that they were not on duty yesterday, for the strength of even the oldest, in point of service, among the carriers was severely taxed in the attempt to cover the route. Yet each man made the regulation trips in spite of the many drifts, though all were thoroughly exhausted on their return to the office.

William Demarest covered his Netherwood district on horseback and encountered numerous drifts varying from 4 to 7 feet.

E. T. Dunn, who visits Clinton avenue and adjacent points, managed to pull through many deep snow piles in his sleigh, getting stuck several times, however, and being obliged to shovel himself out.

William B. Sharp, who looks after the residents of Washington Park and its surroundings, says the drifts in many places were shoulder high in upper Rockview avenue.

E. T. VanWinkle, whose route extends from the Park Avenue Baptist church pretty well out toward Metuchen, reports that Cedar Brook was frozen over for the first time in seven years, and drifts were met with beyond the brook which were well-nigh impassable.

John Neighbor did nothing but climb to the top of a drift and use his mail-bag as a toboggan to carry him down on the other side, while covering his route in the vicinity of East Second and Berckman streets.

J. F. Mullen who is so short that he could not see over some of the drifts in the neighborhood of the Pond Tool Works, simply got down and tunneled through them, pushing his pouch in front of him. While removing the mail from the Grant avenue box the gale lifted Mullen off his feet and landed him in the middle of the road.

J. W. A. Bauersachs, who looks after the territory adjacent to Summit, Fairview, Grandview and Westervelt avenues, slipped near Westervelt avenue, and fell headfirst into a seven-foot drift, and struggled out just as the piano in a neighboring house struck up "Swim out, O'Grady, swim out."

Substitute R. J. Reville, who covers the Third ward, reports six-foot drifts near Seventh street and Plainfield avenue.

All of the carriers were frequently obliged to break their own paths, even on their afternoon trips, so rapidly did the boisterous wind refill the cuts. Many kind-hearted citizens provided steaming coffee or hot beef tea for the chilled and snow-covered men, a favor which was duly appreciated by the recipients.

There were but three mails up to six o'clock last evening, a fact which of course somewhat lessened the labor of the carriers, yet they all knew they had been working when they hung up their pouches for the night. The mails referred to were a New York mail at 9:45 a. m., a mail from the South shortly after noon, and three sacks from New York which arrived at 5:10 p. m. All of them were overdue.

The Central trains were all run without regard to time-sheet schedules, there being nothing for Philadelphia between No. 511 which arrived at Plainfield station at 12:50 and No. 525 which reached here at 7:33 p. m. Trains numbered 12 and 14 on the time-sheet eastbound from Easton were combined in one, arriving here at 8 p. m., two hours overdue. One freight only passed through this city during the day, and that was composed of sections of two eastbound fast freights. The first of these two trains is due to pass the station at 1:35 a. m., but did not reach here until 3:45 p. m.

The first train on the Long Branch division plowed its way through at 2 p. m., while the Newark branch was clear at noon and the trains followed time schedules more closely than any other portion of the Central system.

The B. and O. drawbridge over Staten Island Sound at Cartaret was caught by the wind and spun around like a top, stripping off the cogs and disabling the machinery to such an extent that the bridge must be repaired before it can be used again.

The Singer Sewing Machine Company's freight tug "Clark", carrying a crew of eleven, stuck fast in the ice of the Sound and the men suffered fearfully from the cold, one of the men being taken to the General Hospital on arriving at the dock.

The sidewheel steamer "New Brunswick", from New Brunswick to New York, is stuck fast in the ice on Staten Island Sound, and she will be obliged to remain there until the ice breaks up.

The skating is excellent all over the Sound, thousands having taken advantage of this unusual opportunity for sport yesterday and this morning.

Tom Birch, an employe of the Singer Sewing Machine Company Company, found the only weak spot in the ice yesterday morning while making a short cut from his home to the factory, and was fished out with difficulty by some dock hands, in a semi-conscious condition. The doctor who was summoned entertains grave fears that his involuntary bath will bring on pneumonia.

Many tugs are frozen fast at their anchorage. During the night trains occasionally puffed into the station, wholly regardless of time schedules, and in most cases pulled by two huge engines. A snow plow pushed by two "hogbacks" went noisily up the road at 10:33 Several passenger trains with one or two weary travelers aboard slid in and out between 10:30 and midnight. Train No. 16 from Easton due at 8:30 pulled in with two engines and a mixed crew at 12:09 and left three passengers from western points. All western trains were from two to six hours overdue. Freights were stalled all over the system, the weary trackmen and shovelers, many of whom have had no sleep since the storm commenced, having more than they could do to dig out the passenger trains. The train scheduled as No 520, due here at 6:54 p. m. from Philadelphia, pulled by two "hogbacks", ran into a snowbank in the cut just east of Belle Mead, both engines jumped the track and ploughed into the drift, blocking both tracks.

The cut is one of the worst on the road and the drifting snow soon piled high above the smoke stacks. The wrecked engines are being dug out but the tracks cannot be cleared for many hours and Superintendent Peddle of the Central division has issued orders that no Philadelphia trains will run in either direction today. South Branch trains from Flemington are arriving from twenty to thirty minutes late.

The train from Allentown via Easton, due at Plainfield station 10:04, pulled in with two snowplad engines in the lead over an hour behind schedule. Freights are not moving anywhere on the Central system and the freight-house crew are having a vacation in consequence. Mails are arriving irregularly and open very light.

The Southern mail due here at 6:15 a. m. arrived via Elizabeth at 9:32. Few New York mails had been received at time of going to press, the 8:16 which was half an hour late bringing but little as compared with the usual amount.

Very little expressage came in yesterday, delivery being suspended until 11 a. m., when a sleigh made the rounds with perishable goods. This morning only two of the usual fifteen express cars arrived up to 12 o'clock, and they were running very light.

Many edibles have taken a temporary rise in price because of this delay.

It will be days before the railroads will again assume their normal condition.

Over 200 Western Union messages were sent from the local office yesterday, by far the largest business since the blizzard of '88 and unlike that memorable occasion the wires worked perfectly all day. This morning Foreman Meyers of the New York office is putting up a solid cable at the station from which the wires will diverge to the office key board, making a much needed improvement over the old nest of individual wires. This fact has no connection with the storm however, having been contemplated for some time.

A Stranger, But Knew Where to Get a Good Coat.

A colored man, a stranger in Plainfield, passing Harry Werner's clothing store about 6 last evening, was tempted by the coats worn by the dummies.

Thereupon he lifted a nice warm ulster from one of the figures and then walked away.

John Hodgetts, a salesman for Mr. Werner, happened to be standing in the front part of the store, prior to going to supper, and caught sight of the theft.

He saw the man go into the butcher shop opposite, and started after him. The man with the coat then went down the street on a run, and when the store of the Sherman Outfitting Company was reached he threw the coat off, leaving it on the sidewalk. Mr. Hodgetts was unable to catch him. This is the third recent attempt to steal one of Mr. Werner's sample coats. Everybody covets such good clothing.

To Go to Rahway.

Iona Council and Miantonomoh Tribe have accepted an invitation to attend an entertainment and social to be given by Ahwahneeta Tribe, in Rahway, next Friday evening.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

BY THE WAY.

—Baker Henry Lieike has placed a cash register in his store on West Front street.

—A stupid mistake: she forgot to visit Peck's store before leaving town, and now she has the grip.

—Few of the stores were kept open last evening after 6, as the intense cold put business at a standstill.

—No Christian Endeavor meeting was held at the First Baptist Church last evening on account of the elements.

—The snow was removed from the roof of the East Third Street Mission building today, preparatory to a coat of paint which will be put on next week.

—J. T. Vail is kept busy securing tenants for houses and houses for tenants. He is reliable and popular not only in the real-estate business but in insurance matters as well, placing policies that are surely paid if loss comes.

—The special car containing the scenery and effects of "Shaft No. 2" company did not stop in this city yesterday as Station Agent Joseph Haynes sent word to hold it at Elizabeth, on account of postponement of the show, but the word was received too late. The car was sent on to Somerville.

Plainfielders Stormstalled.

A telegram was received from M. C. Dobbins this forenoon, dated at Hopewell, which said that the Plainfield delegation had been on the road from Trenton since 4 p. m. yesterday, and that owing to a wreck near Hopewell they were unable to get home.

They expect, however, to reach Plainfield late this afternoon.

In case the train is unable to move, a relief train will be sent from Bound Brook to Hopewell and the passengers will be transferred and brought through.

Dickie Can't Come.

Samuel Dickie, who was announced to speak at the Gospel temperance meeting in Music Hall, Sunday, Feb. 10, has been suddenly called home to Michigan.

Consequently the meeting has been indefinitely postponed. It is hoped Prof. Dickie will come to this city in the near future, as he is one of the most pleasing speakers on the platform, incontrovertible in argument, but withal kind, winsome and witty.

Lesson of the Blizzard.

There is a difference of opinion as to whether the recent blizzard was as fierce as the blizzard of 1888, but there is no doubt in the average mind as to the need of caring for the eyes, and seeking the best advice regarding the preservation of the sight. For expert information in this regard call at Collier's, where examinations are free.

Trolley Cars Run Again.

The street cars were able to make trips on the main line yesterday afternoon at 4:30, though they were not able to run on time. To-day cars are running as close to schedule as possible.

The Somerset street branch was opened this morning. The scraper was used almost all day, and it is expected that by tonight travel will be resumed on both lines on scheduled time.

Singing After Business.

The meeting of Somerset Council, No. 109, J. O. U. A. M., last evening, was fairly well attended, and very interesting After the meeting there were several vocal solos rendered by Brothers Kreitling, Guttman and Bird of 109, and Theo. Kurzhals and Harry Cook of Franklin, No. 41.

Hot Springs of Plainfield.

Cedar brook, running through James E. Martine's property, is not frozen over, neither is a pond on his premises. A vapor arises from the brook, and from the pond, but neither is frozen. The cause is said to be because both are running spring water.

Cedar Brook Hospitality.

The postman who braved snowdrifts and cold to deliver the mail at Cedar Brook Farm homestead instead of leaving it at the mail box at the entrance, was rewarded by a little hot collation by the farmer occupants.

An Indoor Cycle.

An addition to the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium will probably be a stationary bicycle for exercising the muscles of the legs and the arms.

Treatment of Eczema and Salt Rheum

These two complaints are so tenacious that the readers of The Press should know of the success obtained by using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Where all other treatments have failed, it has made a complete cure.

Perhaps no more horrible case of Salt Rheum was ever reported than that of Wilbur L. Hale quartermaster, Pratt Post, G. A. R., Rondout, N. Y. Several physicians utterly failed to render him any relief; finally one of the physicians suggested that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy be tried, and steady improvement followed its use, and a permanent cure resulted.

It is used with similar success in cases of scrofula, nervousness, kidney and liver complaints, and in all diseases brought about by bad blood and shattered nerves.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. George Moore is ill at her home on Elm street.

Lewis Bond has given up his position with I. H. Boehm.

Frank Smalley of Somerset street was taken ill with the grip yesterday.

H. A. Ostermoor is confined to his home on Belvidere avenue with the grip.

Miss Huff, Howard and Earl Huff, of Emily street, are victims of the grip.

John H. Doane has returned to the Commercial Palace after a short illness.

Miss Mattie Cook of North avenue left today to spend a week with friends in Flemington.

A whist party was enjoyed at the residence of John Messerschmidt, Jackson avenue, last evening.

Fred Smalley of Somerset street, assistant to Photographer Langhorne, is ill with a heavy cold.

Mrs. Charles E. Horne of Willow avenue returned from Brooklyn yesterday after a short stay with relatives in that city.

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Herbert W. Bowen to be Consul-General at Barcelona, Spain. The appointee is a brother of Henry E. Bowen of Watchung avenue.

Miss Elizabeth U. Yates, the attractive and talented worker for the W. C. T. U., is expected to address the meetings of the W. C. T. U. at their rooms tomorrow at 9 a. m. and 4 p. m.

Professor Samuel Dickie, who will address the W. C. T. U. meeting in Music Hall tomorrow afternoon, is chairman of the National Prohibition Executive Committee, and is known as one of the finest orators in the nation.

B. O. Bowers of LaGrande avenue was three hours reaching Plainfield from New York yesterday afternoon. A large number of commuters did not reach home at all last night, on account of the irregularity of trains.

A. M. Frazee, Dr. Adams and Wm. T. Kirk represented Plainfield at the Palestine Commandery ball in Madison Square Garden Thursday evening. Wm. Sebring went to New York with the intention of going to the ball, but the storm prevented. Mr. Frazee returned at 9:15 last evening.

Clearing the Streets.

Street Commissioner Meeker did creditable work in having the huge snowbanks on North and Park avenues leveled in the roadway for sleighing, thus saving expensive carting away.

The mountain of snow in front of the First National Bank was carted away by Mr. Meeker's gang.

J. H. McVey used a hose of hot water in freeing his sidewalk of snow and ice.

The Income Tax.

Counselor Chas. A. Reed explains for the benefit of those who do not yet understand the income-tax law, that Feb. 10 is the date by which blanks must be secured to be filled; and return of the blank, filled by the income-taxpayer, must be made by the first Monday in March.

Grace Church Mission Service

Rev. R. S. Barrett, D. D., the General Missioner of the Parochial Missions Society, will conduct a mission in Grace Church, beginning February 14 and continuing until the 24th.

The object of the services is to enlighten the conscience, and invigorate the spiritual life of those who attend them. They are not intended solely for Grace parishioners, but for the benefit of all who will come to them, and all will be welcome. Sermons will be preached and instruction given by the missioner at these services, on subjects of personal religion and Christian belief and practice.

The services will be as follows:

Sundays—An early celebration of the Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m.; morning prayer, etc. at 10; children's service at 3:30 p. m.; evening prayer at 7:45.

Other days—Morning prayer at 10; instruction in the Christian life at 10:30 a. m.; evening prayer at 4; mission service, sermon and "After Meeting" at 8 p. m.; Holy Communion on Wednesday and Friday at 7:30 a. m.

Made Way for the Vets.

Commander W. W. Cortell of Post 73, this city, who attended the G. A. R. Encampment at Trenton, says that the reception given the Veterans by the Legislators of the Capitol city far exceeded anything of previous years.

The free use of the State House and legislative halls was given without reserve, and adjournment of the Legislature was made while the delegation from the Encampment was present.

The Sound Frozen Over.

Staten Island Sound is still solidly frozen over, and a roadway is being used by pedestrians to and from the island to Elizabethport. Several vessels are frozen up a half mile from their docks. The fall of snow has hidden the Sound from view, and it cannot be distinguished from the meadows.

—The enterprising young men of the North Plainfield Public School have organized a secret society known as the Phi Kappa Phi.

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm and that she has also used it for lame back with great success. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

All members of the High School will be sorry to learn that Mr. Travell's attack of the grip has developed into pneumonia. Miss Sherwin will act as teacher of the Senior class until his return.

Frank, the colored janitor, is now suffering from a badly frozen ear, which he received in trying to remove the heavy snowfall yesterday.

Neither of the French classes met yesterday afternoon, on account of the severity of the weather.

The Kappa Delta Phi met yesterday. No business was transacted, the society simply adjourning until next Friday afternoon.

The High School Lyceum held no meeting, as the members deemed it inadvisable to return in the afternoon.

Mr. Allen, teacher of the sciences, assisted by several of the members of the Geology class, spent the latter part of yesterday morning and yesterday afternoon in arranging the mineralogical collection in the hall on the third floor and analyzing a number of uncatalogued specimens.

The Senior class have secured a number of samples of class pins, but popular opinion does not seem to rest on any certain pin.

Charles F. Holck, formerly the science teacher at the High School, is seriously ill at Cornell. Overwork is said to be the cause of his illness.

Helping a Veteran.

Joseph Skelton of South Bethlehem, who has been stopping in Little Falls, Essex County, for some time past, came to Plainfield last evening about 5, with no money nor place to sleep. He was on his way to his home, and was unable to go any farther.

Mr. Skelton is a Grand Army man, and belongs to the Post in South Bethlehem. He called at M. C. Dobbins's cigar store, where friends provided him with a supper, and later they took him to Cooper's Hotel, where he was given lodging for the night and breakfast this morning.

Today he was assisted to South Bethlehem.

He did not have the appearance of a tramp, and was loth to apply for help, and only did so because he was obliged to.

The Patient Blind Hymn-Writer.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

Few hymns by modern writers have been sung more frequently or more fervently than those of Fanny J. Crosby. There is hardly a modern Sunday-school hymn book that does not contain several beautiful hymns of her writing. In almost every house in the land, and in every Sunday-school, her hymns are sung. Yet it is not universally known that this gifted lady is blind, and that in addition to writing hymns she does a great deal of other Sunday-school work. She recently addressed large audiences in Plainfield, speaking for nearly an hour in one church. She has been blind since her childhood, but does not now consider it a privation, since her faculties are quickened in many other ways as if in part compensation.

A Double-Century of Membership.

Royal Arcanum, No. 711, will have a glorious entertainment Monday evening, Feb 11, on its initiation of its two-hundredth member. The great and celebrated Crosier of Orange will give some of his choice selections, and will be assisted by James R. Phillips with his comic selections, Frederick J. Pope with his baritone solos, and W. E. MacClymont with piano selections.

Every member should be present, and enjoy the lovefeast.

Opening the New Building.

Following is the programme for the opening of the new Y. M. C. A. Building Tuesday evening, Feb. 12:

Scripture reading, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes; prayer, Rev. Cornelius Schenck; address, Hon. Alexander Gilbert; singing double male quartette; address, President W. D. Murray; address, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards; double male quartette; reception.

Death of Miss Terry.

The death of Miss Tillie Terry, which occurred this morning at 6:30 at her home on Richmond street, will be learned with deep sorrow by a large circle of friends.

Miss Terry had been ill for some time, but only for the past two weeks had she been confined to her bed.

The bereaved ones have the sympathy of all in their time of mourning.

The Bacon Matter.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: You will please state to your numerous readers that the slice of bacon the young lady got and the additional quantity was not the real-estate Bacon in the Babcock Building. F. M. BACON.

O. W. O. Hardman, sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

MISS ANNA GOULD TO WED.

Announcement of Her Engagement Comte de Castellane.

Paris, Feb. 9.—The Comte de Castellane, whose engagement to Miss Anna Gould, of New York, is announced, belongs to one of the oldest families in France, their patents dating back to the years 1,000. Prior to that, the heads of the family were princes of Provence and vassals of Charlemagne. The family succession includes many chevaliers of the Ordre de Saint Esprit.

The count's great-grandfather was Marshal de Castellane, who was a famous soldier during the first empire and his grandfather was a deputy under the reigne of Louis Philippe.

His father, the present Marquis de Castellane, was a monarchist deputy in 1871, and since that time has been well known as a literature, his works on modern French history ranking among the classic writings.

The Marquise de Castellane, mother of the comte, is a niece of the Comte de Guigne, whose family is of the creme de la creme of Paris. The Paris residence of the Marquis, and likewise that of the Comte de Castellane, is at No.oo 1 Boulevard de la Tour-Mauborg, and their country residence at he Chateau de Rochecotte, Louraine, where the great Talleyrand, who was an uncle of the present Marquis, lived for twenty years.

The fortune of the marquis consists of land valued at 7,000,000 francs. The Comte de Castellane is a member of the Cercle de l'Union. He is a good horseman and a clever draughtsman.

WHAT VESSEL IS THIS?

An Unknown Ocean Liner Near Thatcher's Island.

Gloucester, Mass., Feb. 9.—The captain and crew of schooner John E. McKenzie say the steamer they saw about dark last evening was steering south-southwest and came quite near, but they could not make out her name. She was steaming slowly and was about fourteen miles south of Thatchers island. They thought at the time that she was the Teutonic. Captain McLeod, of schooner Fannie W. Freeman, who was in the locality of the McKenzie, believes that her crew was mistaken in the ship, for just before dark a large two pole masted steamer, deeply laden, spoke to them, asked how Minot's light bore and if they had seen a pilot. He gave her the course southwest, but she steered half a point south of that. McLeod is sure that the steamer he saw was not the Teutonic, as she is a three-masted ship. The steamer spoken was badly iced-up, hailed from Liverpool, but her name could not be seen. The wind has changed to the west and is still blowing heavily, but the vessels at anchor in the harbor are clear of danger. The fishing fleet suffered greatly by losing dories, fishing gear and everything moveable from their decks, while a large number lost spars, sails and rigging. Several wharves and buildings along the water front are a complete wreck and the damage done is estimated at upwards of $50,000. The mercury is below zero and still falling.

CHASED BY THE ENEMY.

Chee Foo Cannonaded by the Retreating Chinese.

London, Feb. 9.—The Central News correspondent in Tokio telegraphs that Admiral Ito reports from Wei-Hai-Wei under the date of February 7

"While we were bombarding the forts the enemy's torpedo fleet issued from the harbor. A flying squadron chased them and disabled twelve of them, either by sinking them or driving them ashore.

"Captain Samessima reports that in passing Chee Foo harbor he witnessed a heavy cannonade directed towards the harbor, into which shells from the land guns could be seen dropping. He presumed that this outrage was committed by retreating Chinese. The English, French, German, Russian and American warships were in the harbor."

The same correspondent says: "Kai Ping reports mention cannonading in the direction of Ying-Kow, where it is supposed ew troops are drilling and making ready for the advance. The enemy's scouts frequently approach the Japanese advanced lines from two directions. There are no signs of a Chinese retreat. Evidently the enemy are in camp. More than thirty guns have been counted among them by the Japanese."

Malicious Libelling.

Philadelphia, Feb. 9.—The trial of William T. Andrews on the charge of maliciously libelling Filbert Porter & Co., the builders of the Queen Lane Reservoir, by alleging that the contractors defrauded the city out of $350,000 in connection with the work, came to a sudden halt yesterday when Andrews pleaded guilty. The prosecution had finished its case and Andrews, being called to defend himself, his counsel, Joseph P. McCullen, announced that the defendant desired to plead guilty as indicted, and would ask for the court's mercy. Judge Thayer fined Andrews $1,000.

Horses Perish in the Flames.

Fishkill Landing, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Fire here this morning destroyed Peattie Brothers' livery stable and carriage repository. Twenty horses perished in the flames. A block of buildings adjoining the table, with their contents, were also burned. The loss is $100,000; insurance $20,000. On account of the blizzard, which was raging at the time of the fire, the fire department were unable to render any assistance until the buildings were nearly destroyed.

Murder in the First Degree.

New York, Feb. 9.—Among the indictments returned by the grand jury was one for murder in the first degree against Michal Considine. Considine shot John J. Malone, a saloon broker and man about town, in front of the St. James hotel on the night of January 28. Considine claimed that Malone had robbed him of large sums of money.

Safe Stolen.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—A small safe, in which the daily receipts of the American Express company's stock yards branch are transferred to the city office, was stolen from a Lake Shore train bound for this city last night. The amount of money taken was small. It is said the robbery was committed by men from a covered wagon. The safe was found on the tracks empty.

ANOTHER BOND ISSUE

Mr. Cleveland Tells Congress of a Contract.

For the Purpose of Keeping Up the Gold Reserve the President Declares That $62,400,000 Worth of Bonds Will Be Issued—Payable in Thirty Years.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Unless congress in ten days passes a law authorizing the issue of gold bonds bearing 3 per cent. interest and running thirty years or otherwise relieves the treasury in the replenishment of the gold reserve, which is highly improbable, Secretary will, by direction of the president, sell 4 per cent. bonds to the amount of $62,400,000 for gold.

Arrangements, whereby this can be done, and $65,000,000 in gold be received for the bonds, have been perfected and the contingent contract signed.

This official memorandum of the transaction was made public at the treasury yesterday afternoon:

"The contract was made with August Belmont & Co., of New York, on behalf of Messrs. N. M. Rothschild and J. P. Morgan & Co., of London, and themselves, and provides for the delivery to the United States of 3,500,000 ounces of standard gold coin of the United States, to be paid for in United States 4 per cent. bonds.

A large number of other banks and financial institutions are interested in the transaction, but their names are not mentioned in the contract itself. The department does not know in what proportions the various parties are to furnish the gold coin or receive the bonds, as this is a matter for arrangement between themselves.

"By the terms of the contract, the parties are to bear all the expense of bringing gold from abroad, and they are, so far as it lies in their power, to exert all their financial influence, and make all legitimate efforts to protect the treasury against withdrawals of gold pending complete performance of the contract.

"No bonds are to be delivered except in payment for gold actually delivered. In view of the possible failure of legislation in congress, negotiations have been pending for some time here and abroad, and the terms of this contract are the best that could be procured with a coin bond."

The contract was drawn up during the day by Attorney General Olney and Secretary Carlisle, and submitted to J. Lynde Stetson, counsel for the bankers. Mr. J. Pierrepont Morgan, the New York financer, is here and had a conference with Secretary Carlisle at the treasury when all unfinished details were perfected.

Mr. Belmont, it is understood, started for Washington but was snow bound en route, and, therefore, took no personal part in the completing details.

Messrs. Carlisle and Olney remained at the treasury depatment until nearly 1 o'clock, drawing up the contract, and when it was finished they joined the cabinet, which had assembled at 11 oo'clock.

The contract met the approval of the president and his advisers, and the memorandum subsequently made public contains the essential details of the contract.

No further gold withdrawals were reported to the treasury at the close of business. The gold reserve remains at $41,000,000 in round numbers.

When the message was read in the senate, announcing the proposed bond issue, it was received without any comment. It was referred to the committee on finance.

In the house the message was referred to the committee on ways and means.

Chairman Wilson will call the committee together to-day to consider the recommendation of the president.

The London Times on Our Situation.

London, Feb. 9.—The Times will say in a leader on the financial situation in the United States: "Whatever course Congress takes, we shall await the result with equanimity. As for the terms on which the United Sates get gold, nobody here cares a jot except the loaners, whose only concern is that higher interest be paid; but the United States treasury it will be a very real difference. The amount at stake is too large for even a rich nation to be careless about. It is for Congress, as a guardian of the public purse, to take this to account."

Cold Still Continues in Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—The official thermometer registered 13 degrees below zero yesterday—the coldest day of the winter by four degrees. The cold wave froze many ears, hands and feet, and the police found M. Carmody frozen to death at 132 West 18th street during the morning. Prof. Moore, the chief of the weather bureau here said the wave covered almost the entire country, the northwestern states and Canada getting the worst of it. Fifty-two degrees below zero was reported from across the border.

Non-Union Employes Arrested.

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 9.—All of the non-union employes of the Buckeye Glass works were arrested on warrants sworn out by union men, charging riot as a result of the shooting several days ago. An attempt to assassinate Manager Humphreys, of the works, was made by an unknown man, two shots whizzing by Humphrey's head. There is great excitement and fears of serious trouble at the hearing of non-unionists, which is set for this evening.

Storm in New Jersey.

New York, Feb. 9.—The storm in northern New Jersey was very severe. Country roads are completely blocked with snow and railroad cuts are filled with drifts. Trains on all roads are from five to ten hours late and many have been abandoned. Business in all towns is practically suspended.

Strangled Her Child.

New York, Feb. 9.—Mrs. Annie Pensal, aged 29 years, while temporarily insane, evidently from lack of food, yesterday strangled her six months old child, Mary. The woman was taken to the New York hospital where her case will receive attention.

THE TEUTONIC IS SAFE.

No News of La Gascogne, Which Hundreds Are Anxious to Obtain.

New York, Feb. 9.—A steamer supposed to be the Teutonic, passed in at Fire Island yesterday afternoon and Sandy Hook was looked to as the point from which something definite would be received in a few hours. However, up to an early hour this morning no information was obtainable from that point, beyond the fact that the lights of a steamer, which was anchored half a mile northwest of the light ship, had been visible twice. In vain did the marine observer flash the lantern in the hope of receiving signals from the steamer, but no answer was vouchsafed, and a thick haze setting in, excluded all objects from his view, preventing him from securing the desired intelligence which hundreds of anxious ones are eager to obtain. Had it been the Teutonic, or any large vessel, however, signals would probably have gone up from her.

No news of the French liner Gascogne has as yet been received. The agents of both lines express confidence in the abilility of their ships to reach port.

As yet there is no alarm over the late arrival of the Teutonic. The severity of the weather alone is sufficient to account for her delay, and the theory that she is standing by the Gascogne is quite generally credited. There is now little doubt that the Gascogne has met with an accident of some kind. Whether it is disabled machinery causing slow progress or something even more serious is but conjecture.

The Teutonic is reported by tug as being anchored off the Sandy Hook lightship at a late hour this morning.

Other steamers due at this port are the Rhynland, from Antwerp; Manitoba, from London; Oelbers, from Mediterranean ports, and several coasters.

HORSEWHIPPED IN AN OFFICE.

An Irate Mother Applies the Lash to Her Daughter's Lover.

Indianapolis, Feb. 9.—Fred Lorraine, who plays with Lloyd in Damon and Pythias, and who was leading man for Margaret Mather for several years, was horsewhipped in a newspaper office here yesterday by an irate mother. Lorraine was sitting with his back toward the door when the woman entered and lashed him fiercely across the back several times before any one was aware of her purpose.

The whip was taken from her by others and she sank exhausted into a chair. She told Lorraine she wished she had a revolver to shoot him. The woman's name is North and she resides in a suburb of this city.

Her daughter became enamored of Lorraine last fall while with his troupe playing in Indiana. Mrs. North claims that Lorraine is married and that he promised to marry her daughter. He procured a bogus marriage license and would have married her last Thursday had not the mother learned of the plan

PREPARING FOR WAR.

Mexico Purchases Large Quantities of Ammunition.

City of Mexico, Feb. 9.—Despite many signs of peace, Mexico continues her preparations for war, evidently distrusting Guatemala's professions. General Salamanca, chief artillery expert, left the city at the beginning of the week for Vera Cruz, to test the new Krupp guns. On Tuesday the government telegraphed him to return at once. President Diaz's aide-de-camp met him at the station with orders to start the same night for the United States to purchase one million Remington cartridges. The government has entered also into a contract for the purchase of 100 Maxim guns. It looks as if government feared President Barrios' peaceful protestation were meant merely to gain time. Still the general impression here is that war is not improbable, and the government is only taking precautions.

The hotels are full of Americans visitors, and several large purchasese of Mexican land have been made recently.

Business at a Standstill.

Rutland, Vt., Feb. 9.—The storm has ceased in this town. Nearly a foot of snow has fallen and is badly drifted. The railroads have suffered serious delays all day; trains are from two to ten hours late, while the stage from over the mountains have not been hard from. The continued cold has frozen Otter Creek so thoroughly that the mills of the Vermont Marble company at Centre Rutland are idle for want of water. The mercury has ranged from zero to 26 below for four days. Business is at a standstill.

D. L. and W. Train Telescoped.

Norwich, N. Y., Feb. 9.—The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western passenger train, due here at noon yesterday, was telescoped at Woods Corners, one mile north of this village, by a milk train. The baggage car and rear passenger coach were demolished. Both engines were wrecked. Five persons were severely injured in the head and back, but none seriously. The engineers and firemen escaped with but little injury.

She Jilted Him.

Portland, Ore., Feb. 9.—At Hillsboro last night, H. F. Dant, a veteran of the civil war, 50 years of age, shot Mrs. John Mueller and her daughter Mrs. Manning and then killed himself. He had paid the cost of divorce proceedings for Mrs. Manning in consideration of her promise to marry him. She refused and in a quarrel in which Mrs. Mueller took her daughter's part, he committed the crime. Both women will recover.

He Ran an Illicit Still.

Boston, Feb. 9.—The police yesterday discovered an illicit still running in full blast almost in the very heart of the city, and arrested the proprietor, William H. Blair, 32 years of age, who claims to hail from New York, but who has been living at the Back Bay. The place raided was in a five-story brick building at 50 Eastern avenue. Blair was turned over to the United States authorities.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK

Bradstreet Reports Trade Conditions Unchanged.

While the Storm Has Restricted Orders, It Has a Tendency To Stimulate Purchases of Goods—Prices in the Main Have Shown a Favorable Tendency.

New York, Feb. 9.—Extremely low temperature, snow and high winds have visited the greater portion of the country this week, and exercised a marked influence by restricting orders received by jobbers in all staple lines. But they have tended to stimulate purchases of seasonable goods, so that some retailers who have been carrying small stocks contemplate clearing them out almost completely.

General trade at larger eastern centres remains unchanged, except for the check to orders because of delayed railroad traffic, storms and cold. Philadelphia reports continued free sales of dry goods to western jobbers and the volume of January trade showing a favorable comparison with 1894. At Baltimore bills sent south and southwest on the 1st inst. for dry goods, millinery, notions, clothing and shoes have been paid more promptly than expected.

Among southern cities Chattanooga reports that the volume of trade there for January, in spite of the lower range of prices, is equal to that for 1894. In contrast is a decrease in all lines at Augusta, with commercial collections unsatisfactory. Business has fallen off at Atlanta, but at Savannah the situation is unchanged, with jobbers cautious as to opening accounts. A fair volume of business is doing at New Orleans, but collections are poor because of non-payment of sugar bounties. No important change is reported from Memphis, Richmond, Charleston or Galveston.

General trade has been disappointing at Cleveland, Chicago and Detroit because of the check to February business. Cincinnati makes a more favorable report, gains having been shown in the iron and grocery trades, and activity is reported in leaf tobacco at Louisville. At St. Louis stocks of seasonable goods are being cleared out, and some merchants contemplate ordering spring goods more freely, trade in millinery, dry goods, shoes, hardware and groceries having been fairly satisfactory. Omaha, Des Moines and Kansas City report relatively less activity. At Seattle trade in general lines is increasing and collections are improving.

Bank clearings aggregate $979,000,000 this week, about 4 per cent. over last week and 12 per cent. more than in the first week of February, 1894. When compared with the corresponding week in 1893 the falling off this week is about 21 per cent., and even when compared with the first week in February, 1892, the decrease this week is only 26 per cent.

The New York stock market has been waiting for the results on currency legislation and the expected bond issue. The uncertainty about the latter checked buying, but the belief that the issue would be announced stopped bearish manipulation of the market.

Prices, in the main, have shown a favorable tendency, sugar alone of the more prominent staples declined in price within the week. Even cotton has remained firm at last week's closing quotation, and wool and coffee are unchanged. Prices are also steady for pig iron and for steel billets, though request for the same is not equal to expectations, improvement in this industry being in the demand for plates, bar and structural varieties. Live cattle and hogs are firm, with an upward tendency, particularly within a day or two. Advances in prices include those for leather at some points, fruit and porduce under the stimulus of the cold weather, and wheat, corn and oats and pork and lard. Anthracite coal is reported firmer, with improved demand.

Exports of wheat (flour included as wheat) from both coasts of the United States amount to only 2,020,521 bushels this week, against 2,483,000 bushels last week, 2,678,000 bushels in the week one year ago, 3,931,000 bushels two years ago, and 3,641,000 bushels three years ago. Weekly reports of wheat within the past four weeks have steadily declined from 3,564,000 to 2,020,521 bushels.

The damage by the Florida freeze was exaggerated. A large portion of the orange crop had already been marketed. Late crop and that held for higher prices was caught and destroyed. Some young trees were hurt, but old groves were practically uninjured. Heavy losses fell on large growers. A good but small crop is expected this year. Results of Florida naval stores and phosphate industries, truck and berry farming are said to have been fairly satisfactory.

Severe weather in the province of Ontario has interfered with the volume of trade, yet merchants at Toronto and elsewhere in the province regard the outlook for spring business hopeful. Similar features are reported from the province of Quebec, where mercantile collections have improved when compared with the corresponding period last year. Halifax wires that general trade in Nova Scotia is fair, but commercial payments are slow.

Heavy Loss by Fire.

Binghamton, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Fire broke out about midnight in the basement of the three-story brick building in Washington street, occupied by Bloomer's dry goods store and owned by Harvey Westcott. After a stubborn fight the firemen succeeded in confining the flames to the basement. The loss, which is almost wholly confined to Bloomer's stock, is about $25,000 with $15,000 insurance.

Suffocated by Gas.

Baltimore, Feb. 9.—Joseph Whitcombe, 40 years old, of Wrightsville, Pa., was found dead in bed yesterday in his room at Duke's hotel. The gas cock was turned on and death was caused by suffocation.

The Law Satisfied.

Fort Madison, Ia., Feb. 9.—J. K. Cumberland was hanged here at 11 o'clock this morning. He was unmoved, and protested his innocence to the last.

IN THE STORM ALL NIGHT

Terrible Experience of a Woman in the Woods.

Loses Her Way While Proceeding to Bloomfield—Amputation Necessary to Save Life—The Sufferer in a Terrible Condition—Cared for by a Stranger.

Montclair, N. J., Feb. 9.—An unknown German woman, almost frozen to death and likely to lose both her feet and hands, is lying in a darkened room in the home of Mrs. Peter Coffman, who resides on the old Kenter estate in Somerset, N. J. It was about 10 o'clock yesterday morning when Mrs. Coffman heard a strange sound at the door. The thoughts of a visitor in such weather never entered her head, but she went at once to the door.

There to her horror she saw a woman apparently about twenty years old, lying exhausted on the doorstep. The unfortunate creature was blue from the cold; her dress was like a sheet of tin, so bright and hard it looked. Mrs. Coffman wasted no time. She summoned aid and had the frozen woman carried to a warm room, where she was then placed in a bed. Simple remedies were energetically administered while the sufferer moaned pitifully. Everything that could possibly alleviate her pain was promptly done by Mrs. Coffman, and word sent for Dr. A. H. Van Riper, who arrived in due time.

The physician was amazed at the condition of the patient, and at once declared that she must have been exposed in the cold for many hours. He proved to be correct on this point but the patient was unable to tell her story at that time and no one thought of questioning her until she should be in a better condition to talk.

The doctor made a hasty examination, and confirmed Mrs. Coffman's suspicions by saying that the young woman's feet were frozen. The proper remedies were applied by the physician and after making a more careful examination he made the sad announcement that the amputation of the sufferer's feet would be necessary to save her life, and he had grave doubts as to whether or not her hands could be saved.

Under the doctor's treatment and the kindly ministrations of Mrs. Coffman the sufferer revived sufficiently to tell her story piecemeal. She talked with great difficulty. To her sympathizers she said that she had started on Wednesday to visit her sister in Bloom field. She did not stop to consider the cold nor the distance, and started off at a brisk walk for her sister's home. Before she had gone far the cold began to affect her, and she pushed bravely on until she discovered that she had lost her way.

The pain in her hands was intense, and her feet were cold but gave her no particular distress. On and on she went, but the further she walked the more bewildered she became. Finally she got to a point in the woods where the wind howled dismally around her. Her screams and calls for aid brought no assistance, but simply snapped her remaining strength.

Like one under the influence of liquor the woman staggered on for a short distance, and then, cold, worn, exhausted, and numb from the cold she sat down to rest. This action did not cause her death is a miracle, and her auditors were astonished beyond words when she told them in a voice almost inaudiable that she had been in the woods all night, at times walking, then running, again sitting down, and at times lying at her full length on the cold ground.

When daylight at last came she made a mighty effort to find a place of refuge, and after walking a great distance discovered the isolated house occupied by Mrs. Coffman. Joy filled her heart and bouyed her up to renewed efforts. She alternately cried and screams, but no one hard her cries of distress. With courage born of despair she struggled bravely on, and with one last effort reached the Coffman house. She gave a long cry of mingled pain and relief and sank down at the entrance to the house, where she was found by Mrs. Coffman.

The story told, the young woman sank back on the bed utterly exhausted and though she revived somewhat soon after she was not questioned further, not even to acertain her name.

She is in a terrible condition, and the fact that she is alive is a most surprising one. Physicians said there was hope of saving her feet, but amputation of the hands may not be necessary.

LASHED TO THE RIGGING

Schooner Emma Wrecked in the Fearful Gale.

The Crew Take to the Rigging, but Finding They Are Freezing, Four Attempt to Make Shore in a Boat—Their Fate Unknown—The Storm in the East—Navigation at a Standstill—Many Lives Lost.

New York, Feb. 9.—The storm that struck this vicinity raged with great violence all through Thursday night, and up to 7 a. m. yesterday five and one-half inches of snow had fallen. At that hour, when thousands of persons were on their way to work, the wind was blowing at the rate of sixty miles an hour. It was a veritable blizzard, and recalled with striking vividness the great blizzard of '88. Heavy robes and wraps were absolutely necessary for all persons who ventured out of doors and despite the extraordinary precautions taken there was general discomfort, and delicate persons, particularly women and children, suffered severely.

The icy atmosphere was keen and piercing, and the cold was intensified by the howling gale that swept through the streets. Persons whose occupations compelled them to face the wintry blast, such as surface car employes, bundled themselves up as warmly as possible, but they suffered intensely during the day and night. The motormen were probably the greatest sufferalmot in the indsiev(etaoin shrhhhhr ers, as they are compelled to remain almost in the same position during an entire trip, and many of them had their finger tips nipped by Jack Frost.

The heavy snow fall greatly impeded travel and traffic, and all street car lines experienced great trouble in keeping their cars in motion even as early as midnight on Thursday. During the early hours of yesterday the trouble increased to such an extent that the running of cars in some cases was abandoned. New York experienced a great deal of blocked travel, but in the neighboring cities of Brooklyn and Jersey City the trouble was greater. In this city impatient crowds filled all the elevated stations of the four lines during the early hours. Travel, even on the elevated, was slow and uncomfortable.

Quarantine, S. I., Feb. 9.—During the howling gale Thursday night the little fishing schooner Emma was endeavoring to make a harbor in Gravesend bay. When almost abreast of Swinburne Island, lower quarantine, a floe of drift ice came out of the Narrows with the ebb tide and forced the little craft over upon the west bank between Hoffman and Swinburne islands. As soon as she struck she heeled over and began to fill and the ice crushing down upon her, started the seams and sprung the decks. The snow was so thick that neither Captain Hanson nor his crew of eight men could tell how near land they were, but they lashed themselves to the rigging and waited for help. The howling gale effectually drowned all sounds and they gave up the attempt to attract attention to their plight.

About midnight four of the crew decided to risk themselves in a dory in the hope of making the shore. The gale was hauling gradually to westward when the four men launched their dory and in a few moments the driving snow hid them from the view of Captain Hansen and the four remaining sailors. They have not been heard of since. The cold was numbing and the spray froze as it fell, covering all hands with ice an inch thick. It soon became apparent that to remain on the wreck meant certain death from exposure and Capt. Hansen and his men decided to risk themselves in a small boat and make an attempt to reach shore. They started and after hours of battling with the drifting ice, the Fort Tomkins light was sighted and the shore under the bluff was soon gained. Nearly dead from exhaustion the five men reached the door of Keeper Davey's house and knocked for admission. When Davey heard the summons he hastened to admit the sufferers and did everything in his power for them.

His wife at once set about brewing hot drinks and getting blankets and dry clothing. Capt Hansen and his four men, after thawing out, seemed none the worse for their experience and they ate heartily of a bountiful breakfast and then started for New York.

The Emma was a two-masted schooner. Captain Hansen and his men saved only the clothes they stood in. If the dory containing the four other men was not blown out to sea they may have been able to reach Coney Island or Bath Beach. Telephonic communication with Hoffman and Swinburne islands is interrupted and even if the fishermen succeeded in reaching one of the quarantine islands, no news would be had until one of the departments tugs calls there.

Boston, Feb. 9.—A Halifax dispatch to the Globe says that one hundred houses and business buildings have been swept away at Cape Breton by an awful tidal wave. It is believed many lives were lost.

Dubois, Pa., Feb., 9.—On account of the blizzard all passengers trains have been annulled on the four roads reachroading here. At Rockton, ten miles from here, on the Clearfield & Mahoning road, a passenger train is stalled in a drift and unable to get through. Three engines were sent out to render assistance to the passenger train, but were unable to get as far as Rockton or return here.

Altoona, Pa., Feb. 9.—Hundreds of men from the Pennsylvania railroad shops were taken to the mountains to shovel snow. All trains are from four to five hours late in consequence of the heavy drifts. A gale is blowing and the thermometer hovered about the zero mark all day.

Port Jefferson, N. Y., Feb. 9.—This harbor is frozen solid. The weather is so thick the entrance to the harbor cannot be seen.

Three Killed; Fourteen Injured.

Paris, Feb. 9.—An explosion occurred in a foundry at Joisville, in the Department of Haute-Marne, yesterday killing three men and injuring fourteen.

TO FIGHT AGAINST VICE.

It Takes Strong Nerves and Clear Brain These Days.

The Rev. I. P. Quimby of the Broadway Church, Boston, Says It is His Duty to Recommend Paine's Celery Compound—It Makes People Well.

REV. I. P. QUIMBY.

Clergymen today need big hearts and sound nerves to accomplish all the good they intend.

It isn't merely the fact of preaching once a week that makes the life of the minister of today so wearing on nerves and brain. Their every-day labor is a round of exacting duties that tax heavily their nervous strength.

The modern minister must keep up his enthusiasm, his hopefulness and his genuine love of his work. He must feel strongly, think deeply and have confidence in his labor and in himself.

But all this taxes heart and brain to their uttermost. It calls for a tremendous outlay of nervous energy seven days in the week and 365 every year. Many clergymen break down utterly under the nervous strain.

Rev I P. Quimby, the well known Boston preacher, has been saved from nervous prostration.

In a publication of his Sunday School he has recently published the following open letter:

BOSTON, Nov. 20, 1894.

Never in my life have I commended any proprietary medicine, but I would be derelict in duty if I failed to let the public know what a great boon to humanity I believe Paine's celery compound to be. With a family of seven, I have not paid a dollar for a doctor in ten years, and I owe it to the fact that I always keep Paine's celery compound on hand, and when any of us are "out of sorts," administer it.

Both wife and I, in our arduous church work, are often, by anxiety and overwork, reduced to the verge of nervous prostration, and as often, by the use of Paine's celery compound, restored to our wonted energy of mind and vigor of body.

Our sons who are young pharmacists, tell us they sell more of Paine's celery compound than any two proprietary medicines, not excepting the sarsaparillas.

Yours for Paine's celery compound,

REV I. P. QUIMBY,
Pastor of Broadway Church, Boston, Mass.

When the nervous strength has become from any cause impoverished, Paine's celery compound succeeds as nothing else has ever done.

From a state of depression, exhaustion and lifelessness the nerves grow strong, active and perfectly nourished by means of Paine's celery compound, the great modern nerve and blood remedy that makes people well. And with the strengthing and regulating of the nerves the disorders that depend on the faulty nutrition of these tissues disappear. Such are rheumatism, neuralgia, heart weakness, headaches, low spirits, lack of strength, and that general poor health that is so impossible to define.

Sound nerves, healthy blood and an all round vigorous constitution of the body is the invariable effect of taking Paine's celery compound. This great modern restorative corrects derangement of the nervous system and averts prostration when protracted strain has reduced it to an exhausted, poorly fed, devitalized condition Try it.

A Hero In the Foretops.

Feb. 9 is the anniversary of Commodore Truxton's first battle in the good ship Constellation. On that day, in 1799, he vanquished the smartest French man-o'-war in the West India waters, L'Insurgente.

When the fight opened, Midshipman David Porter stood in the foretops to signal below news of the damage made in the rigging by the Frenchman's broadsides. He saw a cannon ball cut its way through the mainmast. Thus weakened, the mast was in danger of going down under the load of ropes and yards and sails which hung aloft. When Porter hailed the deck, officers and men were busy fighting the guns and either thought the boy was beside himself or else were too excited to think of their own welfare. He got no response, so decided to act in his own way. The French sailors aimed at Truxton's spars and rigging almost wholly, and for that reason the hottest place on the American ship was aloft.

The young midshipman knew how the shots flew up there from his experience in the foretop, but he bravely climbed the mainmast in the teeth of the iron storm, cut away the stoppers and cleared the run for the yard to slip down with all its weight of canvas and lines.

—Only eleven out of the usual seventy boys reported at Mr. Leal's school yesterday morning, and they only arrived there to return home again, as Mr. Leal decided there was to be no school until Monday morning.

—Only 57 children were present at the opening of the Franklin School yesterday morning, though all but two teachers (one of whom, Miss Sutphen, was absent because of illness) braved the elements to be present at their posts.

—The snow on East Front street in front of the Johnston property has drifted to the height of the hedge fence, which is five feet. Gardener McCann and his assistants are rapidly removing it, to open a thoroughfare for pedestrians.

—As Mr. White says, there is satisfaction in buying goods from a store that will refund the money as cheerfully as they sell you the goods. It often happens that what you have bought does not quite suit after you get it home, but you know you can take it back and get your money at White's.

—It may be, gentle reader, that you have been a little self-indulgent this cold weather, and remained at home amid its comforts during the time of church service. We submit whether it would not be the proper thing for all Plainfielders who are not sick or infirm to attend service tomorrow. Your presence would cheer the faithful ones who have cared for the church's interest during your absence.

TEUTONIC AT HER PIER.

She Came Up the Bay Early This Morning, Weighted Down with Ice.

New York, Feb. 9—The White Star liner Teutonic came up the bay a mass of ice this morning, and was moored to her pier after one of the toughest trips ever experienced on the Atlantic Ocean.

For sixty-two hours she was hove to in the teeth of a howling gale, with her boats at the davits ready for lowering at moment's notice.

The Teutonic arrived off the Sandy Hook lightship at 5:35 Thursday afternoon, but the gale so increased in fury that Capt. Cameron put about and ran off shore seventy miles, where she remained for nearly twenty-four hours. She was uninjured and all on board reported well.

It took her nearly seven and one-half days to make the trip, which she usually covers in between five and six days.

It took her twenty-six hours to pass the bar, even after she came within a few miles of Sandy Hook.

She was compelled to stand off shore when within three miles of the Hook and steam seventy miles to the southeast while waiting for the weather to moderate.

When she did finally reach the bar at 7:04 last night she was encrusted from stem to stern in several inches of ice, and her masts, funnels and everything else above deck were covered.

Not only did she bring over all of her own passengers in safety, but she also had on board when she arrived nine men whom she rescued from the fishing schooner Josie Beeves after an exciting struggle of several hours.

Altogether the voyage was one of the most tempestuous known in the history of the White Star line, or in that of any other line, for that matter. From the time of passing Daunt's Rock light at 1:03 on the afternoon of Jan. 31 the Teutonic encountered a succession of gales, increasing from time to time to hurricane force, and of high head seas. The cold was intense, and the fierce wind froze fast the spray which dashed up against the vessel.

ROMANY'S PRINCE WILLIAM.

He Lives Near East Hartford—His Tribe Are Noted Horse Trainers.

One of the most famous representatives of Romany Rye in this country is Prince William, as he is called, who, with his family, lives near East Hartford. There are branches of the family at New Haven and Bridgeport. The East Hartford branch of the family is the main branch.

The Williamses are all horse dealers. Attached to their residence are stables which, in winter, always contain a stock of fine blooded draft horses.

One of the interesting sights at the stables are the wagons that are used by Prince William and his family when they go off on their annual nomadic pleasure trips. These wagons cost from $1,000 to $2,500. Prince William's private wagon cost $2,500 and is fitted up in regal style.

In these trips around the country the whole family joins. These trips are made in the summer, spare horses being taken along and sold or traded. This means a cavalcade of a dozen fancy wagons and about 100 horses.

The start is made about the 1st of August, the entire family—men, women and children—being taken along. The party keeps together, traveling by easy stages, about 20 miles a day being considered a good journey. When in a hurry, they can make 40 miles a day.

The place selected for the night's rest is usually a grove. There the wagons are drawn up in a circle, fires are lighted and the evening meal prepared.

After supper the whole party gather around Prince William's tent or wagon, and the affairs of the family are discussed. A watchman patrols the camp all night to watch the horses.—New York Times.

—The farmhouse of J. Warren Brown in Westfield was burned last night.

REMOVAL.

Dr. Lighthill begs leave to give notice that he has removed to

NO. 132 CRESCENT AVE.

(a few doors from his former location) where he can be consulted on all chronic diseases of whatever name and nature.

Dr. Lighthill refers with pardonable pride to the success of his practice in Plainfield and submits below a few of the many testimonials which he has received from grateful patients. A mass of similar ones can be seen at his office.

AN ALMOST MIRACULOUS CURE.

The Statement of Mr. Edward Teel, Jr., of Dunellen, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

From a sense of duty I desire to call public attention to the almost miraculous cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in the case of my wife. For eleven years she had been afflicted with piles of an unusual severe and distressing character. She suffered every day of her life the most intense pain, attended with frequent and profuse hemorrhage. This state of things debilitated her entire system until she became a perfect wreck of her former self.

We made every effort to obtain a cure but they all resulted in bitter disappointment, although a number of physicians of excellent reputations for skill in that direction had treated her case. She grew worse and worse all the time, the pain became perfectly unbearable and I felt she could not bear the strain of her condition much longer. In this extremity, a friend of mine, Mr. W. E. Dilts, a resident of Roselle, N. J., a passenger conductor on the New Jersey Central told me that he had been similarly affected, and had been permanently cured by Dr. Lighthill, after other medical skill had failed. He assured me that the doctor would cure my wife, no matter how severe her case may be, and his prediction proved perfectly correct. In spite of her desperate condition, Dr. Lighthill I am glad to say, has effected a complete and perfect cure in her case, and has given her new life.

Since the cure has been effected she has gained in health and strength and is so improved in appearance that her friends scarcely recognise her. They all consider her cure as almost miraculous, and Dr. Lighthill's praise is heard on every side. Our gratitude to Dr. Lighthill is unbounded and we only hope that other sufferers may be benefited by this publication.

EDWARD TEEL, JR.

A Flattering Testimonial from Colonel John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 27, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing with which I was afflicted.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly; they were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleeping and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 132 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOMAS CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card From Mr. T. R. VanZandt, of Nos. 304 and 306 Park ave., Plainfield, N. J

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks, but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose flattering testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

FORMAL OPENING OF OUR

Grocery Department!

SATURDAY, FEB. 9.

A few plain remarks in connection with this new departure we think is opportune.

A few months ago I rented and fitted up at a heavy expense my present elegant and spacious stores, with the intention of giving Plainfield a department store second to none in the State.

As I have progressed from one improvement to another, I find that if I fulfill my plan, I must of necessity, add a first class Grocery Department, in order to compete with New York and Brooklyn department stores, as many of my patrons are buying these goods there, and I desire me to furnish them with their Groceries together with their Dry Goods, Housefurnishings, etc.

I am very much surprised as I have talked to people in regard to this movements, to find that there is such a large proportion of this trade going to New York department stores, and I shall make a strong effort to induce it to remain at home—where it belongs.

I shall do all I can to counteract the too prevalent idea abroad that Plainfield is an expensive place to live in on account of the high prices on articles of food, as real estate agents often say they are obliged to meet this objection when trying to sell or rent houses to New York and Brooklyn people.

We shall, therefore, sell our goods, which will always be of the best quality to be had, at what may be known as cut prices.

THE MAIDEN AND THE BURGLAR.

She was a maiden, coy but forty,
Unsullied by a dream of man
No thought, however slightly naughty,
Had ever crossed her life's short span.

Till one dark night, when all were sleeping,
She found the wretch she long had sought;
For underneath her bed lay peeping,
A poor, lone burglar, freshly caught.

She locked the door and quickly turning
Pulled forth a pistol freshly cocked;
And with a voice that told its yearning,
Her prisoner's plight she sternly mocked,

"Now, listen to my ultimatum:
You've got to marry me or die;
Though you're the very lowest stratum,
I'll have a husband or know why."

Then rose the burglar, sadly speaking:
"Your proposition does not suit;
Rather than be the man you are seeking,
Why, darn you, madam, darn you, shoot!"
—Youngstown Vindicator.

A FEMININE UNSURPATION.

Affecting Story of a Woman Who Read Out of Her Neighbor's Paper.

Every man was reading his evening paper when the Third avenue elevated left the City Hall station, and one of the women was also reading a paper. It was not hers, however, and was the property of the man who sat in the seat next to her.

She was a large woman of full growth, and filled most of the seat, so that the man, who must have been born a long way from the land of Anak, slipped edgewise into the fraction of the seat that was left vacant at the woman's side.

He mildly put on a pair of spectacles and began to read his paper, and the stout woman fixed a pair of gold eyeglasses on her firm, aggressive nose and began to read it, looking down over the man's shoulders and her own pectoral expanse. The man reached the end of the page and gave the paper a prepartory shake and rustle before turning the sheet when the woman laid her hand on his arm.

"One moment, sir," she said severely; "I have not finished reading the first page yet."

The little man gave a rabbit-like glance upward and sidewise.

"Excuse me, madam," he replied meekly, and held the paper unturned.

But the little man was a strategist. He could conduct a masterly retreat if he could not originate an attack; and when the train stopped at Chambers street he bolted, with a fine assumption of its being his stopping place. But those who looked out of the windows saw him dart down the platform and take refuge in the very last car.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

Or the Millionaire's Sweet Regrets Over the Old Farm He Let Go for a Song.

It was summer time. The office window was open. The old millionaire had come up to confer with his lawyer, and had been told he could now foreclose his mortgage on a fine and coveted corner which he knew he could bid in for a song. He therefore felt at peace with all the world, and he wished that everybody might banish uncharitable and sordid thoughts and be of good cheer. He took off his hat and wiped his brow.

"I am thinking of going out into the country," he said, speaking in a kind tone of that humble region. "I like the country. We don't really know what life is here. I often wish I were back. I had a farm before I came to town—about 500 acres—as pretty land as ever laid outdoors—high, rolling sandy loam; oh! fine pastures, plenty of woods, and running springs right on the place—never went dry the dryest season, and a magnificent orchard. I sold out about ten acres all to grafted fruit before I sold, and looked to seein' 'em bear—I could have sold ev'ry bar'l of apples for $2 right on the ground.

"But I sold—I sold. Yes, sir, I sold that 500 acres—$80 an acre, and came here and put every dollar into corners. Of course, hitting it just the time I did, the money has turned itself a good many times; but I don't know; I often wish I hadn't sold the old farm. I sold it to my brother-in-law for $80 an acre. That was twenty years ago, and I don't suppose he could get $40 an acre now——"

Here the sad repiner engaged in silent thought of his brother-in-law pounding clods on the depreciated farm, and became suffused with such joy that, as he arose and put on his hat, he seemed like a statue of Ecstacy.

"No, sir; I don't suppose he could get $40. Fine farm, too."—Puck.

Woes of a Millionaire Congressman.

I found a millionaire member of Congress sitting in his hotel the other day surrounded by gloom so dense that it could have been shovelled away like snow from the sidewalk, and asked him what had happened. "I was just thinking," he said, "what a fool I was to come to Congress. It cost me $12,000 cash to pay my campaign expenses, in addition to two months' neglect of my business. When I am home about two-thirds of my time is taken up by people who come in to ask for offices. I have had candidates for foreign missions, consulates, department bureaus, United States attorneys, pension agents, about forty post offices and no end of Indian agents and land offices, and all I've succeeded in getting since Cleveland was inaugurated is one assistant keeper of a lighthouse, a place for which there was no candidate, and they asked me to hunt up a man. I scarcely dare go home. I am being cursed all over my district by people who think I'm indifferent to their interests and ungrateful to my friends. It will take six weeks' steady talking to explain why I haven't been able to get all the Republican officeholders in the district turned out and Democrats put in, and not half the people who hear the explanation will believe me. Until now I have never sought anything that couldn't be bought, but I've spent $10,000 worth of my time trying to get a $1,200 consular appointment for the son of one of my constituents, and can't make it. My business is going to ruin for want of attention, and there is a basket of letters on my desk at home that I have never had time to read."

"Yes'm."

"And the children tied to the bed-post in the nursery?"

He Wouldn't.

"I would die for you!" insisted the rich old suitor.

"Oh, it's very easy to promise," rejoined the maiden skeptically.—Judge.

SCOTCH PLAINS AND FANWOOD

John H. Thys has left his position with Liveryman Keeley of Plainfield, and returned home.

Gustave Kenhule, a plumber in the employ of R. Jahn, intends suing A. L. Frentz for injuries received by a pair of stairs falling on him while at work on one of Mr Schultz's houses on Stony Hill. Mr. Kenhule claims it was through the carelessness of Mr. Frentz's workmen he received his injuries.

Fanwood Council, R. A., meet at their rooms in Excelsior Hall Tuesday evening.

Sheriff Kyte has been confined to his house with the grip.

DeMotts stage made every trip yesterday, notwithstanding the weather.

Mrs. William H Dean of Diamond Hill is confined to her bed with pneumonia.

John Oliver of Kearney spent Thursday with friends in town.

John Force, proprietor of Force's Hotel, should receive the thanks of all residents on Front street for making paths both sides of the road, after every snowstorm.

W. R. Buckley has accepted a position with a large wholesale grocery house of New York as salesman.

Regent W. E. Collins will entertain the entertainment committee of Fanwood Council at his home this evening.

Mrs. Philip Blank is confined to the bed with the grip.

Joseph Nestor while driving from Cranford yesterday frosted his face and ears.

The blizzard of Thursday and Friday held full sway in town, keeping business men home from the city, the school was closed, no prayer meeting was held at the Baptist Church last evening, and the morning mail did not arrive from New York until after 3 in the afternoon.

The tea which was to have been held at the Library rooms yesterday, was postponed on account of the storm.

John Schelen, employed at the Ackerman farm, attempted to make a path through town yesterday morning with a horse and snow-plow, but the snow drifted in again as soon as they were opened.

—The blizzard was felt in the West End yesterday, especially at the Grant Avenue station, where the passengers and ticket agent found it cold work waiting for the trains. There was a good fire in the furnace, but owing to its not having any coal in the box no heat was forced up.

$100 Reward $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure.

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.

So limited has been the supply of GENUINE ANTITOXINE heretofore, that sales have been made only on condition of immediate actual use. But amid so large a population as ours, an urgent demand for the new treatment may arise at any hour, night or day, Sunday or week-day. And delay in obtaining it might result fatally. I have therefore, with some difficulty, and at considerable expense, provided a complete outfit of Antitoxine Serum (with injector) and am prepared to meet such demand. The cost of an outfit (serum of two powers and Koch injector) is now about $12 being only one-fourth of the earlier price. At present sales will be made only on the order of a practicing physician.

BAR-LOCK VISIBLE WRITING TYPEWRITER

Writes every letter in sight of operator. Does most of the work, in writing AUTOMATICALLY, and yields in the time thus saved additional work.

It acts as if it studied the convenience of the operator at every turn, and thereby lightens his labor and renders him capable of doing more.

It has a knack of keeping well, and is always ready at critical or other times.

These are some of the reasons why it is different from all other writing machines.

The catalogue tells you more about it. FREE.

A SILENT TOWN.

CHILMARK, MARTHA'S VINEYARD, FAIRLY SPEECHLESS.

The Sign Language Universal. A Taint of Heredity Carried Through Successive Generations for Two Hundred and Fifty Years. The Social Caste.

Martha's Vineyard's deaf and dumb inhabitants afford one of the strongest instances of the power of heredity ever recorded. Here is the isolated little community of Chilmark, primitive New England folk of the purest strain, numbering 146 persons, of whom 36, men, women and children, are deaf and dumb and were born so. That is to say, of the entire population 25 per cent. are speechless—one in every four.

In five families of Chilmark, of the 28 children 15 are deaf and dumb.

Stop and consider what this peculiar marvel of science and sociology means in a place where all the citizens, every family, and all the children, come in contact with each other every day for years.

Every fourth person, for instance, who goes to the village grocery, can't tell in words what he wants to buy. Every fourth Chilmark citizen who applies for his mail at the Squibnocket Post Office is unable to utter his name. When the Chilmark ladies gather for the weekly sewing circle, as likely as not the same fatal proportion of one in four prevents several gossip-loving females from relishing the latest and choicest bits of social and domestic small talk without the aid of an interpreter.

All the boys and girls who go to the village school and the school mistress herself must understand the significance of the mystic signals and combinations which make up the finger language of those whom heredity has deprived of speech.

Chilmark is thus divided into three parts intelligence and one part unintelligence. Social lines are drawn at "the hearing Smiths" and "those deaf Joneses," and the "hearing son" of the deaf Mr. Robinson must not be confounded with his unfortunate deaf brother.

So it happens that every day in the year this queer little community down by the thundering shores of the Atlantic Ocean is the scene of a series of singular pantomimes, carried on in the streets, in the stores, in the family circle, and from Chilmark back doors.

The grim pathos of this condition as it appears at first glance to the outsider is in great measure diminished when it is learned that these kindly and generally well-informed people are proud of their affliction and have come to regard it as a kind of plume in the hat of the race. They know that they are living examples of one of Nature's inexorable laws, and are therefore unique, and where there are so many of them the horror and the shame of the affliction become less keenly felt.

Elsewhere the afflicted are screened as much as possible from public gaze, and invariably from public notoriety. But these people gave me a great lot of photographs of ancestors extending back four generations. These are all pictures of people who never spoke a word from the day of their birth.

Martha's Vineyard is peopled mostly by Mayhews, who occasionally let in an outsider under pledge of good behavior and due regard to their supremacy.

Edgartown, the first inhabited portion of the island, was founded by a Mayhew, Governor Thomas Mayhew, in 1642. He had a crown grant of the island and settled there as a missionary to the Indians. Many of the homes in the island have a litographed family tree of the Mayhews hung up on their parlor walls, showing the ramifications and early intermarriages of this sturdy stock.

The early Mayhews were entirely unafflicted and devoted themselves to establishing Indian schools, teaching the Indian girls to spin, &c. But Benjamin Mayhew, their descendant, who flourished at the end of the last century, had eleven children, four of whom were congenitally deaf and dumb.

Thus it seems that Chilmark is a community, two of whose first settlers were deaf and dumb, and their descendants have perpetuated the misfortune to an alarming extent. This has happened purely as an atavistic occurrence. It cannot be discovered that any of the instances of intermarriage have been nearer than third or fourth cousins. It cannot, therefore, be said that results, in the shape of deterioration of an originally sturdy stock, which invariably follow the marriage of close relatives, have been factors in this case.

Chilmark is an unusually healthy place. Its inhabitants are tall, well formed and sturdy, and live to an old age. If they die at eighty they are thought to die young. Lovely, fourth child of the original Benjamin Mayhew, is still living at the ripe age of ninety-seven years. An age of 100 is almost frequent in the neighborhood.

ABOUT TO PROMISE TOO MUCH.

How the Diffident Young Rector Narrowly Escaped Making a Bad Break.

"It was during the war of the rebellion," said the diffident and blushing assistant rector, addressing the Young People's Friday Night Prayer Meeting, "that a company of Union soldiers were ordered to take a rebel battery. Quickly they sprang to the charge, but alas! before they reached the guns they broke and fled ignominiously.

"That is, all except a certain corporal, who rushed in and seizing a gunner by the throat, carried him off, an astonished captive.

"And when the company reached the little clump of woods from whose shelter they had started, they gathered around the gallant corporal and asked him where he had got his prisoner, and how he managed to capture him.

"'I went in and took him,' said the hero, modestly. 'Ah, boys, why didn't you keep on? There was a man for every one of you there!'

"And so I say to you, my dear young Christian soldiers," continued the rector fervent, "there is a man for every one of you in this world.

"Yes, my dear young brothers, there is a man for every one of you here!

"Yes, my dear young sisters, there is—er—there is—er—there is work for you all in the vineyard of the Lord if you will only seek for it.

"Let us now sing the 425 hymn:

"Oh, save me from the careless word,
The swift, unbidden thought,
And make me always think and speak
Exactly as I ought.

And the young assistant sat down with an intensely relieved expression, and mopped his burning brow.—Puck.

MAJ. A. FRANK HUTCHINS.

The Great Band Leader Tells His Wife's Wonderful Cure by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy—Mrs. Hutchins Adds Her Own Forceful Words About This Grand Medicine.

BAND MASTER, MAJOR A. FRANK HUTCHINS.

As Sousa naturally fills the place of Gilmore, so the mantle of the great cornetist, Arbucle, fell upon his pupil, Major A. Frank Hutchins, the leader and director of the American Screw Co.'s Band and Orchestra of Providence, R. I. Mr. Arbucle said: "I know of no man who can produce a better tone and effect on the cornet than Hutchins. In both orchestra and band, Mr. Hutchkins is distinctively a leader, and next to Sousa undoubtedly occupies today the most prominent position in this country. As a musician and teacher he stand unrivalled

In a recent interview at his home, 184 Charles St., Providence, R. I., Mr. Hutchins said:

"It is generally known that when my wife came here she was was very poorly off with nervous prostration. Today she is the picture of health, and I must say that we owe it to that splendid medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"I know of several others who have been cured within a short time by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and the quicker people affected with any nervous difficulty commence to take this great medicine the quicker will they be cured.

"But let my wife tell her experience, which everyone, who knows her, knows is true in every particular." Mrs. Hutchins said: "I consider it my duty to state that I was permanently cured of nervous prostration by using three bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I doctored for two years or more with several eminent physicians without receiving any permanent benefit.

"My husband insisted that I should stop employing a physician at once, and commence taking the Nervura.

"It improved my health at once. It quieted my nerves; I slept well; began to have an appetite; gradually grew stronger, and after using three bottles declared myself perfectly well.

"I give my consent to publish this, and I trust it may be the means of inducing others to try this most valuable and reliable remedy."

Prominent and well-known people everywhere use and recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Physicians prescribe it, and advise the sick to use it, for it is sure to give health and strength to those who are weak, nervous and debilitated. It cures headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, insomnia, nervous debility, dyspepsia, constipation, female complaints, and liver and kidney diseases. It builds up the blood, invigorates the tired brain, strengthens the weak and shattered nerves. In fact, it makes those who use it well and strong.

Why waste time in trying uncertain and untried remedies, when here is a physician's prescription, a discovery made by the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th St., New York City. If you take this medicine you can consider yourself under Dr. Greene's direct professional care, and you can consult him or write to him about your case, freely and without charge. This is a guarantee that this remedy will cure, possessed by no other medicine in the world.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Feb. 10. Comment by Rev. Walter J. Yates, A. M. Topic, The Holy Garments.

BIBLE READINGS.—Ex. xxviii, 2; Gal. iii, 27; Eph. vi, 14-15; II Cor. vi, 7.

The ordinary priests when performing service were to be clothed with breeches, reaching to the knees, a robe or shirtlike tunic coming to the ankles, girdle around the waist and a turban, all of white linen. The garments of Aaron and his successors, the high priests, as they came to be called, were different in several respects. The breeches of linen were the same. The shirtlike coat or tunic was to be embroidered for him. Above this was to be worn a sleeveless robe of blue reaching to the knees, with a band at the neck and a fringe at the bottom of golden bells, interspersed with pomegranates of blue, purple and scarlet. Outside of this was the ephod made of "gold, blue, purple, scarlet and fine twined linen, with cunning work." It covered back and breast to the waist. It had secured to it at the shoulders two onyx stones, on each of which were engraved the names of six of the tribes of Israel. On the front was a breastplate of judgment of similar work, with the ephod, a span long, but doubled in the form of a pocket. On this were set 12 precious stones, each engraved with the name of one of the tribes. These were set in four rows of three each. The breastplate was fastened to the ephod by gold chains. At the sides of the ephod the "curious girdle" was attached and fastened back and front together. The real girdle or sash seems to have been the same for all. The turban of the chief priest became a miter, with a gold plate fastened by a blue lacing to the front and engraved with "Holiness to the Lord."

These special garments and the holy anointing oil marked the high priest as the mediator between God and man. He was the "anointed one," the messiah, as the Hebrew term is, the Christ in the Greek. All the types of the old dispensation found fulfillment in Jesus of Nazareth as the one anointed of the Father, the true Messiah, or Christ. He bore on his heart the judgment of the race, and his life exhibited holiness unto God. He made atonement once for all that those who obey him may be "clothed in fine linen, which is the righteousness of the saints."

Chautauqua and Oxford League.

The name of John H. Vincent will ever be linked with that of Chautauqua and the wonderful worldwide educational and religious movement for which that name now stands. Its marvelous success is due in great measure to his genius for planning and ability in execution, his skill in forming combinations of men, each in the right place and all working at their full capacity. But for the need of his work in another sphere his should have been the hand at the helm of the young people's movement in Methodism. He early discerned the signs of the times, and at the Baltimore conference of American Methodist churches in September, 1884, was the prime mover in organizing the Oxford league, which was planned to unite the forces of the young Methodists of the world after the pattern of the Holy club of Oxford. This society was adopted by the managers of the Sunday School union the year of its organization, and at the next general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church was recognized by that body by the appointment of a board of control. A revision of the plan in 1889 gave it still greater success than ever, till, in May of that year, 500 chapters, with 20,000 members, had been enrolled. Many believed that this should be the one great denominational society. But the existence of other unions with large membership in various parts of the country made concessions imperative if union of the Methodist forces was to be accomplished. So the Oxford league was merged in the new society, and the name adopted of Epworth League.

BISHOP VINCENT.

The Purpose.

Though it may be worded in various ways, the one aim of the young people's societies of all denominations is the cultivation of intelligent and vital piety and loyalty to the church of Jesus Christ.

The Method.

All earnest souls recognize the necessity for employing wise methods if a deeper and broader piety is to be attained. Constant association in devotional services with those spiritually inclined, active help given to the destitute and sinful, broad intelligence gained by reading and study of the best literature, healthful recreation under pure social conditions, are methods which will yield the best results.

"'Tis not thy work the Master needs; 'tis thee,
The obedient spirit, the believing heart,
The child obedient, trustful, glad to be Where'er he will, to stay or to depart.
—J. R. Miller.

How It Works.

Among the Zulus the first sign of an approach to Christ is a desire for clothes. A man comes one day and buys a calico shirt, the next perhaps he buys a pair of duck pants, then a three legged stool, for he can no longer sit on the ground. Then, with clothes on and seated, he is a thousand miles above the heathen around him.—World Wide Missions.

The Point of View.

Christian faith is a grand cathedral with divinely pictured windows. Standing without you see no glory nor can possibly imagine any. Standing within, every ray of light reveals a harmony of unspeakable splendor. — Hawthorne's, "Marble Faun."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 10 Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Becoming as little children.—Luke xviii, 15-17; Math. xi, 25, 26. (Union meeting with the Juniors suggested, led by Junior superintendent.)

In each of the topical references there is a different sense in which we are to become as little children and each for a different purpose. In Luke it is asserted that we are to become as little children that we may enter the kingdom of heaven, while in the reference in Matthew in a different sense we are to become as children that we may understand the mysteries of God's plan of redemption.

1. Becoming as little children that we may enter the kingdom of heaven (Luke xviii, 15-18). "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in nowise enter therein." These are the words of Christ to the disciples when they rebuked the people for bringing their infants to Him that He might bless them. The meaning is that to enter the kingdom of heaven one must become possessed of such a disposition as a child possesses. There are many characteristics of the natural child life disposition that could with profit be possessed by the Christian, but only the two most prominent need be referred to—one positive, the other negative—humility and confidence. To enter the kingdom of heaven we are to return to these natural dispositions of child life. Humbleness is a characteristic of children, and is also one of the necessary requirements to admission to God's kingdom. God hates pride and arrogancy and turns from them, but He is ever ready to receive the contrite and humble spirit. Confidence is another element of child life and of the true child of God. The child trusts his parents implicitly and with the heart, simply because they are his parents. So we are to trust God absolutely because he is God.

2. Becoming as little children that we may understand the great truths of the gospel (Math. xi, 25, 26). "I thank Thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes" (Math. xi, 25). These are words taken from a prayer of Christ probably offered to God after the return of the 12 from a missionary tour with cheering reports. It alludes to the fact that God had revealed the things of Christ's kingdom to unlearned and uncultured men, such as the Galilean fisherman rather than to the wise and intelligent, such as the scribes and Pharisees. This fact is still prominent today. The world by human wisdom knows not God. The greatest scholars, the greatest statesmen, have often been the greatest strangers to the gospel mysteries. We often wonder why it is so. It was God's will. "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in Thy sight." This fact teaches us that, whether ignorant or learned, to understand God's secrets we must come as children, as if we had no earthly wisdom and learning, and believe in God not because of our education or wisdom, but with the same confidence and childlike trust as if we had none of these things.

Bible Readings.—Ps. cxlviii, 12, 13; Prov. xv, 33; Isa. xi, 1-6; Eccl. xii, 1; Math. xviii, 1-4; xxi, 15, 16; Mark x, 13-15; Luke ix, 46-48; John iii, 1-5; I Cor. xiv, 20; Eph. iv, 1, 2.

English Endeavorers Enthusiastic.

Dr. Clark, who has recently returned from abroad, reports the enthusiasm for the society in Great Britain as quite equal to that which he finds in America. The Baptists are the leaders numerically in Christian Endeavor in England, although other evangelical denominations are coming well to the fore. England took the famous badge banner for the greatest number of societies formed during the last year, and our English friends are evidently inclined to keep it on their side of the water. Dr. Clark says that much interest in the great international convention in Boston next July is already manifested among the societies of Great Britain, and an excursion is even talked of from Ireland to attend that meeting. Altogether he feels that the prospect was never so encouraging for the Endeavor movement as today in all denominations and in all parts of the world. Like the Sunday school, it is rapidly becoming a worldwide movement.

The Cross of Sacrifice.

To hide the cross of sacrifice and self surrender behind the flowers of aestheticism, or to overlay the pleading of that sacrifice with the gratification of artistic tastes or the indulgence of sentimental emotions, is to God a dishonor, not a praise.—Churchman.

Christian Endeavor Gossip.

A blue jacket of Uncle Sam's navy, a Floating Christian Endeavorer, has been laying aside a tenth of his income recently, which he has given through the American board for missions in Turkey, in which he is interested.

Every one of the 1,200 convicts in the Kentucky penitentiary received a letter from the Christian Endeavorers of Louisville Christmas.

At the recent South Australian Christian Endeavor convention this remedy for long winded speakers was proposed, "Sing them down."

There are 514 societies of Christian Endeavor in Connecticut, with a membership of 35,000, and 180 junior societies, with more than 7,000 members.

A Cumberland Presbyterian social committee recently sent out an invitation to a social that contained the following line: "Admission fee—a pleasant smile and a hearty handshake."

An Australian senior society is taking a course of Bible studies, each member in turn writing a paper on an appointed subject, which becomes the basis of discussion at the meetings of the society.

The treasurer of the Texas Christian Endeavor union says, "To use a Texas term, we hope to come in 'droves' to Boston in 1895."

THE LOST WILL.

The Deakles on their part, contended that their father had destroyed the will himself; and they put in one or two letters written by the testator to Arthur shortly before his death, in which he showed some slight sign of relenting. Many witnesses were called in support of both cases. But in the opinion of the Judge the testator's sons had the best of it. It was quite natural, his lordship thought, that towards the end of his life the testator might have desired to repair what was certainly an act of injustice towards his sons. He therefore, pronounced for an intestacy.

Thus the two Deakles came into the whole of their father's money.

Henry Quillet did not take his defeat at all well. And, indeed, it was hardly natural that he should. He was convinced that there had been foul play at work, and that he had been cheated by his two cousins out of his uncle's property. How they had contrived to filch the old gentleman's will, when neither of them had set foot inside his house for ten years, seemed rather a puzzle certainly. Still, it might not have been so difficult to get one of the servants into a line. And in whatever way it had been done his cousins were, without a doubt, at the bottom of it.

He expressed his conviction to his solicitor in very forcible terms.

"Well, well," said the latter, cautiously, "it is a serious imputation to make. I will not say any more than this—Thomas Deakle is quite capable of it."

"And so is Arthur," added Quillet. "He is the more plausible and the more popular. But upon my soul I think he is the greatest knave of the two."

"I should not have thought it," replied the solicitor.

The other nodded. He did not think it worth while to argue the point; especially as he knew Quillet had a very particular reason for disliking Arthur, quite apart from this matter of old Deakle's money.

Arthur Deakle and Henry Quillet had both fallen in love with the same girl. She had refused the pattern, and accepted the scapegrace; and had even dared to make some rather plain observations to the pattern about his conduct in fostering the estrangement between father and son.

Quillet had indignantly repudiated the charge which he felt to be wholly unfounded. But the sting hurt him none the less. And this, added to his cousin's successful rivalry in the girl's affections, had worked his already prejudiced mind into a state of unspeakable rancour against Arthur.

Indeed, the bitterest point of all in his failure to win the probate action was not the loss of the money (which he was well enough off to do without), but the fact that Arthur Deakle would now be able to marry Maud Serbiton—a thing which his deep indebtedness and his lack of means hitherto made impossible.

"If the will has been stolen—which I cannot for a moment doubt—one of my uncle's servants must have seen it," said Quillet, confidently. "My whole energies shall now be devoted to finding which servant it was, and to obtaining a confession from him—or her. You have the draft of the will—have you not?"

"Certainly I have."

"And if we could establish that the will was feloniously made away with, we could prove the draft?"

"Beyond a doubt."

"Very well. Then I shall not rest until I have made my cousins disgorge every penny. No pains, no expense shall be spared. They have swindled me in the most shameful manner; and I do not mean to sit down by it."

"Well, I wish you success," said the solicitor. "But I cannot say that I have much hope of your succeeding."

Fully eighteen months later, however, the Attorney had a call from Quillet. The latter entered his office in a state of evident excitement, which he seemed quite unable to control, and the solicitor immediately saw that something important had turned up.

"Mr. Lexie," said Quillet—after the usual greetings had been exchanged—"when I was last in this office, a year an a half ago, I told you I would never rest until I had discovered the truth about my uncle's will. My efforts and my expenditure have resulted in nothing. But this morning—only this morning—something came to me, which you will not believe except by ocular demonstration. Look at that!"

As he spoke he drew a long, buff envelope from his pocket and handed it to the solicitor with trembling hand. The latter hastily inspected the contents, and, while he did so, a cry of amazement escaped him.

"There is no doubt about it, is there?" cried Quillet, eyeing him keenly.

"None whatever. The will was both engrossed and executed in this office. I drew it myself, you know. Two of my clerks were witnesses. Great heavens! This is a marvel. How on earth did you obtain this, Mr. Quillet?"

"It reached me through the post from an anonymous source," replied Quillet. "No communication accompanied it. You may imagine that I was perfectly thunderstruck when I opened it."

"I should think so, indeed. I never heard of anything so extraordinary. * * * Hem—hem"—(examining the envelope), "the handwriting of the address is strange to you, I suppose?"

"Perfectly. But you see it is a regular commercial hand, with no distinctive characteristic."

"Yes—yes. And it was posted at Charing Cross, I notice. Mr. Quillet, you must leave no stone unturned to find out the sender."

"I will have every farthing that is to be got—every farthing," cried Quillet, with glittering eyes. "After the way my cousins have treated me they cannot expect, and they shall not obtain, any mercy. The cheats! The scoundrels! I will grind them—I will crush them (he clinched his fists savagely) in the hollow of my hand."

Mr. Lexie looked a little surprised at this venomous outburst. But he knew Quillet to be an excitable person and a man of strong passions, so he discreetly let it pass without comment. He was perfectly ready to take the necessary legal steps for getting the intestacy cancelled and proving the now discovered will, for that was only fair and just. But he had no intention of importing vindictiveness into the proceedings; not, at any rate, until it could be more clearly established that the sons of his late client, Jeremiah Deakle, had had some hand in the theft of the will. For, supposing that they had not, both were now in a position which merited pity far more than severity.

When the client had gone the solicitor took up the envelope in which the will had been posted and again subjected it to a careful scrutiny. In holding it up he happened to get it in such a position that the light shone through it, and he then noticed that it was a trifle more opaque at the lower end. He immediately thrust his hand down to explore the cause, and there—with a sense of considerable excitement—discovered a thin slip of paper clinging to the side, which had evidently escaped Quillet's observation.

He drew it out, unfolded it—it was doubled once—and then proceeded to scrutinize it eagerly. To his great disappointment it proved to be no communication from the sender but a receipted restaurant bill for a pint of Bollinger and a dozen oysters, which clearly must have got into the envelope by mistake.

Then it dawned upon him that, although this might be less satisfactory, than an explicit letter from the sender, it might, nevertheless, serve as an important clue. And he reflected that intortuous affair what a rogue does by accident is often a better key to his secrets than he does by design. The restaurant bill bore a title at its head—that of a French oyster saloon in Leicester Square; and also a date, that of yesterday. He would go there immediately and make inquiries, while the memories of the proprietor and of the waiters would be still green. Nothing might come of it, of course. Those places were always crowded when the music halls came out; and a pint of Bollinger and a dozen natives, was no distinctive meal. Still, he would go; something might result from his inquiries; and if not, he was no further off.

The office boy, therefore, was sent to call a cab, and five minutes later Mr. Lexie was driving in the direction of Leicester Square.

On reaching his destination, he inquired for the proprietor of the restaurant. And that personage was at once fetched, oily, bland, and bejewelled, but looking rather seedy and worn, nevertheless in the garnish light of day. He listened very politely to the solicitor's inquiries; but he was very sorry, he could tell him nothing. With such a crowd in at nights it was impossible to recollect one individual, even if the gentleman were able to describe his appearance, which he could not do. Stay though. The number of the table was on the bill. He would call the garcon who attended to that table. He would be more likely to have noticed though this was very doubtful. However he would call him.

"Pierre," cried the proprietor to one of the waiters lounging in the window. "Pierre. Hither, my lad, you make yourself to be desired."

"Right y' are, sir," replied the garcon, hurrying up towards them. It was evident when he opened his mouth that Pierre's tongue had first wagged on the banks, not of the Seine, but of the Thames.

Mr. Lexie at once stated the subject of his inquiries. But he had not occasion to say much before the waiter gave vent to a sudden exclamation.

"S'elp me bob!" he ejaculated. "I wonder if it's the gent who came in with his arm in a sling."

"What of him? What did he do?" queried Mr. Lexie, greatly interested.

"Told me his right arm was damaged, so that he couldn't write, and asked me as a favor gest to 'dress a wollop—beg pardin, sir—a henvelope for 'im."

"He did!" exclaimed the solicitor, now trembling with excitement. "Do you recollect to whom you addressed it?"

The other shook his head. "I can't 'zactly," he said, scratching his poll in true British fashion. "'Twor a rather queer name; but the gent who owned it lived somewhere in Kentish-town—Tuf—Tuf"——

"Seven hundred, Tufnell park—eh?" interposed Mr. Lexie.

"That's it, sir! that's it, I do believe!"

"And is this the envelope that you addressed?" asked the solicitor, producing it and holding it forward.

"Aye, it is, indeed, sir! Are you the gent it's 'dressed to? I hope I did nothing wrong, sir?"

"Nothing whatever. No, I'm not the addressee; but a client of mine is, and if you can tell us a little more about the gentleman who employed you, my client will reward you handsomely. He didn't give you his name, of course?"

"No, sir."

"Did you notice what he was like? Does he often come here?"

"I never saw him here before, sir. He was an ordinary-looking gent; nothing to notice. Just dark hair and mustache, and dress clothes. I can't say no more nor that."

"Well, look here," said the solicitor, "if he comes to this place again, you send me a telegram at once, will you? If it is after 6, wire to my private address: if before, to my office. Here" taking a couple of cards from his case), "here is my name and both addresses, one on each. And, by the way, there's a sovereign for you. Will you do this. We will make it worth your while."

"Certainly, sir, certainly. And thank 'ee kindly," said Pierre, pocketing the gold.

Mr. Lexie turned away. Then he came back. "By the bye," he said, "my client has an appointment with me at 10 to morrow, at my office. Could you run up then, and meet him there? He might want to ask you a few more questions. You will not be busy at that hour, will you?"

"No, sir. I never come here till noon; I'll trot up to your horfice with the greatest pleasure."

"All right. Good-day."

On his return journey the solicitor reflected that what he had learned was not, after all, so very valuable. Still, it might lead to much. He might be on the very verge of a great discovery.

* * * * * * *

Promptly at 10 o'clock Henry Quillet arrived at Mr. Lexie's office, and was at once shown into the solicitor's presence. The latter was just beginning to tell his client what he had discovered yesterday afternoon when a rap came at the door.

"Come in," said Mr. Lexie.

A clerk entered.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said, deferentially. "But another gentleman has just called, who says that he is here by appointment—to meet Mr. Quillet."

"Good. Show him up."

A minute later Pierre was ushered in. He at once uttered a cry of surprise.

"So you've found the gent?" he ejaculated.

"Found whom?" asked Mr. Lexie, frowning perplexedly.

"Why, 'im," he said, indicating Quillet. "'im as axed me to 'dress that wollop!"

* * * * * * *

Jeremiah Deakle's will, genuine though it was, was never proved by the sole beneficiary, Henry Quillet. That gentleman, knowing that the girl he loved would never marry him, and burning, therefore to punish both her and his favored cousin, had hit upon the peculiar expedient of suppressing his uncle's will.

Only the accidental inclosure of that restaurant bill had discovered him to Mr. Lexie, who was naturally furious at having been thus imposed upon, and who told Quillet very plainly that, unless he destroyed the will in his presence then and there, he should take immediate steps to bring the matter under the cognizance of the Court. This Quillet dared not face; so he did what was demanded. Thomas Deakle soon went to the devil. But Arthur and his wife still live quietly and happily upon the residue of the estate, with which Quillet's extraordinary scheme of revenge had now permanently furnished them.—London Truth.

Philadelphia, Feb. 9.—It is impossible to learn the name of the steamer reported ashore in the Delaware bay on Bulkhead shoal. The steamer was observed coming up the river and seemed to be a foreign vessel deeply laden. She had two masts and her funnel is painted a buff color. An ice boat has gone to her relief.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

Opening of Edsall's Grocery Department.

The large number who visited the opening of Edsall's Grocery Department, at the Commercial Palace, and made liberal purchases last Saturday, is pretty good evidence of its success, and guarantee that it will be one of the most popular attractions at the Palace in the future. The department was crowded from early morning until closing time, notwithstanding the unpleasantness of the weather, and the greatest satisfaction was expressed by the purchasers, both in regard to the very low prices and fine quality of the goods. The very liberal patronage at the outset will encourage Mr. Edsall to push this department to the fullest extent, and make it one of the greatest money-saving places to buy articles of food any where to be found. Let the good work go on.

Cuff Goes to Jail.

Herman Schemer of Cottage place made complaint against Edward Cuff, a neighbor, charging him with stealing a wrapper, socks and aprons, from his store Saturday night.

Cuff went there to buy some cider, and while the proprietor was getting it he put the articles under his coat and walked away.

Justice Newcorn issued the warrant for Cuff's arrest, and this morning Cuff pleaded guilty. He was sent to Elizabeth, where he will be sentenced.

A Pleasant Social Event.

Saturday afternoon and evening Mrs. Wilbur Fisk gave an informal and pleasant reception and tea at her home on Arlington avenue to about 75 guests. The house had been tastefully trimmed and arranged with ferns and roses. Misses Allen and Fisk of New York, and Misses Walz and Atterbury, assisted the hostess in receiving and pouring tea.

During the storm Friday evening, M. F. Watson of Grant avenue had the misfortune to have the pipes throughout his house freeze. $30 damage was done in his bath room.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. JUDGMENTS IN COURT.

Plainfield Boys Arraigned for Handling Firearms.

CARELESSNESS SHARPLY CENSURED.

Grand Jury Commended for Finding Indictments, But Sentences Are Suspended Owing to the Youthfulness of the Prisoners—Counselor Craig A. Marsh Pleads for the Poor.

[From The Elizabeth Journal of Saturday.]

There was not a very large attendance at Court this morning. It was, however, sentence day, and judgment was passed in several cases of more than ordinary interest. The three Plainfield boys who were indicted as the result of the killing of Henry Greenleaf, a young companion, through careless use of firearms, were arraigned immediately on the opening of Court.

The boys were Clarence Rocap, aged eleven years, who fired the fatal shot, William Morgan and Samuel McDonald, the latter only eight years old and very small. The fathers of the young prisoners, and other friends, were in Court.

Prosecutor Marsh said it was a pitiful sight to see the boys in Court charged with crime, but the grand jury under the charge of Judge VanSyckel felt it their duty to find the indictments, which were drawn under the act of 1885, which makes it a crime for minors to use firearms.

The boys, excepting Rocap, had previously pleaded not guilty, but this morning asked to enter pleas of non vult, which the State accepted. The parents of the young prisoners were allowed to speak.

Charles McDonald, the father of the youngest boy, is a New York lawyer. He said no one regretted the deplorable consequences in the case more than himself and family, but there were some facts that he wished to present to the Court. His boy, although so young, was charged with using a rifle, which conveys an idea to the public of gross carelessness. The facts were that the boy is taking lessons in athletics and general sports, and among other things is taught how to handle a rifle. The weapon was a small Flobert rifle, and he exhibited to the Court the miniature cartridge used.

Mr. McDonald said that everything had been done to prevent a similar accident. The gun which had been used on this occasion has been destroyed, and the rifle his boy used taken away from him.

William Morgan, father of the Morgan boy, in behalf of his son, explained how his son came in possession of the rifle by purchase from Mr. McDonald, and by his consent. He expressed his regret over the sad result, and said he did not desire to cover up anything or to evade any blame.

Mr. Rocap spoke very briefly for his son, simply expressing how greatly he deplored the sad consequences, and said he was making every effort to guard against any such occurrence in the future.

Judge McCormick responded that the Court felt constrained to say that the grand jury had done its duty in bringing in these indictments. It has been the means of setting people thinking about the matter of the use of firearms. The indictments were proper for the protection of the community. As to the boys themselves, two at least, were so young, the community would not expect the Court to impose a penalty upon them. The result of the shooting was very unfortunate, said, and it was to be hoped a similar occurrence will not take place in this county. Under the circumstances the Court suspended sentence in the cases of all the boys.

Peter Kane, one of the boys charged with the careless rifle practice whereby Monace Evans was killed, was also in court, accompanied by his mother.

Counselor Craig A. Marsh made a statement that Kane's mother was too poor to employ counsel, and he made a motion in her behalf that counsel be assigned.

Judge McCormick said the Court had been informed that Kane's mother had already paid a fee to a lawyer for her son's defense.

Mr. Marsh said that was not so. Judge Coddington appeared for the boy at the coroner's inquest, but was not paid.

The Court reserved its decision.

John Klopf, a saloon keeper of Fanwood, who was indicted for selling without license and keeping a disorderly house in permitting card playing, was next arraigned.

Lawyer Connelly made a plea for the prisoner, making the statement that the men who had made the charge against him had drunk liquor in his place, played cards there and had not paid their bills.

To this statement Prosecutor Marsh said that he did not wish Klopf to go back with the idea in his mind that anyone had voluntarily gone before the grand jury. The witnesses against him were fairly dragged there, and the indictment was found because Klopf was habitually violating the law.

Judge McCormick rebuked the prisoner and imposed a fine of $20 and costs.

—While using a chisel, H. S. Thatcher of East Fourth street severely cut the forefinger of his left hand.

OBITUARY.

J. K. Hoyt.

The funeral of J. K. Hoyt took place today in this city.

J. K. Hoyt was a well-known Newark journalist and literary man, and his death occurred Friday morning in Plainfield, where he was visiting his wife's sister, Mrs. Matilda Rushmore. Mr. Hoyt had not been strong and well for several months, and for some time has not been engaged in any active employment, his last work being the writing of editorial matter for the Newark Times.

Mr. Hoyt was nearly 70 years old, and leaves a wife and one son, who live on an orange grove in the west coast of Florida, where the late Mr. Hoyt has spent several Winters.

Mr. Hoyt began a successful business career in New Orleans as a general dealer and factor for plantations, and thus amassed a snug fortune, but lost all during the war. He was also in the hardware business in New York.

He had always a taste for writing, and turning to journalistic work, became editor of the New Brunswick Times, which was then owned by the late Judge Guild. Early in the '70s he took a trip to Florida and wrote for the Newark Daily Advertiser a series of remarkably interesting letters descriptive of the scenery and resources of the country.

T. T. Kinney, then editor of the paper, was highly pleased with the letters and offered the writer the position of managing editor, which Mr. Hoyt accepted. In this capacity he continued to serve with credit to himself and the paper until some time after Noah Brooks became the chief editorial writer in 1885. He afterwards did editorial work on The Journal and other newspapers.

During all this time Mr. Hoyt was prominently identified with all literary enterprises, and clubs in this vicinity, and all received the impress of his talents. He translated "The Journey to the Moon" and other French books. His reputation has been most widely established, however, by his Encyclopedia of Familiar Quotations, published in conjunction with Miss Anna Ward, of Bloomfield.

On the completion of this excellent piece of work, Mr. Hoyt and his wife moved to Florida, and joined their son on his plantation. Meanwhile, his pen was never idle, and many contributions to various publications swelled the sum total of his extensive literary and journalistic life work.

Mr. Hoyt was a valuable contributor for The Constitutionalist during his lifetime.

Cycling on the Track.

A lone cycler was noticed contentedly wheeling his way along, between the tracks of the Central railroad at Dunellen, yesterday afternoon at 3:30. He was evidently trying to catch the westbound local which had just preceded him. A fortune awaits the man who will be the first to cover the country by wheeling along the telegraph wires, and it may yet be accomplished, for many cycling enthusiasts were skimming over the ice of Staten Island Sound yesterday.

Knocked Down By a Runaway.

A horse attached to an empty sleigh came down Watchung avenue from Netherwood last evening at runaway speed.

Miss Schlecin, who was crossing Watchung avenue near James E. Martine's residence, was struck by the sleigh and knocked down. She was not severely injured, however, and was able to walk to her home on Pearl street. The horse was stopped on North avenue, and its owner, who is not known, was awaited.

Frozen Pipes in Music Hall.

The extreme frigid weather of the last few days has occasioned considerable trouble to the Music Hall management by the freezing of a number of the pipes generating heat for the building. All day yesterday and last night plumbers were engaged in repairing the breaks in order that the hall may be comfortably warm for the performance this evening.

Ministers Meeting.

The Ministers Association meets this afternoon at the home of Rev. Cornelius Schenck. Mrs Schenck, who has been stormbound in Philadelphia since Thursday, came home in time to entertain the clerical guests. Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry read a paper on "The Kingdom of God".

—Jacob Kleiner, who runs the star route mail service between this city and Warrenville, attempted Saturday to reach the latter place. Owing to the condition of the roads Mr. Kleiner was unable to do so. He will make the attempt again today.

WRECKED IN THE STORM

Blizzard Experiences of Plainfielders on the Road.

STALLED IN BIG SNOW DRIFTS.

Railroad Management Highly Commended for Kind Treatment of Passengers—Memorial Adopted for Presentation to the Philadelphia and Reading Officials.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, who were storm-stalled at Hopewell, arrived home last evening about 9.

Mr. Dobbins explains the delay as follows:

"We left Trenton Friday afternoon about 4 for Trenton Junction. When we arrived at the latter place the ticket agent told us that a train had gone through all right at 2 that afternoon, and that the express, which is due in Plainfield at 5:28, was then due at the Junction. We did not have long to wait, and when the train arrived we got aboard.

"Everything then was all right. With the two 'hog' engines a high rate of speed was obtained. One stop was made, at Skillman, to let off a passenger, and we resumed our journey. The train got under good headway again, and was making excellent time, when every passenger was thrown from his seat by a sudden sharp jerk of the train.

"Several of the men hurried through to the baggage car, and there they saw one of the firemen with his arm and hand severely cut and the train hands trying to bandage his cuts. The rest of the engineers and firemen escaped without injury, and in fact no one was injured excepting the one fireman.

"We learned that the engines had run into a snow drift about 15 feet high and had telescoped.

"The conductor told us we would have to remain there for the night, and we made ourselves as comfortable as possible.

"About 4 Saturday morning we were taken back to the station at Hopewell, where we got warm, and hot coffee was served in abundance. All went back to the train again, and remained there till 6 a. m.

"Conductor Evans then told his passengers that arrangements had been made at the hotels, and all would be taken care of, which was done.

"There were 260 men put to work at once, cleaning the tracks, and they have been working steadily. A provision train was stalled near Pennington, and it required three hours with 100 men to get it out of the snow.

"We were well taken care of by the company, and were told that just as soon as anything could be done to put the passengers through they would be notified.

"It was not till yesterday afternoon that the tracks were cleared to Trenton Junction, and then everyone was taken to Trenton, where they were given transportation to Elizabeth and New York.

"Among the passengers was Miss E. U. Yates, who was to speak at the W.C.T.U meetings in this city yesterday. The passengers are very grateful to Conductor E. C. Evans for his most excellent treatment and cordial manner."

The following resolutions were drafted by Benj. L. Tomes of Elizabeth, and subscribed to by the passengers:

Hopewell, N. J., Feb. 10, '95.

To whom it may concern:

We, the undersigned snowbound passengers of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad from Philadelphia to New York, leaving the former city Friday, Feb. 8, at 6:10, p m. hereby beg to express our sincere gratitude to the citizens of the town of Hopewell for their very kind and open-hearted hospitality during our forced but pleasant stay among them. The demands of home and business, the desire to be with our beloved ones, may have caused some expressions of impatience on our part, but the liberal manner of our reception has gone far to compensate us for the inconveniences to which we have been unavoidably subjected. To the proprietor of the Hopewell Hotel and his good family, and to the pastors of the several churches, we are indebted for a warm reception in this hour of need; and to the railway officials for every effort on their part to ameliorate our condition.

It also seems appropriate that we should avail ourselves of this opportunity to give our humble, but devout thanks to Almighty God for his providential protection of us in the hour of danger. In conclusion we would say that should any or all of the above mentioned be placed in a like position we offer to them the hospitalities of our respective towns and homes and in the meantime we shall preserve a lasting memory of their kindness to us. May God bless them and theirs.

It is our desire and wish that a copy of these be presented to the Chairman of the Commissioners of the town of Hopewell and to the press.

Signed the 10th day of February in the year of our Lord, Eighteen Hundred and Ninety-five:

Miss E U Yates, Round Pond, Maine; Andrew Johnstone, High Bridge; Wm H Bayne, New York; Mrs. Lucebe D Soule, Boston; O W Kingsley, Boston; Fred Eastwood, Mrs. Ida M Eastwood, Fall River, Mass.; Frederick J Phillips, Brooklyn; W W Caldwell, Hartford, Conn.; Benjamin L. EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The Young Men's League of Hope Chapel will meet for regular business this evening at 8.

—The initiating team of the Sons of Veterans will meet Wednesday evening at their rooms to rehearse their parts.

—Dave the barber is planning to place three handsome large glasses in his shop. He expects to put in an additional chair also.

—On account of the severe cold, the attendance at the Hope Chapel Sunday-school was somewhat reduced yesterday afternoon.

—Trains were run yesterday from Philadelphia at intervals, by the way of Allentown. There were still no trains to Washington.

—The regular weekly meeting of the Hope Chapel Christian Endeavor society will be held Wednesday, instead of Tuesday as heretofore.

—The high winds of Saturday and Sunday have blown most of the snow off Hyde's meadows, leaving the ice in fine condition for skating.

—Frost cracked one of the plate-glass show windows in J. A. Smith's grocery store last evening. A sharp report accompanied the breakage.

—There will be no Christian Endeavor service in the Congregational Church next Sunday evening, on account of the union Y. M. C. A. meetings.

—Tomorrow being Lincoln's Birthday, The Daily Press will publish a special page of new copyrighted material devoted to the martyred president.

—Someone left a snowplow in the middle of Putnam avenue near Franklin place, and as several horses stumbled over it a deal of profanity resulted.

—South avenue has been spoiled for sleighing, as the high winds have swept it clean in many places. Fine sleighing is to be found on Front street, however.

—Clarence S. Johnson, secretary of the Mt. Olive Baptist Sunday-school, took charge of the school yesterday afternoon in the absence of Superintendent M. C. Dobbins.

—An entertainment and social will be enjoyed at the East Third Street Mission tomorrow evening. P. Ludwig Conde and his orchestra will form a most important part of the programme.

—The sidewalk on East Front street just this side of ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph's residence is completely blocked with snow. Pedestrians are obliged to take to the road at that point.

—The sidewalks fronting the City Park and Seventh-Day Baptist Cemetery still remain covered with snow several inches deep, through which pedestrians are compelled to wade in passing along Ninth street.

—The Plainfield people who attended the Trenton encampment arrived home Saturday evening by the Pennsylvania Railroad, excepting Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, who came last night by the same road.

—The Y. M. C. A. double male quartette are doing excellent work. Rehearsals are frequently held, prior to the opening exercises of the new building, and the State convention, which commences Thursday.

—The Ladies Aid Society of Monroe Avenue Chapel will hold their annual supper Tuesday evening, Feb. 19. There will be fancy and useful household articles for sale during the evening. The admission, including supper, will be 25 cents.

—A deal of indignation was felt by pedestrians of West Seventh street yesterday at the almost impassable condition of some of the sidewalks, the snow not having been cleaned off since the storm of Friday. The people were obliged in places to walk knee-deep or take the middle of the road.

O. W. O. Hardman, sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

THE POPE AND SOCIALISM.

"If It Means More Social Justice, It Is a Noble Aim."

Paris, Feb. 11.—The Petit Meridional in Montpellier reports a long conversation which Deputy Paul Vigno, radical socialist, had with the pope during his recent visit in Rome. In answering a question concerning socialism his holiness said: "If socialism means the efforts made to improve the condition of the poorer classes in a progressive, prudent and reasonable manner, if you apply that idea to whatever has been done to realize more social justice in the government of men, then it is impossible to pursue a nobler aim. Such was the work of christianity, which inaugurated the era of clemency and pity and true fraternity at a time when cruel paganism and when the pitiless Roman world was in apogee. To occupy oneself with the social question, with a clear conception of the grave responsibilities resting on all who hold wealth and authority, is to continue the work of the divine master. It is what I have not ceased doing since my advent to the throne.

"As to the parties in France to which the name of socialist is given, I think their work will be sterile and they will be powerless as long as they do not lean on religion for support. Violent opposition to the government by those parties in France and Germany has become increasing and redoubtable, but it will all be vain, because religion has been vanished from them. Your republic is a very acceptable form of government despite its errors, and I love it more than is supposed in France. Why should it not be religious?"

"THE CRISIS SURELY COMING."

Sovereign Says No Need for Winchesters and Gatling Guns.

Philadelphia, Feb. 11.—"The crisis is surely coming" said General Master Workman of the Knights of Labor Sovereign, at Labor Lyceum hall, in an address to the members of local assembly No. 3,721 composed of cloth cutters and shop tailors. "There will be a serious upheaval in this country within twelve months. Every move on the social chessboard indicates it. Capitalists tactics are forcing the issue and organized labor will be the victor. It will be a peaceful revolution, accomplished without the aid of Winchesters and Gatling guns. After the fight is over people will say, when they see a Knight of Labor who has been steadfast throughout the great strife, 'There goes an American patriot.' We want you to enlist for the war, to become an integral part of our grand organization; until there is gathered within our fold sufficient numerical strength to say to the other fellow: 'This far you have gone, and, by the eternal God you shall go no further.'"

CALLING OUT THE RESERVES.

Foreigners Must Remain at Home or Must Have Permits.

London, Feb. 11.—Daily News correspondent in Constantinople says: "An order has been issued calling out a considerable number of reserves. Various rumors as to this step are in circulation. One is that Russia has massed troops on the frontier; another that the cause is trouble in Monastir and Macedonia.

Influencial Turks express anxiety as to the effect of this partial mobilization. Orders have been issued throughout the empire that neither foreigners nor natives shall leave the towns in which they live, or, if away, shall return to them without special permits from Constantinople."

The Workingman's Friend.

London, Feb. 11.—The Standard's correspondent in Vienna says: "Emperor Franz Joseph desires to celebrate his imperial jubilee by an act benefitting the workingmen of Vienna, and consequently he has approved the scheme of applying 250,000 florins, the proceeds from the sale of lands formerly covered with fortifications, towards a fund for artisans dwellings. Many industrial associations and councils, including the Vienna corporation, will join in bringing the fund up to several millions. The districts chosen for the dwellings are the three poorest suburbs of Vienna. The first colony will be opened on Dec. 2, 1898, when the emperor will have reigned fifty years."

Sadder But Wiser Men.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Two farmers, Newton Brinston and George M. Ishinger, from Muncie, Ind., came to this city Friday, having been in communication with some green goods men. Yesterday morning they parted with $500 in good money for $1,000 of the spurious goods. At the depot they wanted to see their roll of money and opening the box, found a very dilapidated brick, carefully wrapped in green paper. Thinking there had been a mistake they hastened back, but the men had disappeared. The swindlers escaped and the farmers took the next train back for Indiana.

Held by Sixty Fathom of Chain.

Glasgow, Feb. 11.—The Anchor line steamer Anchoria, Capt. Young, which left New York on January 26, and was due here last Tuesday, came up the Clyde yesterday. She is undamaged. Her captain reports that she experienced strong northwest gales the first two days of her voyage, and a northeast hurricane afterwards. With the hurricane came blinding snow and sleet. On the 4th and 5th she stopped and put her anchor and sixty fathoms of chain to hold her head to the wind.

"You Must Prepare To Fight."

Berlin, Feb. 11.—The anarchists met last evening in Deigimueller hall. Comrade Schlaechter, a joiner, closed a fiery speech with a general denunciation of the social democrats and their pacific policy and the declaration that there was no such thing as changing present conditions peacefully. "You must prepare to fight," he shouted. The next moment he was arrested and the meeting was dissolved.

Killed by Polanders.

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 11.—As a result of a brawl among Polanders, Felix Dawidziak of South Wyoming avenue was shot and almost instantly killed by either John Wismewski or Anthony Jakofski it is alleged. Both of the men are still at large. Four men and one woman have been arrested and are detained as witnesses. The police expect to get the suspected murderers.

EIGHTEEN DAYS MORE

Congress in This Time To Close Its Affairs.

One Bill Only Has Received Mr. Cleveland's Signature—Measures in the Senate To Receive Much Debate—Will the Government Own the Mail Cars?

Washington, Feb. 11.—Beginning with to-day there yet remain to this congress but eighteen days in which to transact business and close up its affairs. Despite the fact that the end is so near but one of thirteen appropriation bills that provide for the governmental expenditures for the year ending June 30, 1896, have become a law and received the signature of the president—the military academy bill, the army bill has been signed by the officers of both houses and has gone to the white house; there are in conference pensions, fortifications and the District of Columbia bills. The diplomatic bill passed the senate on Saturday after a long debate on the subject of the Hawaiian cable. There is now on the senate the postoffice and Indian bills and Chairman Cockrell expects to report the agricultural bill to-day.

The two bills now before the senate will be subject to much debate but the degree to which it may be protracted depends entirely upon the attitude of those in charge with regard to the withdrawal of certain objectionable amendments that have been made. The first bill to be called up is the postoffice appropriation bill. At the solicitation of Mr. Vilas, the committee has reported an amendment to this bill providing that the government shall own the postal cars in use on the different roads carrying the fast mails. The republicans look upon this as the first step in the direction of government ownership of the railroads and will antagonize the amendment.

Another and a far more important amendment more objectionable from a political standpoint is one that places the expenditures of the three millions of dollars appropriated for the support of the special fast mail facilities, at the absolute discretion of the postmaster general. This, republicans say, is contrary to all precedents. They maintain that congress itself should stipulate where and how this money should be spent. So long as this amendment is permitted to remain as a part of the bill republican leaders say they will not permit it to pass. Necessarily, it follows that this bill will precipitate a good deal of discussion unless those in charge of the measure capitualte early in the fight to the opposition that will be raised to these two amendments.

The passage of the postoffice bill will be followed by a struggle between the pooling and bankruptcy bill. Mr. Butler some days ago introduced a resolution which makes the pooling bill the unfinished business and keeps it before the senate until finally acted upon. He gave notice that he would call it up immediately after the passage of the postoffice bill and this contest will probably occur some time to-morrow. Those republicans who are against the bankruptcy bill will assist in substituting the pooling bill for it, but such a victory would be of no material benefit to the pooling bill for it would be set aside for appropriation bills or talked to death which latter seems to be the sure fate of the bankruptcy measure in case the pooling bill should not displace it. There appears to be little hope of the pooling bill ever reaching the final stage, for a number of senators capable of unlimited speech, and willing to indulge therein are ready to antagonize it and they could easily at this late day send the pooling bill to an untimely end. It is immaterial whether the agricultural or the Indian bill comes up next. Changes in both of them will be demanded by the republicans. At the last session, the republicans, against the opposition of the democrats, had a million dollars appropriated for the extermination of the Russian thistle, this appropriation going on to the agricultural bill as an amendment but was stricken out in conference. Now the bill carries an amendment reported by the committee appropriating the same amount for the extermination of the gypsy moth which will be fought by the republicans. In addition to this there is said to have been put in the bill some new and objectionable paragraphs that must be expunged before the bill can pass the senate.

They May Appeal to Russia.

London, Feb. 11.—The Berlin correspondent of the Morning Post says that the Chinese envoys who arrived at Marseilles last week have no mission to the European powers, and will make no effort to secure general European intervention. The envoys may appeal to Russia, however, as they will go to St. Petersburg ostensibly for the purpose of conveying their Emperor's congratulations to Czar Nicholas.

Italy Seeking Aid from England.

New York, Feb. 11.—Throughout the entire week there have been active negotiations in progress between Italy and England, and it is probable that some important decisions have been arrived at in relation to African matters. Italy is seeking to secure the aid of England in Africa, but the British government, by reason of the parliamentary situation, energetically refuses to commit itself.

The Storm in Dublin.

Dublin, Feb. 11.—An unprecedented snow storm has blocked traffic throughout the south of Ireland. The American mail which left Dublin yesterday has been unable to get beyond Charlesville. The Cork trains for Dublin are fast in the snow near Butte Vaut, fifteen miles from here. The snow falls so rapidly as to prevent clearing the tracks.

Rockford's $75,000 Fire.

Rockford, Ill., Feb. 11.—Fire yesterday destroyed the Syndicate block on Seventh street, one of the largest building in the city. The block contained seven stores and several families live on the upper floors. Loss $75,000.

EIGHT DAYS OVERDUE.

No News of the La Gascogne—Superintendent West Talks.

Quarantine, S. I., Feb. 11.—Neither the Dania or Normandie sighted the overdue French line steamer La Gascogne. The Dania and La Normandie are anchored out side Sandy Hook bar, and both came over the same course as La Gascogne should have followed. La Normandie is a sister steamer of La Gascogne. Superintendent West says:

"We consider La Gascogne now one of the staunchest and best equipped vessels afloat. She was entirely refitted about six months ago with new boilers and new engines. She had triple expansion engines before—now she has quadruple expansion engines. These new engines not only lessen the quantity of coal used but increase her speed. This is her second westward trip since she was overhauled, and the tests made after she was repaired make us confident that she was perfectly seaworthy in every way."

In speaking of the possibility of La Gascogne being at the Azores, Superintendent West said that if she had been disabled while within a few hundred miles of the islands she would most likely have put in there. If she was closes to this port she would undoubtedly have tried to come in here.

Superintendent West has been at the French line pier almost continuously for the last four days and nights.

SCHOONERS ASHORE.

The Sloop Flash Has Found a Resting Place on a Mud Flat.

Atlantic City, N. J., Feb. 11.—The schooners Emma Ann Stephen, Capt. J. Scherer, and the Wolsey, Capt. H. J. Knueses, both of New York, which went ashore on Little Beach were floated at high tide and took a safer anchorage than when the ice floes from the bay drove them on the beach. The two crews who were rescued by the life saving crew went aboard again and will return to New York in the schooners, which suffered but slightly from their accident.

The sloop Flash, which was ice bound and in danger of foundering, found a safe resting place by running aground on a mud flat in the bay.

SLAVERY NOT ABOLISHED.

A Woman Sold on the Auction Block in Kentucky for $1.05.

Georgetown, Ky., Feb. 11.—A novel spectacle was furnished the younger generation here Saturday. It was the sale by public auction of two colored women, Sara Jackson and Bettie Fishback. They were convicted of vagrancy in the circuit court and ordered to be sold into slavery for the period of six months. The sale took place in front of the court house, Deputy Sheriff Shuff, being the auctioneer and attracted a large crowd. The women were bought by two colored men, Henry Jackson and Richard Coleman and brought $1.05 and $2.00 respectively.

They Ask for Transportation.

St. Louis, Feb. 11.—The Globe Democrat says telegrams received here from the City of Mexico by the commissary department ask for transportation from the frontier for supplies for $5,000 men and announce a forward movement of that number of men into the disputed territory. This body of men has been encamped at San Cristoval, Mexico, for three weeks, ready to jump across the border. Guatemala has a strong guard in the disputed strip and a fight seems sure. In official circles here it is said that no forward movement has been ordered.

Preached on Behalf of Seamen.

Gloucester, Mass., Feb. 11.—A memorial service for fishermen lost from this port the past year was held yesterday at the Universalist church, and most of the local clergy assisted in the exercises, Rev. M. Cook, of the Methodist church, preached a very interesting sermon. Rev. Charlton, of the Fishermen's Institute, read the names of 123 men who had been drowned from here the past year, out of which number only 23 bodies had been recovered and buried on shore.

Farewell to His Loved One.

Berlin, Feb. 11.—Capt. von Goessel's brother-in-law says that when the captain saw from the Elbe's bridge that his ship was doomed he wrote a few farewell words to his wife and handed the paper to the pilot who was rescued. Goessel ordered that this note be delivered to his wife alone and be kept secret from all others. The purport of this last message is still unknown outside Goessel's immediate family.

Children Burned to a Crisp.

Brazil, Ind., Feb. 11.—The six-year-old and three-months-old daughters of William Cassidy residing eight miles north of this city, were burned to death last evening. Mrs. Cassidy left the children while she went to feed the hogs, and when she returned they both were lying dead upon the floor. The bodies having been burned to a crisp. It is thought their clothing caught fire while they were playing before a grate fire.

Held Up for $17.

Falls City, Neb., Feb. 11.—Agent Hurst of the Missouri Pacific railroad was held up in the station by two masked men last night. While one held up the agent the other went through the safe overlooking a package of bills and getting but $17 in change. The bandits took their prisoner two miles up the track and let him go. There is no clue to the identity of the highwaymen.

May Evade the Law.

Stepney, Conn., Feb. 11.—Rev. H. W. Jones, pastor of the Baptist church, announced yesterday that he intended to inaugurate a movement to stop the illegal sale of liquor. The town is no-license, but Pastor Jones said that he had the names of a number of persons who were violating the laws. He has called upon the State Law and Order league to assist him.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

All that's Yellow is not Cottolene

There's hardly a housekeeper in the country but has heard of Cottolene the new vegetable shortening. It is a strictly natural product; composed only of clarified cotton seed oil, thickened for convenience in use, with refined beef suet, pure and sweet. So composed,

COTTOLENE

Was bound to win, and to drive out lard from the kitchens of the world. When housekeepers wish to get rid of the unpleasant features and results of lard, they should get Cottolene, taking care that they are not given cheap imitations with vegetable names, spuriously compounded to sell in the place of Cottolene.

It's easy to avoid disappointment and ensure satisfaction. Insist on having Cottolene.

A BOSTON GIRL'S LIFE

Saved from Ruin and Despair by the Timely Aid of a Noted Woman.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

IS there anything more truly pathetic than the cry for help that springs from the anguished heart of a young girl — a beautiful girl who sees ahead only suffering and uncertainty?

But oh, what joy and gladness her young heart pours forth when she realizes that her dreaded enemy, the blasting influence, is gone, — banished forever.

This sunshine and joy is now the happy portion of Miss Florence —— of Beacon Street, Boston.

She often tells of her suffering from the suppression of the menses. The pain was excruciating. The doctors, instead of removing the cause of her ailment, plied her each month with morphine to prevent convulsions; but the trouble was permitted to exist.

When she could endure no more, — prostration was imminent and future hopeless, — her family procured a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which, surprising to all, rapidly and permanently cured her.

In writing to Mrs. Pinkham, pouring forth her gratitude and happiness, she says: "Oh! that I could make every suffering woman try your valuable medicine! How they would bless you!"

EX-QUEEN TO THE BAR

Kept a Diary Which Will Be Used Against Her.

May Receive Clemency Consistent with Public Safety—President Dole May Reprieve British and American Prisoners Under Sentence of Death—Davis Must Keep Clear.

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 11.—The steamer Warimoo, which arrived yesterday brings the following advices from Honolulu dated Feb. 3:

The Advertiser of Jan. 31, pointedly animadverted upon the impropriety of foreign representatives interfering with local political affairs, and by their interposition embarrassing the action of the new government. Within a few days much resentment has been expressed about some interference of this nature which has recently come to light. It is positively asserted that early in the outbreak United States Minister Willis and British Commissioner Hawes joined in requesting President Dole to reprieve the British and Americans under sentence of death until such a time as their respective governments could be communicated with and instructions received as to the course of action they should pursue. President Dole has not yet replied to this request, and it is not positive that the capital sentences will be carried out. The heated outcry for such executions which prevailed here at first has subsided.

Trial of the Ex-Queen.

The trial of the ex-queen is likely to take place the following week. The charges and specifications were served upon her on the 31st, inst. The most important part of the evidence against her will be from her own diary, found at Washington palace after her arrest. The chief witnesses against her will be Sam Nowlein and her private secretary, Kaai. It is believed that she will plead guilty but that notwithstanding, a full trial of her case will be held. There is no doubt but that the execute will extend to the ex-queen the utmost clemency consistent with the public safety.

About the Landing of Arms.

The trial of V. V. Ashford, lasted during parts of four days. Nowlein testified to having arranged with Ashford for that part of the proposed attack on the 3d, which was to be made from the fish market. Davis testified to having consulted Ashford about getting and landing the arms on the day he went to sea to meet the schooner.

Kaai testified to his copying and the queen signing on the 26th of December, a commission for V. V. Ashford as associate justice of the supreme court.

Several witnesses testifies to Nowlein's repeated interviews with Ashford. A vigorous defense was made for the accused. Both himself and his brother testified that the interviews with Nowlein related to various items of legal business, especially as to advice what to do in case of a search warrant coming to Washington parlace.

Clubs Recommended.

V. V. Ashford testified that he was attorney for Davis in various claims made against him. He stated that he knew nothing about the arms or the proposed movement. He had advised Davis to keep clear of any movement conducted by natives as it would fail. Nowlein had said to him that if the natives rose they would rise as one. Arms were not necessary, they could accomplish the undertaking with clubs. He had told Nowlein that there was no possible chance of the restoration of the monarchy and that the queen's sun had set when she refused the terms of Minister Willis. He was surprised to learn that such a foolhardy attempt had been made to restore the monarchy and said that he had been in ill health for some months and in no condition to take part in the movement.

On the first day of February the court proceeded with the trial of twenty-two natives. The decisions and sentences of the court will probably be pronounced after the conclusion of the ex-queen's trial.

They Muzzle the Press.

London, Feb. 11.—The Daily Graphic has this despatch from Constantinople: "The queen's speech, with its allusions to Armenia, and Lord Roseberry's references to the same subject have made a deep impression at the palace. The local papers have been forbidden to allude to the matter, and only part of the queen's speech has been printed here. The diplomatists believe that a conference of the signatory powers of the Berlin treaty to discuss reforms in Armenia will be eventually necessary."

Toughs Under Arrest.

Derby, Conn., Feb. 11.—Wiliam Tassock, William McClosky, Michael Ryan, and Edward O'Hara, local toughs, were arrested yesterday on suspicion of the robbery of M. H. Spalding, R. & H. Adams' clerk, of $2,067 while on his way from the Birmingham National bank to the office. Spalding identified Ryan as the man who struck him and took the money.

Passed a Ship in Distress.

New York, Feb. 11.—A dispatch received from Provincetown, Mass., last night, says the schooner Thomas H. Lawrence arrived there yesterday from Pooles Landing. She reports that on Saturday, when ten miles east from Thatchers Island she passed a large steamer, bound west, apparently in distress.

To Help Her Sufferers.

Rome, Feb. 11.—The cabinet decided last evening to remit part of the property tax to persons suffering losses from the recent earthquakes in southern Italy and northern Sicily. At the opening of the new parliament the government will bring forward a bill to relieve the people of the afflicted districts.

Cold in the United Kingdom.

London, Feb. 11.—The extreme cold continues throughout the United Kingdom. Isolated cases of skaters drowning were reported yesterday. Many churches caught fire from overheated flues, but none were destroyed.

BERLIN SOCIAL GAYETY

Eight Hundred of the Nobility Dance.

Men in Uniform and Ladies Glisten with Diamonds—Treasures in Jewelled Caskets—A Splinter from the Cross—The Chancellor Talks on Bimetallism.

Berlin, Feb. 11.—Neither the coldness of the weather nor the dreariness of parliamentary politics has affected the splendor of the court season. The last week was crowded with magnificent fetes at the Old Castle and balls and receptions at the palaces of the court nobility. It is the climax of social gayety, for the short season decreed by the emperor is fast approaching its close and by the end of the week the people who make fashion here will be making ready for their trips southward.

Favored Guest.

The great function of the week was the "small" court ball on Wednesday evening. It was instituted by Emperor William I., and the Empress Augusta and an invitation to it is regarded as a mark of special favor. Although nominally small, the list of specially favored guests has been lengthened from year to year until last week it contained more than 800 names. The scene in the White Hall when the imperial family appeared was more imposing than usual. Conspicuous in the semi-circle of guests were many members of the princely families of Germany, the ambassadors and ministers of foreign powers, and the troop of state ministers and chief officials with Chancellor Prince Hohenlohe at their head. All the men were in uniform and the women glistened with diamonds. The familiar rapping of the court marshal's staff was followed by the entrance of the pages. Then came the emperor leading the empress, and behind them other members of the reigning house and the high functionaries of the imperial court. The emperor wore the parade uniform of the body guards and the empress, a cinnamon colored robe with a panel of dull silk. A fringe of pearls bordered the robe, panel and train and headdress, and diamonds studded the diadem which held the long veil in place. The empress' breastband was the highest Prussian decoration, the great star in brilliants. The prince and Princess Henry of Prussia walked next to the imperial couple and behind them were the Princess Frederick Charles and Princess Frederick of Hohenzollern. The women in the long line which followed the royal leaders were resplendent in jewels and costumes which far surpassed in magnificence anything seen at the birthday receptions and probably any court spectacle since the end of the last empire in France.

They Exchange Greetings.

After the exchange of greetings with the chief guests the empress ascended the dais and gave the signal that dancing should begin. Neither she nor the emperor danced. The emperor roved through the hall speaking with his intimate friends and occasionally stopping for a long talk with a minister of state or an ambassador. He devoted fully half an hour to Chancellor Prince Hohenlohe. The empress summoned the wives of the ambassadors to her and passed most of her time before supper in conversation with them. After the minuet, lancers, gavotte, quadrille, and several waltzes, the guests went to supper which was followed by a repetition of the former programme until the close of the ball.

Reporters There.

Chancellor Prince Hohenlohe's second parliamentary dinner was given on Thursday. It had a less political and a more general character than his first entertainment. Among the 400 guests were some thirty of the best known newspaper men in Berlin and others might have been there had they not seen fit to ignore their invitations. During the three hours which the reception lasted the chancellor moved almost incessantly among his guests. He sat down only now and then to converse with some political leader.

The chancellor has brought most of the Hohenlohe family treasurers from his castle at Neuenstein and they were spread on the tables for the edification of the company. They certainly were calculated to please the clericals whose favor is most coveted by the prince at present, for the majority of them are religious relics which bear testimony to the unshaken Catholicism of his house. All were encased in gold jewelled caskets to protect them from the touch of the curious.

Was It from the Cross?

There was a splinter from the cross on which Christ was crucified, a small piece of the sponge which was offered to Christ on the cross, bones from the bodies of several saints, a gold and sapphire crown of antique workmanship in imitation of the crown of thorns, and any number of jewelled crucifixes which once belonged to great men of the church. Besides these treasures, the Prince had spread out a collection of massive gold plate which his family gathered through centuries. Everybody who had the good fortune to see the chancellor's treasures remarked that nobody after seeing them could doubt the earnestness of his religious convictions.

The chancellor had a long talk with Dr. Lieber in favor of bimetallism. He said:

"Germany will take no steps in this matter without first reaching an understanding with England. Of what would it be for me to make a declaration in the reichstag in favor of bimetallism or to tell everybody that I am agreeable to, while all the time England prevents our doing anything of practical importance?"

FIGHTING IN THE ORIENT

Further Details of the Attack on Wei-Hai-Wei.

Torpedoes Sent Warships to the Bottom—The Boats and Their Guns Covered with a Coating of Ice—Scouts Are Vigilant—The Chinese Hold the Fort.

London, Feb. 11.—The Central News correspondent in Pekin telegraphs that the Chinese government is consulting with the foreign diplomatists concerning the new powers to be exercised by the peace envoys to Japan. The Central News correspondent in Tokio has these details of the recent fighting at Wei-Hai-Wei:

"On the night of Jan. 30 the Japanese torpedo entered the bay of Wei-Hai-Wei, but the Japanese in the western forts, supposing that the boats were from the Chinese squadron, opened a heavy fire and compelled them to withdraw.

"January 31 was raw and blustering. Toward evening it snowed heavily. The warships, their guns and the torpedo boats were coated with ice five inches thick and were at too great a disadvantage to venture an attack. The second attempt upon the Chinese was deferred, therefore, until the night of Feb. 2, when an advance of the torpedo boats was ordered.

They Go to the Bottom.

"The Chinese were on the watch, however, and scouts discovered the Japanese in time to give general warning. The torpedo fleet was forced to withdraw without even approaching the Chinese squadron.

"February 3 was passed in preparations for another attack. On the night of Feb. 4 the Chinese were less vigilant than formerly. The Japanese torpedo boat Ming-Ling stole in upon the Chinese fleet and, while entirely unobserved, launched two torpedoes at the Ting-Yuen. The big ironclad began to go down almost immediately after being struck. The Ming-Ling lost eight men in getting away. Fifteen other torpedo boats took part in the attack and two of them broke their propellers on rocks or floating obstructions. On the night of the 5th one Japanese torpedo boat approached the Chinese fleet and launched seven torpedoes, sinking two warships and a gunboat.

Their Capture Useless.

"The correspondent in Tokio says that the Chinese still hold forts on the island of Liu-Kung-Tao. On the 6th the Japanese made an unsuccessful attack upon the uncaptured forts. On the 7th the cruisers and gunboats aided the attacking Japanese troops with a hot cannonade, but the main forts remained in the enemy's hands.

"Of the forts captured by the Japanese at Wei-Hai-Wei the western group is useless, but the eastern group is in fine condition and is armed throughout with excellent guns, which are of great use to the Japanese marines."

Uncle Sam in Debt.

Pierre, S. D., Feb. 11.—"The United States owes South Dakota from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000, and I believe it can be collected." This statement was made by F. M. Goodykountz, of Mitchell, state agent at Washington. A provision of the state of South Dakota, indorsed by the general government, provides the state shall receive 5 per cent. of the value of all public lands within its borders which the government sells and Mr. Goodykountz asserts this per centage can be recovered for lands in the Sioux and Sisseton reservations which have been thrown open. The government resists these claims on the ground that the benefit goes to the Indians.

Bodies from the Elbe.

London, Feb. 11.—A fishing smack brought to Lowestoft yesterday the dead bodies of Paul Szuchy and Meri Babos, who were steerage passengers on the steamship Elbe. The body on which were found documents designating it as that of Edward Muscovitz, a second cabin passenger on the Elbe has been identified by the true Edward Muscovitz as that of Daniel Guttman, one of three brothers who had embezzled nearly 200,000 florins in Hungary and were fleeing to America. Guttman married Edward Muscovitz's sister and booked under his name to avoid detection.

He May Publish a Daily.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 11.—Mayor Pingree's long, bitter fight with the daily newspapers of the city has resulted in the formation of a plan by which he intends to present his own side of all public questions that he thinks the papers will not print. The mayor asserts the newspapers have misrepresented him on many public questions, and refuse to print anything favorable to him or his work. He also is considering the advisability of publishing a daily paper.

Their First Game June 20.

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 11.—The representatives of the Harvard and Yale baseball associations held a conference in this city and fixed the dates for the basball games between the two universities. The first game will take place at Cambridge Thursday, June 20, and the second game at New Haven, Tuesday, June 25. If a tie results, a third games will be played on June 29, the place to be settled later, but New York is favored.

Has Japan Received the Warning?

London, Feb. 11.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg says the Novoe Vremja uses this language in a leader on the Times' recent prediction of European intervention in the east. "It is a warning to Japan that China's destinies will be settled by the great European powers. Korea and Manchuria in particular must remain outside Japan's administration."

Captain Bandelon Her Commander.

London, Feb. 11.—Dispatches from Havre contradict the recent assertion of the Standard's Paris correspondent that Lieut. Deloncle commands the missing steamship La Gascogne. Capt. Bandelon is in charge of the vessel.

MILKMAN ON THE WARPATH.

He Cuts Open a Customer's Head with a Can.

Wm. Peel, a milkman living just this side of Scotch Plains, in delivering milk this noon, stopped at the corner of Watchung avenue and Second street to leave milk for Ike Shragovich, the tailor. He claimed that there was 15 cents coming to him, which the customer paid.

J. Srager, another tenant in the house, wanted to get a quart of milk, and Peel became violent, using terrible language.

The two had a tussle, and Shragovich tried to separate them, when the milkman gave him a blow on the head with a two-quart measure, making a bad cut.

He then started for Frank Patience and his wife with a spade. They run in the house and shut the door. The door and latch was broken by Peel, and considerable other damage resulted. Sergeant Kiely was notified, but Peel had left before the officer arrived.

Justice Nash, however, issued a warrant for Peel's arrest, but he had not been captured up to the hour of going to press.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff of Duer street is ill with a heavy cold.

Miss Sadie Cleaves of Netherwood avenue is visiting friends in Jersey City.

John Flannery of Scotch Plains had a paralytic stroke last night and is very low.

Miss Annie Smith is ill at her home on Johnston avenue with the grip, verging on pneumonia.

Mrs. Robert Lowry of 902 Madison avenue announces a tea for Saturday, Feb. 16, from 4 to 7, and "at home" Wednesdays.

Craig Waldron, who has been Grocer J. A. Smith's valued bookkeeper for the past seven years, will sever his connection there this week.

Samuel Wakefield of Netherwood avenue, who has been confined to his home with the grip, was able to resume his work at Scott's Press Works this morning.

E. L. Maxwell, President of the Pond Tool Company, died Saturday at his home in Brooklyn. During the funeral services tomorrow afternoon the works in Plainfield will be closed.

Joseph D. Moon, residing at 44 Grandview avenue, has accepted a position with the Hastings Card Company, 26 Beekman street, New York, of which Fred C. C. Lounsbury of this city is president and treasurer. H. H. Brokaw of Duer street is a bookkeeper in the same house.

In the Sixth Presbyterian Church, Newark, will take place tomorrow evening the marriage of Miss Elva L. Martin of Newark to Stewart B. Moffett of Rahway, assistant superintendent of freight on the Pennsylvania railroad at Elizabeth. Robert W. Clark and Edward Clark of this city, cousins of the bride, will officiate as ushers. A reception will be held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, 116 Union street, Newark. Mr. and Mrs. Moffett will leave immediately after for Jacksonville, Fla., where they will remain a short time.

—Owing to the funeral of R. W. Rice the store will not be open tomorrow.

FROZEN IN A HUT.

The Exposures of Two Eccentric Brothers.

For twenty-five years Jacob Stout and his brother James have lived the lives of hermits in an old shanty in Madison. This morning James told a passing farmer that his brother was dead. The farmer reported the case to an undertaker, who notified Coroner Douglas of Morristown. The undertaker investigated the case, and found Jacob lying on the floor frozen.

In the room were four goats and about twenty chickens. The goats had eaten the dead man's clothing and mutilated his body. It is supposed that the man was frozen Friday night. James Stout refused to talk and appeared to be demented. He had suffered terribly from cold, and was clad in rags. Jacob Stout was about 70 years old and his brother 63. The brothers' mode of living has made them well-known characters throughout Morris County.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The Senior class held a class meeting at recess. A design for the class-pin was adopted and Edgar I. Serrell was appointed a committee to purchase the pins. The design adopted is an ornamental shield with '95 and the motto engraved upon it.

The question of a class paper was discussed and it was decided to have one. The meeting then adjourned to meet at the close of school, but no meeting was held as no quorum was present.

Hot Ashes Start a Fire.

Yesterday morning at 3, just as Charles Smith had come down stairs for a drink of water he glanced out of the window and saw smoke arising from an ash barrel back of the wood-shed in the rear of his sample rooms at the corner of Front and Somerset streets, and rushing out was met by Policeman Fredrickson who was also attracted by the smoke.

It was but the work of a moment to put out the incipient blaze, yet great damage might have resulted had the fire gained much more headway. Hot ashes were doubtless the cause.

Traffic Resumed.

The first westbound train for Philadelphia on the Jersey Central since Thursday's blizzard went through this city at 8:44 this morning. Owing to the wreck in Belle Mead cut, Philadelphia and Washington trains have been sent via Bethlehem Junction, Pa., on the P. & R., connecting there with the Pennsylvania road for the south. Trains are now running nearly or quite on schedule over the entire Central system. The South Branch to Flemington is practically open.

Wined and Dined.

Saturday evening the executive staff of the Prudential Life Insurance Company held a reception and banquet at Delmonico's. Of course R. M. Dawson, the genial Superintendent of the Plainfield district, was present and responded to a toast, while at his side sat E. W. Pepper, formerly of this district but now located for the company at Lawrence, Mass.

The affair, like all of its predecessors, was a grand success, for the Prudential does nothing by halves.

A Candle Starts a Blaze.

A young woman on Westervelt avenue left a lighted candle on her dresser last evening after preparing for church, and had not some members of the family been attracted by the odor of smoke while passing through the hall a few minutes later and put out the incipient blaze which had already started in the woodwork, the pretty boudoir would soon have been in ruins.

Midnight Sun Tonight.

"The Land of the Midnight Sun", which comes to Music Hall tonight, is from the pen of Edwin Barbour, a young dramatist who has achieved much success. The scenes are laid in the sulphur mining districts of the Arctic Zone and the flower-laden hills of North Carolina, giving great scope for scenic display. The cast is composed of clever people. Among the most prominent are George W. Walters, Harry Webster, William W. Bittner, David Hanchett, Charles Barringer, Ada Lytton and Anna Mayor. The scenery is from the brush of John Young of the Broadway Theatre, New York, and is said to be the best that has been seen in any melodramatic production of recent years.

The play, like most of Manager Pearson's productions, has effects which are highly realistic and spectacular. The strongest of these is the eruption of Mount Hecla, and the explosion of the sulphur mines, two scenes that admit of a grand pyrotechnic display. The story is one of strong emotion, dealing with the lives of two brothers who are unknown to each other, one seeking vengeance upon the other for a wrong wrought by their own father.

Runaway Quickly Stopped.

Louis Waring was out sleighriding Saturday afternoon with a young brother and sister. They came down Park avenue, and when near G. Q. Packer's furniture store the horse became frightened and Mr. Waring was almost thrown out.

The horse made the trip to Park and North avenues at a jump, the driver hanging over the side of the sleigh, unable to hold the horse.

The animal was stopped at the corner by several people running in front of it. There was no damage.

—Chairman Fisk of the Street Committee today warns the people to clean their walks and gutters.

—All interested in the Y. M. C. A. women as well as men, are invited to the opening of the new building tomorrow evening at 8.

—A horse attached to a wagon ran away on East Front street this morning, but was caught at the corner of Watchung avenue and Front street. The only damage was a broken shaft. The owner is not known.

A NEW SUBSTITUTE FOR BEER.

Mysterious Temperance Drink in Chicago's New "Home Saloons."

A new drink, wonderful in concoction and mysterious in its chemical analysis, is about to be sprung upon the public by Bishop Fallows of the Reformed Episcopal Church. The Bishop is one of the most enthusiastic and resourceful of the workers who have founded and maintained the People's Institute. In connection with his proposed enlargement of the scope of the institute work Bishop Fallows recently outlined his plans for establishing a series of "home saloons."

There has been a slight departure from the original plans, and instead of the "home saloons" being all of the same class, there will be as many degrees of variation as in the original alcoholic dispensaries. The first ones to be established as an experiment will both be located in the heart of the down-town district. One will dispense five cent drinks and the other ten cent drinks. One will cater to the barrel-house or grog-shop constituency, and the other will compete with the bars where the mirrors are of beveled glass, the bars of mahogany, the drinks fifteen cents each, and where the luncheon and side dish of olives is presided over by a white-aproned attendant. Both will be opened in large basements, the only difference between the five and ten cent saloon being in the magnificence of the furnishings and the elaborateness of the free lunch. Bishop Fallows said lately:

"What puzzled us most was to provide some drink that would take the place of beer. We shall offset whiskey, brandy, and rum with soda water, chocolate, coffee, mineral waters, malted milk, cocoa, lemonade, etc., but at first there appeared to be no substitute for beer. We resolved to make one. Expert chemists have been at work on the problem for some time, and the solution is at hand. We have a new drink the color of beer and scarcely to be distinguished from it, but, of course, it is non-alcoholic and non-fermentive.

"Hops enter into its composition—something that cannot be said of some of the beer sold over Chicago bars. The only difficulty we have yet to overcome is to do away with some of the bitterness imparted to the beer by the hops. After much discussion of details we have determined to open the saloons in the district where rents are highest and where most people congregate. We feel sure we can demonstrate that the scheme will be a success from a business standpoint. We shall be much disappointed if they do not pay a net profit of 10 per cent. If we demonstrate that, the People's Institute will be relieved from a further prosecution of the scheme. Private enterprise and capital will then step in and push the good work. Where the five-cent drinks are sold there will be reading rooms, plenty of light and heat, toilet rooms, absolute cleanliness, and a good substantial free lunch on the side. Where the ten-cent drinks are sold the accommodations will be the same, but there will be more mahogany and plate glass about the bar, and the free lunch will be so elaborate that it will serve for a good substantial meal."

When social intercourse falls below the freezing point it is called rudeness; when it rises above the boiling point it is called love; the temperature most beneficial to humanity is politeness.

Saved.

"Oh, thank you, sir!" she exclaimed. "I never thought of that!"

She flitted away, and the bosom of the man was filled with peace.—Puck.

REMOVAL.

Dr. Lighthill begs leave to give notice that he has removed to

(a few doors from his former location) where he can be consulted on all chronic diseases of whatever name and nature.

Dr. Lighthill refers with pardonable pride to the success of his practice in Plainfield and submits below a few of the many testimonials which he has received from grateful patients. A mass of similar ones can be seen at his office.

AN ALMOST MIRACULOUS CURE.

The Statement of Mr. Edward Teel, Jr., of Dunellen, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

From a sense of duty I desire to call public attention to the almost miraculous cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in the case of my wife. For eleven years she had been afflicted with piles of an unusual severe and distressing character. She suffered every day of her life the most intense pain, attended with frequent and profuse hemorrhage. This state of things debilitated her entire system until she became a perfect wreck of her former self.

We made every effort to obtain a cure but they all resulted in bitter disappointment, although a number of physicians of excellent reputations for skill in that direction had treated her case. She grew worse and worse all the time, the pain became perfectly unbearable and I felt she could not bear the strain of her condition much longer. In this extremity, a friend of mine, Mr. W. R. Dilts, a resident of Roselle, N. J., a passenger conductor on the New Jersey Central told me that he had been similarly affected, and had been permanently cured by Dr. Lighthill, after other medical skill had failed. He assured me that the doctor would cure my wife, no matter how severe her case may be, and his prediction proved perfectly correct. In spite of her desperate condition, Dr. Lighthill, I am glad to say, has effected a complete and perfect cure in her case, and has given her new life.

Since the cure has been effected she has gained in health and strength and is so improved in appearance that her friends scarcely recognize her. They all consider her cure as almost miraculous, and Dr. Lighthill's praise is heard on every side. Our gratitude to Dr. Lighthill is unbounded and we only hope that other sufferers may be benefited by this publication.

EDWARD TEEL, JR.

A Flattering Testimonial from Colonel John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing with which I was afflicted.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly: they were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 132 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOMAS CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card From Mr. T. R. VanZandt,
of Nos. 304 and 306 Park ave.,
Plainfield, N. J

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks, but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose flattering testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

FORMAL OPENING OF OUR

Grocery Department!

MONDAY, FEB. 11.

A few plain remarks in connection with this new departure we think is opportune.

A few months ago I rented and fitted up at a heavy expense my present elegant and spacious stores, with the intention of giving Plainfield a department store second to none in the State.

As I have progressed from one improvement to another, I find that if I fulfill my plan, I must, of necessity, add a first class Grocery Department, in order to compete with New York and Brooklyn department stores, as many of my patrons are buying these goods there, and I desire me to furnish them with their Groceries together with their Dry Goods, Housefurnishings, etc.

I am very much surprised as I have talked to people in regard to this movements, to find that there is such a large proportion of this trade going to New York department stores, and I shall make a strong effort to induce it to remain at home—where it belongs.

I shall do all I can to counteract the too prevalent idea abroad that Plainfield is an expensive place to live in on account of the high prices on articles of food, as real estate agents often say they are obliged to meet this objection when trying to sell or rent houses to New York and Brooklyn people.

We shall, therefore, sell our goods, which will always be of the best quality to be had, at what may be known as cut prices

FAMOUS ENGLISH SWORDS.

Some Noticeable Weapons That Are Exhibited In the Tower of London.

Whoever visits the London Tower may enjoy a veritable feast of swords, but amid the numberless array of weapons there are one or two that are especially worthy of notice. There is the sword of state, which is girt on the monarch's side after his anointing at the imposing ceremony of coronation, which girding is more honored in the breach, one would suppose, when the monarch is a lady. The sword is first consecrated by the primate, and by him handed to the lord chamberlain, who completes the function. It is a two handed weapon, with rich decorations on hilt and pommel and scabbard. Of scarcely less importance is the "sword of mercy," borne before the sovereign in the coronation procession. This sword is named Curtana, but though undoubtedly very ancient it can hardly claim to be the original Curtana forged by the famous Munifican.

This original Curtana was the magic weapon of Ogier the Dane, bold knight of Charlemagne's most warlike days. Our own Curtana is in any case many centuries old. It is square pointed, with the look as though the point had been broken short; hence possibly its name. A fine gold wire covers its handle, and the scabbard is remarkably ornate. Two other swords are carried at the coronation ceremony—swords symbolical of spiritual and temporal justice, the first with an obtuse point, the latter sharp. Curtana and these two justice swords are not often called upon to make a public appearance. It is happily more than a half century since they were last required at a coronation, but whenever the sovereign opens parliament in person the sword of state first mentioned is called from its repose.

The lord mayor's sword is even more familiar to the general public, and not only London, but most other corporations, have their sword and sword bearer. It is a picturesque survival of the middle ages, which one would regret to see abolished—part of the ritual of state customs, which ritual is by no means meaningless. Public action must often be of a figurative character. Such is the mode by which the city of London sometimes does honor to those who have rendered the nation good service, presenting to them swords of honor. These civic swords have been given to men like Lord Napier, Lord Clyde, Lord Wolseley. Wellington received one in his day, and so did the Prussian Blucher.—London Standard.

Golf.

A game with a history of more than 400 years must necessarily have some interesting records. Golf has been greatly liked by kings. In the time of James I it was generally practiced by all classes. The unfortunate Charles I was devoted to golf. While on a visit in Scotland in 1641 as he was deeply engaged in a game news was brought him of the breaking out of a rebellion in Ireland, and the royal golfer threw down his club and retired in great agitation to Holyrood House. When he was imprisoned at Newcastle, his keeper kindly permitted him to take recreation on the golfing links with his train. It is said that Mary, queen of Scots, was seen playing golf in the field beside Seaton a few days after the murder of her husband. In 1837 a magnificent gold medal was presented to St. Andrew's by William IV, to be played for annually. One of the earlier kings forbade the importation of golf balls from Holland because it took away "na small quantitie of gold and silver out of the kingdome of Scotland," and at one time "golfe and futeball and other unprofitable games" were forbidden in England because archery, so necessary in the defense of the nation, was being neglected in their favor.—Exchange.

The Hawaiian Islands.

The Hawaiian Islands have been found to be richer in animal life than was formerly supposed. As the result of a year's investigation by the British association, through its committee, it has been found that of birds there are 78 species, of which 57 are peculiar to this group. All the land and fresh water shells are peculiar, and of 1,000 species of insects 700 are not found elsewhere. It thus seems that these islands have by no means been populated from the continent, but have been centers of independent creation.—Independent.

How He Was Wounded.

Pension Agent—I see you have been drawing a pension on the wounded list when the record shows that you were drummed out of the army for desertion.

Pensioner—Yes. That is so.

Pension Agent—Well, how were you wounded?

North Plainfield Governors Enlighten Themselves on Election Matters.

The North Plainfield Township Committee met Saturday night, and with the help of Borough Counsel C. A. Reed settled the matter of elective officers.

It was decided that all officers whose term does not expire this year hold over. The township take the offices of freeholder and overseer of the poor from the borough, necessitating that the borough fill the vacancies.

The following officers are to be elected in the township: Town committeeman, two justices of the peace, two surveyors of highways, three commissioners of appeal and two poundkeepers.

In the borough the following offices are to be filled: Freeholder, overseer of the poor, three councilmen, two justices of the peace, three constables, two surveyors of highways, three commissioners of appeal, four poundkeepers, assessor and collector.

The following will compose the Board of Registration in the Borough: First district—Firman Godown, Geo. Hughes. Second district—Harry Brokaw, Lewis Kline.

In the Township the following: First district—Lewis Barkalew, Alfred Vail, G. B. Stewart, J. T. Case. Second district—D. D. Smalley, J. W. Coddington, Edgar C. Schenck, H. R. Conklin.

The borough board will meet tomorrow and transact necessary business, and the township board will meet Tuesday, March 5.

The Township Committee will meet again this evening to complete the year's business.

Relics of His Soldier Days.

Wm. N. Pangborn, chief marshal of the borough, has among his many valuable relics gathered during his war adventures a furlough which he received while mail agent in the 3d Division, 6th Corps. The paper, now time-stained and tattered, gives his description, and grants him furlough from Dec. 26, 1864. As an evidence of the red tape such documents had to go through, it bears the signatures of Andrew J. Smith, Captain and Acting Assistant Assistant Adjutant-General, T. Seymour, Brigadier-General, H. G. Wright, Major-General commanding the Division, and George G. Meade, Major-General of the Army of the Potomac.

Two stamps show Mr. Pangborn's passage through Washington, Dec. 27, 1864, and his return Dec. 10.

Mr. Pangborn has 381 valuable letters of army correspondence, a piece of timber from John Brown's gallows, and a brick from Libby Prison.

BY THE WAY.

—Work was resumed today on the excavation for the foundation of Joseph Blatz's new house.

—Charles Sutterline of Greenbrook road lost a valuable hound last Friday night, from freezing to death.

—Street Commissioner Meeker has a force of men this afternoon engaged in cutting through the snow banks at Mulford Cole's hill on East Front street.

—The high and penetrating wind prevented the perfect heating of Trinity Church yesterday, and services were held in the basement. The meetings were full of spirituality, and were greatly enjoyed.

—A steampipe in Grace Church burst yesterday morning, crippling the heating apparatus to such an extent that the morning audience was dismissed after a short service, and no evening service was held.

—A team, hitched to a wagonload of grains, belonging to C. Frank French, became stalled in a snowbank on their way to Scotch Plains last Saturday. The driver was obliged to proceed with half a load, and return for the remainder.

—While Otto Gunther of Short Hills was carting a load of coal to his home, the wagon got fast in a snowdrift in front of H. P. Talmage's residence on Belvidere avenue, Friday, but with the assistance of several men armed with shovels, Mr. Gunther proceeded on his way.

—Tom Smith and Louis Chase came near having an accident yesterday in the East Front street snowdrift near Cole's. Indeed, had it not been for the promptness and good horsemanship of the former, who was driving, both would have been "spilled into the white".

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure.

PHENOMENAL RECORD.

Nearly 100,000 Pianos Manufactured and Sold.

The demand for pianos of a superior class increases year by year. Musical education has advanced rapidly in the last few decades, and the musical public can now judge better of a piano's merits than it formerly could. That piano pleases which has longest stood the test of popular favor.

The Fischer piano can point with pride to the long list of testimonials from all sources regarding its various merits. Not only professional musicians, but the voices of our homes attest its popularity. 100,000 Fischer pianos explain the fact of the public's confidence in a superior instrument.

At the Columbian Exposition it attained the highest possible award of superiority and general excellence. What greater praise could be bestowed upon it? 100,000 Fischer pianos mean many millions of pleased and delighted hearers. If popularity founded on enduring merit goes for anything, the Fischer piano is not only in the front rank, but is a leader among pianos.

The experience of Geo. A. Apgar, of German Valley, N. J., is well worth remembering. He was troubled with chronic diarrhoea and doctored for five months and was treated by four different doctors without benefit. He then began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, of which one small bottle effected a complete cure. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. NOW ON HAND, Diphtheria Antitoxine. FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.

So limited has been the supply of GENUINE ANTITOXINE heretofore, that sales have been made only on condition of immediate actual use. But amid so large a population as ours, an urgent demand for the new treatment may arise at any hour, night or day, Sunday or week-day. And delay in obtaining it might result fatally. I have therefore, with some difficulty, and at considerable expense, provided a complete outfit of Antitoxine Serum (with injector) and am prepared to meet such demand. The cost of an outfit (Serum of two powers and Koch injector) is now about $12 being only one-fourth of the earlier price. At present sales will be made only on the order of a practicing physician.

INSECTS AS ACTORS.

Creatures that Change Their Appearance to Deceive Fierce Enemies.

All creation below a man is in a state of war, and any creature that cannot take care of itself quickly falls an unpitied victim. Those that have teeth or claws or stings fight with them, and those that have none of these are driven to seek safety by aping the appearance and manner of some better endowed relative. Butterflies in general are most helpless creatures, but some of them are possessed of a peculiar defence. They have a bad taste! Birds that try to eat them find themselves made ill, and naturally stop the feast.

Now, the uniform of such a butterfly is a valuable protection, and the sweet and edible butterflies that live in the same fields avail themselves of it. If the favored fly is red, some butterflies that ought, perhaps, to be yellow are found arrayed in a shade of red which is a pretty close match of the one copied. If the poisonous one has a marked spot on his wings, the imitator will grow a spot somewhat like it, and even when the first has so distinctive a mark as a swallow-tail wing, the poor hunted cousin is not discouraged, but sticks out an imitation spike at the end of his wing, in the hope of deceiving the eye of the ever-watchful sparrow who is after him.

These disguises of the butterfly are wonderful enough, but they are all in the family, so to speak, and are far surpassed by other insects, who, not finding any safe individual to copy among their own near relatives, take a bold step and imitate a member of an entirely different family. There is a moth that has assumed the disguise of the belligerent bee quite successfully. To do this he has himself hatched with the down on his wings so loose that a buzz or two shakes it all off, and leaves the wings transparent and gauzy like the bee's. Then he crawls around with an imitation of a bee's peculiar glide, and does his best to look as if he had a sting. There are other flies that have imitated bees more or less successfully, but none that have gone so far to do so as this one.

Mark Twain has called the ant a very much overrated bird. But if a man has highly estimated this "bird," he has but followed in the footsteps of nature. For the ant is one of nature's favorites. She has made him so dry and hard and indigestible that he requires a specially constructed animal to eat him. Hence he lives and increases in comparative peace, and is the envy of all his neighbors. He would doubtless have many imitators if it were not that he is so hard to copy. But he has nevertheless found a follower in a certain spider.

Now, there is a great difference between the natural appearance of a spider and an ant; so great that the spider, even if he is a long, thin, black spider, might well be discouraged; for he has eight legs, and an ant six, and he has two bulbs to his body, and an ant three. Yet he is nothing daunted. By some system of tight lacing or other, he first manages to divide his abdominal bulb in two. He does not get such a waist as an ant has, but he makes an apparent division, which is something; then he walks around on his six hind legs, like an ant, and waves his two fore legs in the air, like an ant's antennæ, and, it is to be supposed, fancies himself indigestible!

Of all these imitation warriors none is so ambitious as one species of caterpillar. He is large, lizards like to eat him, and he is perfectly defenceless. When he is at rest he is like any other caterpillar, and no one would notice certain dark spots on his shoulders. But touch him, and at once he draws his head back into his body, and presents to view a most terrifying dragoon face. The spots on his back now look like great saucer eyes, and his dark head forms a beak of most belligerent aspect. The whole effect is ridiculously fierce, and must be seen to be appreciated. An innocent lizard to whom this caterpillar was fed turned tail when he saw the transformation, and did not stop until he was well hidden behind a twig.

Senator Squire's Vest.

Once in a great while some Senator appears in the Senate chamber with clothes that make the welkin ring. There is still a glowing vision in the mind's eye of the striped coat which Senator Quay wore on one of the numerous days he delivered a part of his humorous speech.

It was Mr. Squire's turn yesterday to rival and eclipse the gorgeous panorama which Mr. Quay presented. Mr. Squire was attired—with the emphasis on "tired"—in a black Prince Albert suit and a vest or striking yellow. No creamery butter that ever came from country churn, no dandelion ever wooing the gentle spring breezes on a sunny hillside, no field of waving corn, not even the golden sunsets of which Homer writes, ever equalled in vividness of color the vest which Mr. Squire wore lately. It was a bird. It spread all over the broad expanse of Mr. Squire's bosom like a field of buttercups in a ten-acre lot.—Washington Post.

The American Girl Restored.

Outdoor life, delight in action, the spirit of sport, have taken hold of American womanhood. Girls of strong physique, erect carriage and energetic spirit, delighting in tennis, riding, boating, walking, are now the rule; the feeble, indoor do-nothing is the exception, and the result is a tall, vigorous race, with free steps and cheeks aglow with the ruddy color of physical health and energy. Walk along the avenues of any large city at the fashionable hours and the procession of bright, animated girlhood which passes before one's eyes gives ample proof of summer activity. All over the country, where there are men and women to start a club and create a sporting interest, the women also have their share of advantages, and in not a few cases their fair share also of the work of setting the organizations on foot. There are a few country clubs, hunt clubs, tennis clubs or other sporting clubs throughout the Union which have not a lady membership.

Mother Hubbard Up to Date.

The old ballet girl, in a faded Mother Hubbard,
To get her dog a bone went a-searching through the cupboard;
There was no bone there, which gave her lots of pain,
But a search in her stocking would not have been in vain. —Bennett Star.

DINNERS IN FRISCO.

CURIOUS COSMOPOLITAN RESTAURANTS ON THE COAST.

One May Dine In the Manner of a Different Country Every Night In the Week. A Dirty Italian Restaurant on the Water Front That Is Very Popular.

One of the features of cosmopolitan San Francisco is its restaurants. Every foreign colony boasts of a place where its native cooking can be had, and adventurous San Franciscans who care to look these places up can dine in the manner of a different country every night in the week. If an elaborate Chinese dinner, with its numberless impossible courses, each accompanied by sweetmeats, proves unattractive, a Hawaiian dinner, with poi and salted fish, can be had by walking a few blocks. For those who like highly spiced dinners there are the Italian and Spanish restaurants to choose from, and for those with small appetites, who look for novelty in service, there are the Turkish restaurants, with their unpronounceable dishes and delicious coffee.

The most popular of the foreign restaurants are the Italian. There are several of these scattered about the Latin quarter, which are much frequented by San Franciscans on account of the excellence of the cooking. Most of them are dirty, very dirty, as to floors and walls, and the Italians are not oversqueamish regarding the table linen. When a party of Americans enter, however, there is a general shuffle among the waiters to secure the service of the table and the prospective tip. The question of precedence being settled, the wine stained tablecloth is whisked off and replaced by one not always newly laundered or else suspiciously damp.

These restaurants are rarely on the main streets and have to be approached through dark alleys. One situated behind the county jail occupies the back room of a small Italian grocery store. In going there one is reminded of dark deeds and sharp stilettos, but the dinner is worth the journey. The chef of this place is famous for cooking 'Italiarini,' a paste made by himself and cut in strips and cooked with a sauce made of tomatoes, spices and mushrooms. It is extremely rich and very peppery, but all Italian dishes are strongly dashed with chili peppers.

The dinner is attended with great ceremony. A bottle of their sour claret is served with each dinner. Every Italian drinks about two quarts of it with his dinner, so the bottle supply sometimes runs short. In this event the waiter goes to the bar, fillls an empty bottle from a demijohn, drives in a cork, and then carries the bottle to the table where it is needed, sometimes four feet from the bar, and impressively producing his corkscrew draws the cork as carefully as though he were handling the finest burgundy. His demeanor is so serious throughout the performance that one dare not look amused.

A very popular restaurant is Bazzuro's, which is situated near the water front. This is greatly patronized by the Italian fishermen, who file in after their day's work, still wearing their gum boots and smelling strongly of their craft. It is also frequented by the Italian vegetable gardeners, who drive in from the outskirts of town, and after disposing of their stock stop to dine. When the place is reasonably well filled, there is a babel of voices. They are all talking at once, and out of the confusion the word "scudi" is distinguished above all others.

This means money, which the proprietor says, with a shrug, "they talk about all the time, all the time." The fishermen bring the best of their day's catch here, and the gardeners offer their choicest vegetables. The chef, whose kitchen is back of the dining tables and in full view of the room, is a merry fellow, and between his juggling feats, tossing his pan into the air to turn the cooking fish or meat exchanges gossip and jests with the diners. This place is kept comparatively clean. The floor is covered with sawdust and the ceiling festooned with gaudy colored paper cut in fanciful designs. Two parrots add to the general din, and all sorts and conditions of cats prowl around the floor.

The restaurant is conducted by two brothers, one of whom waits on table, while the other attends bar and looks after the cash receipts. Every Italian after dining stops at the bar for a chat and a drink. Instead of a liquor, the host pours generous glasses of claret for himself and his guests, and these are speedily tossed off. A casual visitor, after witnessing this ceremony about 25 times in quick succession, is apt to grow nervous about the health of the host, but he appears none the worse for his conviviality at the end of the evening. The younger brother sometimes relieves his brother at the bar. He is quite as hospitable, and his invariable drink being absinthe and seltzer his case seems even more alarming.

This restaurant, at 7:30 in the evening, when dinner is in full swing, presents an odd sight, the Italians sitting around the tables, most of them with their hats on, gesticulating and talking excitedly across the room, while they roll the spaghetti round their forks and dexterously transfer it in yard lengths to their mouths. A butcher, with all the marks of his trade about him, occupies a table with the policeman on the beat, who gets the best service of all; a few men about town, who have heard of the chef's fame, and forget the unsavory looking company in their enjoyment of the plates, and often a table or two taken by young society girls with their chaperon and escorts. The girls consider a dinner at Bazzuro's a tremendous lark.

The Americans do not venture on the claret so generously served with the dinner. A flask of Chianti is ordered in its stead, and the proprietor always proffers the empty flask to the youngest member of the party as a souvenir.—San Francisco Letter.

JIM LEARNS BAD HABITS.

A Crow Becoming Dissipated in the Society of a New York Regiment.

When the Seventy-first Regiment went to Brooklyn during the trolley strike the headquarters of the regiment was established at the Bergen Street barns of the Atlantic Avenue lines. The accommodations were not extensive, and about the only available place for the offices of the battalion adjutants was a little box of a room about ten feet square, used by the superintendent of the Bergen Street line. When the adjutants moved in with their trappings the superintendent got out gracefully, and they didn't know until an hour or so later that their impropriation was to be questioned. Then a big black crow, which had been watching events gravely from his perch on a high shelf, began to scold loudly and flap his wings. Some of the Seventy-first boys tried to catch him, but he eluded them, squaking with anger, apparently, whenever anybody got near him.

It was not until the next morning that the crow would condescend to make friends. The boys learned that he was a pet of the superintendent's, and that his name was Jim. They called him by name, and then Jim evidently thought that he had asserted his dignity long enough, for he at once got friendly and allowed the boys to scratch his head. In return the boys kept a cup of water and a piece of bread on a desk for him at any hour of the day or night.

One morning, after some of the boys had been out in the cold a long time, several of them went into the adjutant's office to thaw out. They had a bottle of whiskey, and, as Jim looked not very spry that morning, they poured a little out in a cup and put it on a desk for him. Jim sidled up to the cup, put his head on one side, and looked down into it for a long time. Then he twisted his head and looked with the other eye quite as long. Finally he put his bill into the cup and took a long draught. Then he threw back his head and swallowed it.

Everybody was watching the bird. The swallow made Jim blink his eyes. Then he seemed surprised. The next second he had reached his water-cup in a corner of the desk in a hop, skip and jump, and was drinking water as fast as he could get it down.

"Why, he's just as sensible as a man!" cried one of the adjutants in admiration. "Takes water with it. Say, he'll be a candidate for a lieutenancy pretty soon, won't he? Here, Jim, come and wipe your mouth."

The adjutant held out his handkerchief, and the bird, without hesitating a moment, hopped over and wiped his bill on it six or seven times. Then everybody roared.

Jim evidently thought that whiskey, with water after it, was pretty good, for he went to the cup again and again and filled his bill. And always afterward he would hop gravely to his water cup and wash it down. He kept at it until there was neither whiskey nor water left, and then he got somnolent. He had great difficulty in keeping his balance till he got to his perch, and greater difficulty when he tried to go sleep. He couldn't manage it on one leg, so he squatted on both and closed his eyes.

After that the boys always give Jim a share of their whiskey. He got used to it in the course of a day or so, and instead of going to sleep he would get on a foolish jag and flop around the floor in a fashion very undignified, talking to himself. It was while on one of these jags that he got under the feet of one of the boys and had his toes tramped on. He was laid up for the rest of the afternoon, and when he drank again he was more moderate.

Jim has a passion for pecking at everything he sees. When anybody writes at the desk he isn't satisfied until he has tried to swallow the pencil or pen. Once, but once only, he sampled the ink, and it didn't agree with him. He also likes cigarettes, but he has discovered that the lighted end isn't as good as the other. If he lives through his inquisitiveness, the Seventy-first boys want to take him home with them. They think he would make a fine regimental pet, and he seems so intelligent that he could doubtless be taught to perform many tricks.

WHY STRIKES FAIL.

Prone to Disorder and Violence Public Sympathy Revolts.

A correspondent of the New York Sun asks that paper why it is always on the side of the corporations when there is a strike or tie-up, and receives this characteristic answer from Mr. Dana:

The great labor strikes which, during the last ten years, have called forth any extended comments have been the Missouri Pacific strike of 1886; the coal and freight handlers' strike of the same year in this city; the Reading strike of 1887; the locomotive engineers' strike of 1888; the street car strike of this city in 1889; that unparalleled disgrace to the name of organized labor and to the public dastards who, from newspaper offices and political platforms, gave countenance to its atrocities, the strike at Homestead; the Erie strike at Buffalo in 1892; the Debs insurrection in Pullman and in Chicago in 1894, and the trolley strike in Brooklyn. Now, will our correspondent answer these questions?

Can he point out one of those great demonstrations, in which the strikers, or the strikers' friends, or the "side against the corporations" didn't defy the law, overthrow it with violence pregnant with murder, seek to destroy property, to tyrannize over or to murder non-union men, and oppress and outrage the public.

Will he point to a single instance where the power of the State has been called into action to suppress lawlessness committed by the "side of corporations," and where, in order to defend the personal right or safety of any citizen, or to reopen interrupted traffic, the State has been obliged to turn its guns against the corporations?

Will he point to a single instance where at the times of these strikes The Sun has raised its voice against anything but riot and murder and outrage committed by rioters against the public peace?

We trust our friend will understand the true distinction between the "side of the strikers" and the "side of the corporations," as it must appear to every impartial observer alive to the unshirkable duty of putting down lawlessness and of upholding the sacred principle of liberty for all men.

Uncle Sam's Neutrality.

Uncle Sam has no wish to see Mexico and the Central American republics go to war, but if they must fight anyhow, he has a large assortment of canned goods and things that will come handy to both sides as army supplies.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

MONEY LOANED.

Local Representatives Wanted.

Our system affords an opportunity to borrow on either personal or real estate security. The plan is superior to building and loan associations. The amount borrowed may be returned in monthly payments without bonus, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum, it affords absolute security to investors, with a reasonable guarantee of an annual dividend of from 8 to 10 per cent. We desire to secure the services of energetic, representative men in every community to act as local secretaries. The position will be sufficiently remunerative to amply compensate for services. If you possess the above qualifications write for particulars. Full information regarding our system of making loans as well as investments and agencies will be furnished by addressing S. S. TALKING ON THE AIR

RECORD FOR LONG DISTANCE CONVERSATION WITHOUT A WIRE.

How Carlotta Got an Amateur Balloonist Out of a Fix a Mile Up In the Air—Her Voice Reached Over Four Miles—Gasbags Acted as Receivers.

Tales are plenty of long distances over which men's voices have been conveyed by the medium of placid water. An Adirondack guide tells of having talked in ordinary tones, on a very still day, with a companion 1½ miles distant at the other end of a lake, and another guide caps this story with one of yells which were heard and returned near a water extent of three miles. These tales are quite outdone by a well authenticated story told by Carlotta, once the most famous woman balloonist in the world. In her story air, instead of water, was the medium, and the distance of the conversation was four miles. It took place above the outskirts of St. Louis some years ago.

"It was an aeronautic exhibition," says Carlotta in telling the story, "and a young man named White, who was inexperienced in ballooning, had agreed to make an ascension. I had already gone up and was quietly drifting east on an easy air current when he started out. He had had enough experience to know how to handle the valves and sandbags, and he intended to go up a mile or so and then descend easily. Now, the upper air is full of varying currents. You may be going due west at a half a mile altitude, and when you get up a few hundred yards farther you may strike a current that carries you due east. Mr. White checked his upward career in a west bound draft, so that when he finally drifted out of that current into mine we were a good long distance apart.

"I always have a powerful glass with me when I make an ascension. When I turned this on him, I saw that he was in trouble. His balloon had twisted a little in such a way that I judged it was likely to twist more, and he was clambering around the ropes trying to right it, but without much apparent conception of what was best to do. I was frightened for him, for when the bag of a balloon turns too much the gas begins to escape rapidly, and the results are likely to be serious. I knew that voices could be heard a long way in the air, for I had often heard people a mile below me shouting, so without knowing how far the two balloons were apart I decided to hail the other one. I gathered all my breath and shouted:

"'Hello, hello, hello!'

"Then I turned my glass on the other balloon again. Up where the air is so clear as it is a mile above the earth one can see at great distances with wonderful distinctness. Through my glass I could see Mr. White start and look all around him. That was quite awhile after I had shouted. He didn't seem to understand where the voice came from, but finally I saw him put his hands to his mouth, evidently making a speaking trumpet of them. I waited and waited and was just about to shout again when the huge gasbag above me began to thrill with sounds. They seemed to buzz along its sides and diffuse the air, only to collect and come whirring and rumbling down the funnel to be poured into my ears, and they formed in a tone that seemed made up of a million other tones:

"'Hello! Where—are—you?'

"It was the most peculiar sound I had ever heard. When it had scattered itself into silence, I took out my watch, and timing myself shouted:

"'Throw out one sandbag. I'll come to you!'

"Forty seconds later my balloon began to vibrate again, finally forming the words:

"'All right. In trouble!'

"There was method in my telling him to throw out the sandbag, as it was afterward of use. I threw out a number myself, for I reckoned that a little above me I would find a current to carry me toward Mr. White. This I did and was soon within a short distance of him, aerially considered. The trouble with his balloon was a slight disarrangement of the ropes, which I had myself experienced, so I told him what to do, and he was soon all right. As I explained to him when we reached the earth, we had been talking over an aerial telephone, the gasbags being the only material objects up there collecting all the sounds and acting as huge receivers."

"'Well,' said he, 'you got me out of a very bad scrape, but I never was so scared in my life as when that voice surrounded me. I thought the balloon was talking, and that I had gone crazy.

"'It was a pretty long talk,' said I, 'for, allowing the voice to travel five seconds to a mile by my timing, we must have been close to four miles apart.'

"'That's simply impossible,' said he.

"'Very well,' I said. 'That's why I told you to drop that sandbag. I threw some out, too, and we can find out how far they landed apart.

"It wasn't much trouble to find people who had found the bags and knew just where they were. Fortunately they had landed near a railroad track, so the distance estimating was made easy for us. It was 4¼ miles. I guess that is the record up to date for long distance talking without a wire."

His Names.

A pair of twins was born in the Back Bay district. A bright boy set about to try to name them. He said, "Will they be called Peter and Repeater?" But no. His mother would not listen to the name Peter. Then he said, "Let them be called Max and Climax."

"No," she said. "They are both little girls, so we cannot name one of them Max."

Then he said after much thought, "Let them be called Kate and Duplicate." After that his head was bandaged, and he was sent out to play.—Union Signal.

JAPANESE RITES.

Frederick Villiers Describes Funerals After the Battle of Ping-Yang.

Many of the sick and wounded who die are cremated. Their ashes are collected, placed in small square boxes, interred for a time in the little cemetery outside the foreign settlement at Chemulpo, and after awhile exhumed and sent to Japan. The ceremony I beheld in Chemulpo after the fight at Ping-Yang was not impressive or solemn, but simply curious. Eighty bodies had been cremated in various parts of the country and forwarded to the treaty port in small boxes. These were placed in two large, black cases at the hospital, and preceded by a motley group of coolies, citizens and soldiers were carried to the burial plot.

First came coolies with branches of foliage and white streamers in their hands. Then a few soldiers, marching with reversed arms. Immediately preceding the black cases was a Shinto priest in yellow kimono and a black gauze shako. Round his neck was a purple cord, at the end of which hung a fan. In his right hand was a flute, which from time to time as the procession wended its way he tooted on, producing an inharmonious sound which reminded me of my own attempts on that instrument when a boy. The coolies, the followers and the lookers on seemed to treat the whole thing more as a good joke than a solemn function and chatted and laughed to their hearts' content.

Arrived at the cemetery, the procession halted before the altar, on which were placed bottles of saki, fruits, eggs and birds of various kinds, including a live rooster. Behind this hospitable board were placed the remains of the 80 bodies. The Shinto priest, who stood alone before the edibles, stretched out his hands and made several passes with his fan in the direction of the rooster, groaned aloud, then clapped his hands three times, after which he indulged a little on the flute. Then he groaned again, straightened himself, retired a few paces, took several paces to the left and right, then advanced again, groaned and tooted. He then requested by a sign one of the mourners to advance and take his place.

He then handed one of the branches of foliage to the gentleman and retired. The mourner proceeded to lay the branch on a small table in front of the altar, then saluted and moved away to allow another mourner to take his place. When all the branches were piled on the table, the black cases were opened and the small square boxes taken out by the coolies and carefully interred. The Shinto priest retired to the bosom of his family, with the saki bottle, the live rooster and the rest of the chow. In lieu of tombstones, the Japs use, when campaigning, small wooden posts to mark the resting place of their dead.—Frederick Villiers.

A Quid Pro Quo.

He was only first consul then, and I was consul general—for the United States of course—and we were very intimate, notwithstanding the difference in rank, for I waived that. One day something offered the opening, and he said:

"Well, general, I suppose life can never get entirely dull to an American, because whenever he can't strike up any other way to put in his time he can always get away with a few years trying to find out who his grandfather was."

I fairly shouted, for I had never heard it sound better, and then I was back at him quick as a flash:

"Right, your excellency. But I reckon a Frenchman's got his little standby for a dull time, too, because when all other interests fail he can turn in see if he can find out who his father was."

Well, you should have heard him just whoop and cackle and carry on. He reached over and hit me on the shoulder and said:

"Land, but it's good! It's immensely good! I George, I never heard it said so good in my life before. Say it again."

So I said it again, and he said his again, and I said mine again, and then he did, and then I did, and then he did, and we kept on doing it and doing it, and I never had such a good time, and he said the same. In my opinion there isn't anything that is as killing as one of those dear old ripe pensioners if you know how to snatch it out in a kind of a fresh sort of original way.—Mark Twain in North American Review.

American Cities a Hundred Years Ago.

When Washington was inaugurated, Philadelphia, then the metropolis of the country, had only about 42,000 people, New York but 33,000, Boston 18,000, Baltimore 13,000 and no other city anywhere near 10,000. Even after the lapse of half a century, during which New York had overtaken Philadelphia, so that in 1840 it had 312,000 inhabitants to the latter city's 258,000, Baltimore and New Orleans were the only other places with more than 100,000 people, and except Boston, with 93,000, all of the few remaining cities fell short of 50,000. During the formative period of the new nation, therefore, all but the merest fraction of its citizens lived in places of small population, the local affairs of which were easily administered through town meetings or other such simple machinery.—New York Post.

A Difference.

"You say you made money in business?"

"Certainly," replied the New York policeman.

"What was your stock in trade?"

"It wasn't a stock in trade. It was a trade in stock."—Washington Star.

During the reign of the second Edward an ox brought 13 shillings, a sheep 1 shilling, a pig 2 shillings, a rabbit 3 shillings, and pigeons were 6 cents a dozen.

HOW FRANCE PUNISHES TRAITORS

The Death Penalty Now Proposed Is an Improvement.

As a consequence of the treason of Capt Dreyfus, a new law, concerning the punishment of spies and traitors has lately been lain before the French Chamber by the Minister of War, after having been amended in five of its articles by the Army Commission.

As it now stands, death will be the punishment of treason committed by a member of the army or a public officer, and imprisonment at hard labor for life if the guilty person is a civilian having no official rank.

Spies will be sentenced to penal servitude if anything has resulted from their observations, but if they have amounted to nothing simple incarnation will be their punishment.

The recent public degradation of Capt. Dreyfus, while impressive and thrilling, was not so dramatic as was the punishment meted out to traitors in France in the sixteenth century. The last to undergo that solemn ceremonial was a Gascon captain named Frangez, who, in 1523 traitorously connived at the taking of Fontarable by the Spanish.

"Twenty stainless knights," says the ancient chronicle, "were assembled, and before them appeared the King of Arms to sustain against the accused the charge of treason. He was found guilty, and 2 scaffolds were erected. Upon one stood the knightly judges, the King of Arms and the heralds; upon the other the condemned, incased in complete armor, his shield hanging reversed—point upward—before him. By his side stood twelve surpliced priests, who chanted the service for the dead.

"At the end of each psalm the priests paused, while the heralds stripped from the condemned some portion of his armor. They began with his helm, which they cast at the foot of the scaffold, crying: 'This is the helm of a traitor!' and so successively with all the pieces of his armor. When the last piece had been taken from him a herald broke, with three strokes of a mace, his shield into three fragments.

"The King of Arms then poured hot water on the bared head of the felon, as if to efface all traces of knighthood, after which the degraded man was dragged to the foot of the scaffold by a rope attached about his body just below his armpits, was bound, placed upon a litter and covered with a shroud. The judges and priests then turned their steps towards the church, where the office for the dead was said, the miserable traitor finishing his expiation meanwhile beneath the executioner's axe."

—Several plumbers were called out yesterday to repair water pipes that had burst.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dismondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: 'I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

ANOTHER NEW FEATURE.

The Daily Press Adds to Its Already Large List of Special Attractions.

THE Napoleonic wave which has displayed itself in America by a revival of Empire gowns and decorations, Napoleonic literature, pictures and relics has reached the proportions of a craze in Paris and is only less enthusiastic but scarcely less real and vital in other European capitals. So that now, eighty years after Waterloo, the Man of Destiny fills almost as conspicuous a place in the public eye as when he held the peace of Europe in his hand.

Napoleon is altogether the most brilliant, the most potent personality in modern history. Men are hero worshipers all, whether they know it or not, and the tremendous achievements and dramatic career of Napoleon appeal powerfully to the intelligent reader of today. The story of Napoleon has never been briefly told with better effect than in the new series of monographs fresh from the pen of John Clark Ridpath to appear for the first time in print in The Daily Press, to whose exclusive service in Plainfield they are copyrighted. Each monograph is two columns long, and they are arranged consecutively for publication in weekly installments. The first article is released for publication Saturday, Feb. 16, and the others in regular order on succeeding Saturdays. They will be a welcome new feature to readers of The Daily Press.

Big Deals for '95.

There is no business which admits of so many wonderful innovations as the theatrical business. The present age might appropriately be styled "The Realistic."

Men with vast capital have entered the field, and their rivalry and spirited competition have called forth the most astounding results. The public crave amusements as one of the most essential necessities of life, and are so thoroughly educated as to the merits of what is good or bad that it pays best to cater to them by presenting only what is certain to be stamped as "O. K."

One of the most colossal theatrical enterprises which will open in New York City is the great comedy drama, "She Couldn't Marry Three," for which extensive preparations have been carried on. The scenery will eclipse anything presented in New York in recent years, and with the magnificent company of selected artists, is sure to make an instantaneous and unqualified success. After its New York opening it will be sent across the continent to San Francisco with the entire New York caste, and it is unanimously conceded by newspaper and theatrical critics that among the big deals for '95 will be found "She Couldn't Marry Three."

An End to the Trouble.

Chief Marshal Pangborn of North Plainfield has done a clever stroke of detective work in an anonymous letter case. A borough family was annoyed by unsigned communications received through the mail, and though the letters came from various postoffices, including Newark, Rahway and New Brunswick, Mr. Pangborn by shrewd and careful work located their author, secured confession, and effectually stopped continuation of the annoyance. The grateful family express high praise for the Marshal's work.

Miss Uncle Peter's Shovel.

Those who have walked along Somerset street the past few years have always commented on the snow being promptly shoveled off the sidewalks, on the property of the late Peter Wooden, between the Somerset Hotel and the schoolhouse. The old man was often seen doing the work himself, but now that Uncle Peter is dead the snow remains on the sidewalk, and the pedestrians suffer in consequence.

Spirited Equine.

Thomas Clacy, who was driving A. M. Griffen's horse and truck on East Front street yesterday afternoon, had considerable difficulty in holding the horse, which became frightened at a trolley car. Watchung avenue was reached before the animal was under control.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. COMING THEATRICALS.

Farce and Minstrels to Be Seen at the Casino.

TOWN AND SOCIETY INTERESTED.

Good Music and a Laugh-Provoking Play for the Benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital—Something About the Players Who Will Take Part—Newcomers in the Company.

It has been nearly a year since Plainfield's amateur actors have been seen on the Casino stage, and the announcement of the performance that is to be given on the night of the 21st has been received with acclamation everywhere. The minstrel show which is to form the first part of the entertainment has been planned on the old conventional lines which makes any announcement of its character unnecessary. Suffice it to say that the music both vocal and instrumental is to be of the best procurable. All of Plainfield's funny men and her good singers have been secured, and each will do his best for the sake of charity in general and Muhlenberg Hospital in particular. Eugene Rose, who came with his orchestra from the Lyceum Theatre in New York to play at the two performances of the "Gray Mare" last year, will be seen, if not recognized, through his burnt cork on the stage. A topical song of great local interest, a very well known middleman, and part singing of various kinds, including a double quartette, will be among the special festures.

Although it is expected that the minstrels will take up the better part of the evening as far as time is concerned, the play which is to follow it will not be the least interesting portion of the entertainment. The one-act farce by Mrs. Burton Harrison entitled "Tea at Four o'Clock" has been in rehearsal for the past month, and will be given with the usual attention to cast and scenery, costuming and detail that has characterized the previous productions by the same company.

The cast is a large one consisting of eleven characters and the story is briefly as follows: Mrs. Effingham, a fashionable widow, in love with Arthur Rutlege, is discovered "at home" in the garden of her country house. Her first caller, Mr. Grayson, is about to pour a declaration of love into her unwilling ears when he is interrupted by the announcement of Mr. Walton, a former but rejected suitor. Their conversation is broken into by the arrival of Mr. Appleby, a stuttering millionaire, who in turn is cut short in his dialogue with the others by the arrival of Mrs. Marabout, a volatile society woman. Mrs. Coddington and Arabella Coddington are the next arrivals. Arabella is shy and does not wish to talk but is constantly exhorted by her mother to keep the conversation going. In a fit of desperate and embarrassed ingenuity provoked by a direct appeal from Mrs. Effingham she invents the story of the duel and when pressed for particulars as to the names of the antagonists mentions the first that come into her head, of which Arthur Rutlege's happens to be one. Mrs. Effingham, distracted by the idea that Rutlege is in danger, endeavors to send Thomas, the butler, to find out the facts of the case but realizes the impossibility of doing so without detection. At this moment General Sabretache is announced. The General is a boasting, bombastic old party who persists in recounting his sanguinary achievements to the great discomfort of Mrs. Effingham, who constantly pictures Rutlege in similar situations. Sabretache, becoming offended at some remarks of Walton's, leaves in a fit of anger, threatening dire vengeance. Mrs. Effingham, unable to remain longer in doubt as to Arthur's fate, begs Grayson to go to the club and find out the facts of the case. He accordingly departs and Dr. Grantley, Arthur's uncle, comes on the scene. He is an old bore who constantly talks about the tariff. Mrs. Effingham, believing that he has come with a full knowledge of the duel, finds hidden meanings in his simplest remarks and is fast becoming distracted when the happy arrival of Rutlege calms her fears. The return of Mrs. Marabout, Sabretache and Grayson each with a different tale about the duel which they tell without perceiving Rutlege, further complicates matters until Arthur suddenly makes his presence known to the new arrivals and disclaims any intention of fighting at all. The question of who could have started the story is solved by Arabella who confesses that she made it up to supply conversation.

The play is well cast and has been faithfully rehearsed. Mrs Mason as Mrs. Effingham is, as always, at home in her part.

Mrs. Saunders as Arabella Coddington is sure to add one more to her many successes, while Mrs. Serrell in the character of Mrs. Marabout will prove a valuable addition to the company and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Brown as Dr. Grantley and Mrs. Coddington will add to the fun of the play. Mr. Cock is sure of increasing his popularity in the part of Thomas, the destructive servant, and George Taggart does some excellent character work in the role of Mr. Appleby, in which he has some capital comic business with Arabella. The other parts are admirably cast as follows: Mr. Grayson, Mr. Bogert; Mr. Walton, Fred Walz; General Sabretache, Mr. Anthony; and Arthur Rutlege, Mr. Colburn.

Of the eleven in the cast all but four are well known to Casino audiences. The new comers are Mrs. Serrell, Mr and Mrs. Brown and Mr. Bogert. The tickets are for sale by the patronesses, who alone would make a good sized audience, and at Reynolds's and Hebard's pharmacies.

LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY.

The Daily Press Celebrates the Event with a Special Palatable Literary Menu.

Probably no American hero and patriot, not excepting the illustrious Washington, has been more written about, more discussed, more severely criticised, more carefully analyzed or better loved, than Abraham Lincoln. His career was the wonder of the world, and today it is just as wonderful, just as interesting as ever. Lincoln seems to be a subject of inexhaustible interest, and the Lincoln page in this issue of The Daily Press furnishes quite as interesting a collection of Lincoln lore as has ever been comprised within the space of six columns.

"Lincoln was always something of an enigma", says G. T. Ferris, and he gives a thoughtful, entertaining and instructive study of the enigma.

Junius Henri Browne, the famous war correspondent, describes in his usual masterly style his first meeting with Lincoln; and E. J. Edwards contributes an interesting account of Lincoln's great oration at Cooper Union, in New York city, shortly before his nomination for the presidency.

Besides these leading articles there is a remarkable love letter (with the word "love" left out) written by Lincoln, and a story of the Lincolns' home life before the war told by an old family nurse, still living.

The illustrations are notable for their appropriateness and artistic excellence.

Office of Citizens' Organized Aid Association, 101 North Avenue.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—Just at the time when the Winter is at its worst, when all the defense that warm clothing, warm houses and good food can yield is most needed: When in-door work is scarce and out-door work is impossible: When every charity should and must be doing its utmost: Just now, that is to say, the funds of this association are practically exhausted. True, all bills are paid to February 1st: True, again, we do not use or need a large sum of money—only about $500 annually—since the association aims rather to help its beneficiaries to become self supporting than to give alms: But what we do need, that we must have and have at once. And if the community believes our work to be in itself wise and useful, and wisely and usefully conducted, then the least the community can do is to support that work with sympathy and money, especially money.

We solicit subscriptions for annual memberships at $2.00, or for life-memberships at $50.00: We earnestly hope for forty or fifty annual "sustaining" members at $10.00 each, since we should then have a solid basis for regular business. But we will gladly receipt for any sum from $1.00 upward, for the need grows greater as the mercury goes lower.

H. P. REYNOLDS, Treasurer.

Feb. 11th.

Dr. Pierson Will Be Here.

The Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D., has been secured to address the Y. M. C. A. convention on Saturday at 3:15 p. m. Few men are more widely known than Dr. Pierson both as a preacher and writer. He occupied for an extended period the pulpit of the late Charles H. Spurgeon. Among his best known books are "The Crisis of Missions." "Many Infallible Proofs" and "The New Acts of the Apostles." This session of the convention will be held in the First Baptist Church in order that more of our citizens may be able to hear this gifted speaker.

Peel Held in Bonds.

Thomas Peel, the milkman, who was engaged in a fight yesterday as exclusively reported in The Daily Press, was arrested today, and Justice Nash held him under $100 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Frank Patience wishes The Press to say that he was not present at the time of the trouble, but arrived later, when Peel went for him and attempted to strangle him, but did not succeed.

PARLIAMENTARY LAW.

D. P. Hall Expounds Governing Rules to the Monday Afternoon Club—Says Filibustering Has Its Merits.

The Monday Afternoon Club has enjoyed fully as pleasant sessions, but it is doubtful if a more instructive and profitable meeting has been held in some time than was that in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon, when David P. Hall of Central avenue delivered a discourse on parliamentary rules and practice.

The speaker is thoroughly conversant with all the phases of rules which govern deliberative bodies, and his talk was so clear and concise that everyone was enabled to grasp the illustrations and points which he sought to bring forth.

He considered that organization was the great element which had brought the nineteenth century to its present state of civilization, and organization could accomplish nothing without a proper application of rules seeking to govern a set of people as it would govern one individual. Parliamentary law should be studied the same as any other law, which must be commenced at the foundation.

The one great stumbling-block, he held, in grasping the proper scope of just governing rules, was precedent, to which the English-speaking people had become slaves in accepting it as a means of direction to the right.

Going from the theoretical to the practical side of his subject, the functions of the presiding officer were described in a lucid manner. He ventured the opinion that filibustering, where great principles were at stake, was justifiable on the part of the minority, and defined the term as the use of the rules to prevent the passage or adoption of pending business.

The Monday Afternoon Club, he said, was not liable to experience any filibustering, for the club did not discuss anything serious enough to precipitate filibustering—at which there was a titter of laughter among the audience of women.

After his address, numerous questions were profounded, which the speaker instructively answered.

Thanked the Retiring Treasurer.

The North Plainfield Township Committee met in adjourned session last evening.

Clerk Martin read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were approved.

Bills amounting to $1,332.59 were presented and ordered paid.

Charles Willis who lives near Johnston's drive asked the Committee to open the drive and clear the snow away so he could travel back and forth. The request was granted.

Mr. Smith reported that several tons of stone had been ordered through the township.

The following resolution was offered by Mr. Fountain and adopted unanimously:

Resolved, That a vote of thanks be extended to our retiring member and treasurer, W. C. Smith, for his untiring efforts on behalf of the township in all its various interests.

Those present were the recipients of Collector Spencer's hospitality. He furnished them with a box of his excellent cigars. Mr. Spencer was highly complimented for his valuable service as collector.

Mr. Smith made a motion that the Township report be printed in a consolidated form, and that bids be opened for the same. The clerk was authorized to get 250 copies.

The balance of the evening was spent socially, during which Mr. Smith made some very interesting remarks.

Mr. Fountain and Mr. Allen will audit the treasurer's books in a few days, and the business of the present Committee will be concluded for this year.

Blew Out a Cylinder Head.

Train No. 47, westbound train for Flemington in charge of Conductor Sam Johnson, due in this city at 6:19, last evening blew out one of her cylinder heads between Elizabeth and this city, and was delayed here until 6:55, when she slowly pulled out and steamed to Somerville, where the disabled engine was disconnected and put in the stable and another substituted. Closely following No. 47 on the schedule is No. 49, Conductor Chas. Dodwell's westbound local for Dunellen, which is due here at 6:34. A similar unpleasant experience happened to 49 and the crippled train was delayed until 7:02, at which time, necessary repairs having been made, the train started for Dunellen.

Decorating for the Young Men.

The flower committees from the Plainfield Christian Endeavor societies met at the Y. M. C. A. Building yesterday to arrange for the decorations at the convention to be held this week.

The superintendents of the Junior Christian Endeavor societies, and the social committees, also met to plan for their branches of work.

A BRILLIANT AFFAIR.

Plainfield Society Attends the Ackerman Reception.

A SUCCESS IN ALL ITS FUNCTIONS.

The Casino of the Country Club Affords a Scene of Gaiety—All the Local Social World Was There to Enjoy the Beautiful Event.

The fact that the lenten season is but a few days distant, when the mantle of seclusion and quietude is donned by society, added to the brilliancy and success of the reception given by Mrs. J. H. Ackerman in the Casino of the Country Club last night. The reception had long been anticipated as one of the events of the season, attending which would be a lavish display of entertaining seldom observed outside of the metropolis; and it was a happy realization of the fondest desires of those who participated.

Never has the Casino presented a more animated appearance, and gaiety was the predominant element.

The spacious ballroom had been transformed into a veritable bower of beauty, by the artistic arrangement of plants and flowers by Butler of New York. Smilax and wintergreen were everywhere, sheltering from view every object save bright foliage. In front of the stage was arranged a tier of potted palms, obscuring the orchestra from the guests, and along the north and south walks the smilax was trailing as though growing from mother earth. At short distances bunches of roses added a variety of color and made a pretty effect, emitting a fragrance that permeated the whole room. Surrounding the fireplace, in which logs were brightly blazing, potted palms were again in evidence, and more smilax and wintergreen served as decorations to screen the glossed bricks from the vision. The balcony was also a bower of flowers. Along the sides of the ballroom and in the alcoves seats were arranged for the use of the guests. The suffused glow of the electric lamps, which were almost hidden from view by flowers, added a finishing touch to the exquisiteness of the ballroom surroundings.

As the orchestra of five pieces, under the direction of Elliott of New York, commenced to discourse sweet music from behind the tropical plants, the guests began to arrive and the constant intermingling of the varied-colored gowns of the women relieved the sombreness of the conventional dress of the men, and made the assemblage a brilliant spectacle.

The guests were received by Mrs. Ackerman, assisted by her daughters, Mrs. E. R. Ackerman, Mrs. Marion Ackerman and Mrs. Robert Bushmore.

Mrs. J. Hervie Ackerman was becomingly attired in a dress made of black sunset moire, trimmed with white Irish point lace, with panels of lace in the skirt. Her flowers were violets, and jewels moire pearls.

The gown of Mrs. Ernest Ackerman was made of pale blue crepe de chene. About her neck she wore a bertha of Brussels lace. A bouquet of pink violets were her flowers.

Mrs. Robert Bushmore's dress was of white crepon, trimmed with blue mirror velvet. Pink roses were her flowers.

Mrs. Marion Ackerman was prettily arrayed in a gown of sea green silk, combined with pink satin, and trimmed with Valenciennes lace. She carried pink roses and green orchids.

The serving of refreshments was commenced at 9:30, and was continuous under the direction of Thomas Tombe, steward of the Country Club. The principal serving table was in the woman's reception room, and the second on the piazza, one end of which had been attractively shut off by a garden scene. On the principal table was an immense centrepiece of pink roses, and a miniature aquarium, which was a marvel of culinary skill. Here was a salmon in a lake where real goldfish disported. The waiters were distinguished by white waistcoats. The menu was as follows:

Consomme, Finger Rolls,
Oyster Poulette,
Chicken Croquettes, Chicken Molonaise,
Lobster Molonaise, Salmon Molonaise,
Fois Gras in Aspic,
Chicken Sandwiches, Ham Sandwiches,
Watercress Sandwiches,
Glaces Fantasie, Charlotte Russe,
Petti Fours, Bon Bons,
Mottoes,
Coffee and Lemonade.

The principal serving table was illuminated by electricity which issued from small bulbs encased in wax candles, a method that was novel and unique, and only one of the many features which contributed to make the affair a success in all its details.

The display of potted palms was valued at $1,000, and the smilax was brought from the South for this occasion.

The guests included the following prominent people:

A Plumbing Attempt Starts a Fire.

J. W. Van Sickle, the well-known North Avenue butcher, had a lively little time all to himself Saturday afternoon about 5. Owing to the absolute refusal of the thermometer to rise above the freezing point, Van Sickle's waste pipe had frozen solid, and after searching in vain for a plumber who was disengaged, he secured a blow-pipe and started to do the job himself. After working for three hours and nearly accomplishing the object in view, the heat became too intense for the surrounding woodwork, and like a flash the casing running from the basement to the floor above was a mass of flames. Fortunately water was at hand and by reason of his long experience in the business Van Sickle was very clever with the axe. A few well-directed blows with the latter opened the casing sufficiently to allow water to be forced on to the blaze, and it was soon under control.

Had someone less level-headed and quick-witted attempted the job, it is probable that Chief Doane and his men would have been asked to take a hand.

Easy on Delinquents.

Tax Collector Spencer of North Plainfield is the right kind of a man in the right place. His large and generous heart has been the means of assisting several taxpayers who otherwise who would not have been able to meet their bills.

The Town Committee discussed his beneficience last evening, and decided it would be an excellent idea to reimburse the collector and at the same time be lenient with those who could not pay the costs attached to the bill.

Happily Surprised.

Mrs. Southwick of Trenton, retiring president of the Women's Relief Corps, Department of New Jersey, was agreeably surprised at the encampment last week.

Just before she vacated her office, she was presented with a handsome gold watch and chain by the women.

Every Corps in the department contributed to the gift and all equally enjoyed the presentation which was such a pleasant feature of this gathering.

Dynamite in the Borough.

As the excavating for the cellar of Mr. Bistz's new house on Somerset street proceeds so slowly, owing to the frozen condition of the ground, and it being almost impossible to drive a wedge in the ground to break the frozen crust, Contractor Burnett will use dynamite today to hasten the work.

—Good judges say that for the quality of the goods offered at Peck's the prices are surprising.

O. W. O. Hardman, sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. THEY WEPT FOR JOY

Rejoicing Over La Gascogne's Arrival.

Big Men Cry as Little Children—Shook Hands with Friends and Strangers Alike—The Big Steamer Arrived at Her Dock This Morning—Her Steering Gear Disabled.

New York, Feb. 12.—Most welcome news was flashed from Sandy Hook last evening, when La Gascogne was sighted at last, although tempest-tossed and disabled.

For eight days the French flyer had been missing.

The news of her arrival swept through the city like wildfire.

Before anchoring she was seen approaching the lightship with three red lights in her forerigging. There were three tugs at her stern, apparently acting in place of a rudder.

The signals indicated that La Gascogne was unmanageable and disabled. But to what extent is as yet unknown.

Scene at the Office.

The scenes in the office of the Compagnie Gererale Transatlantique when the news of the steamship reached it beggared description. Men threw up their hats and wept for joy.

One gentleman, Mr. Riche, first cried and then laughed. He threw his hat, cane and gloves away, and shook hands with every person present. His friends tried hard to restrain him, but it was impossible. For a week past he said he had not slept, and now that the ship was in, he declared that he didn't want to either sleep or eat. Mr. Riche has three daughters, passengers on La Gascogne, who are returning from Paris. The fourth died there a few weeks ago.

Mr. Riche, however, was not the only one who threw dignity to the winds. In fact there was hardly a person present, even the ladies, but walked around and shook hands with friend and stranger alike.

Agent Forget, however, was as cool and calm, as though it was an everyday occurence. The anxiety has nevertheless weighed heavily upon him. His eyes were marked with great dark ridges, and he had more the appearance of a man who has buried his best friend.

At 5:15 came the word, "La Gascogne slowly coming toward the bar." Often had the same message reached the office, but it never meant what it did now. It meant that 400 odd souls were not in a watery grave.

A notice was posted that the company expected the La Gascogne would be at her dock early in the morning.

The Only Topic.

The tidings of the arrival of the overdue steamer were joyfully received throughout the city, and in every little village and hamlet there was general rejoicing.

The big ocean liner was brought into her dock this morning. Thousands thronged the dock to greet her.

FLOWERS FILLED THE CASKET.

Her Husband Lost on the Elbe—A Novel Funeral.

St. Louis, Feb. 12.—Mrs. Conrad Weiderhold received word Saturday confirming the report that her husband was a passenger from Bremen on the steamer Elbe.

She determined to hold funeral service at her home and yesterday purchased an expensive casket, which she ordered filled with the choicest flowers. Last evening the residence was draped in mourning. Six pall-bearers bore in their light burden amid the moans of a widow and little girl and between the bowed heads of numerous friends.

Rev. Gustav Wangerin of the German Protestant church conducted brief services and the assemblage dispersed. Just what disposition will be made of the casket has not been determined.

3,000 Employes May Strike.

Clinton, Mass., Feb. 12.—The Lancaster mills last night issued notices in every department announcing a cut in wages which will affect in the vicinity of 3,000 men and women. The weavers of whom there are probably 1,000, are cut three cents a piece, the work for which the employes of the "new mill" have got forty cents coming down to thirty-seven and the employes in the "old mill", getting thirty-four cents instead of thirty-seven cents. Other departments are similarly affected some workmen suffering 12 per cent. cuts. There is general talk of a strike.

A Swell Englishman Under Arrest.

Eureka Springs, Ark., Feb. 12.—Dr. J. Newton Jones, alias John I. Manniers, was arrested here on the double charge of perjury and bigamy. He is a swell Englishman who came to this country a year ago and was married to Miss Maud West, daughter of Captain Digby West. Jones has spent money freely and claimed to be a member of several New York clubs. It is alleged that he has a wife and two children in Yorkshire, England.

An Aged Beggar Frozen To Death.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 12.—Mrs. Margaret Hunter, the aged begging recluse who froze to death in a little room at 63 Fair street, Newark, had over $17,000 in different banks. One of the two rooms in which she lived was always kept ready by her in anticipation of the return of her son, whom she has not seen for fifteen years. The bed was made and a light kept.

He Must Stand Trial.

Detroit, Feb. 12.—William Brusseau was arraigned in police court charged with the murder of Dr. Horace Pope. Brusseau refused to plead and a plea of not guilty was entered and the date of his examination fixed for Feb. 21, the same as that of Mrs. Pope. He was remanded to jail without bail.

Cold Wave Traveling Eastward.

Colorado Springs, Col., Feb. 12.—The cold weather for the last few days was brought to a climax last night when the signal service thermometer registered 18 degrees below zero, the lowest point touched for several years. The cold wave is traveling eastward.

THE DEBS TRIAL.

May Be Renewed Before a New Jury. Still After Pullman.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—It is probable that the case of the United States against Eugene V. Debs and others will have to be begun all over again before a new jury, on account of the continued illness of Juror J. C. Coe. At the opening of court Judge Grosscup announced that he himself had been to see Mr. Coe and that it was his opinion that the sick juror would not be able to leave his bed for at least two weeks and perhaps not then. Counsel for both sides had a conference with Judge Grosscup in the latter's chambers on the advisibility of going on with eleven jurors. It was the best judgment of counsel with the exception of District Attorney Black that this could not be done without invalidating the trial and in this opinion informally concurred.

All the testimony for the government is in and part of that for the defense. The trial has been in progress for over two weeks. Both sides are well satisfied with the present jury and would go on if it could be done legally. It was suggested that another juror be selected and permitted to read the proceedings up to date and make oath that he had a fair knowledge of them, but it was decided that this could not be done.

The defense is still after George M. Pullman. Secretary Weinsheimer, of the Pullman company, has been subpoenaed to tell what he knows about Mr. Pullman's alleged dodging of service.

SHIPWRECKED CREW RESCUED.

A Pilot Boat Finds Them Adrift and Nearly Frozen.

New York, Feb. 12.—Pilot Thomas Jackson, who brought the North German Lloyd steamship Wittekind into this port yesterday, brought news also of the rescue of the crew of a shipwrecked schooner of Nantucket. The rescue was made by pilot boat No. 1, the America, which was cruising off the Rhode Island coast, about 200 miles from this port. The America picked up the crew of ten men from the shipwrecked schooner while they were adrift in an open boat. The rescued men were in a terrible condition, being nearly frozen when help reached them. When Pilot Jackson left the America to bring the Wittekind into port, he left the shipwrecked crew and its own crew of seven men on board the pilot boat, which is expected to reach this port within a day or two.

SHOCKS BY EARTHQUAKE.

Riot in Acerra over the Grain Tax. The Troops Called Out.

Rome, Feb. 12.—Severe shocks of earthquake were felt in the province of Reggio di Calabria and Sicily yesterday. The people of the town of Palmi fled to the fields and several houses collapsed in the village of Santanna.

A serious riot occurred in the village of Acerra growing out of the resistance of the people to the grain tax. The populace set fire to the tax offices, which were destroyed, and endeavored to throw from the track the Naples express as it passed through the town. The troops were called out and in their collision with the rioters a number were wounded on both sides.

A bomb was exploded at a club ball in Massa, shattering the windows of the hall, but fortunately injuring no one.

TO SAIL THE CUP DEFENDER.

Said To Be a Peer as a Trimmer of Sails and a Great Judge of Wind.

New York, Feb. 12.—The old sea sharp, Captain Terry, has been engaged to sail the cup defender of 1895. It is said that in many respects he is the superior of Captain Hanson, who sailed the Vigilant.

His superiority at the tiller is admitted, and he is considered a great judge of wind, and knows better when to bring the yacht about than any other yachtsman. He is also without a peer as a trimmer of sails.

In this respect the Vigilant was decidedly behind the Valkyrie II. The Englishmen were much smarter than the Vigilant's crew, and but for the marked superiority of the Vigilant over Valkyrie II., the much coveted cup might have changed hands.

Murder in the First Degree.

Philadelphia, Feb. 12.—The supreme court in an opinion by Justice Dean, sustained the conviction, in the Westmoreland county court of oyer and terminer of William Freeman of murder in the first degree. The defendant appealed to the upper court on the ground that the handling of the jury wheel had been irregular. While ruling that this condition was not trifling or immaterial the court held that the complaint had been made too late. The judgment of the lower court was accordingly affirmed.

Snow in Dixie's Land.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 12.—All North Georgia is under snow and the streets of Atlanta are filled with hastily rigged sleighs. Snow began falling about midnight and by 8 o'clock it was about five inches deep. A heavy sleet then began to fall and it has continued incessantly since, so that the snow has been covered with a heavy cake of sleet. None of the street cars are running. The tracks being caked with ice and sleet several inches deep.

Where the Elbe Went Down.

London, Feb. 12.—In the house of commons Mr. James Bryce, president of the board of trade, said, in reply to a question, that the government had no intention of placing a lightship or buoy upon the spot where the Elbe went down. The sunken wreck, he said, was nearer to Holland than England, and if the spot was to be marked the work should be done by the Netherlands government.

Died on the Train.

Newburgh, N. Y., Feb. 12.—A dispatch received here announces the sudden death of Isaac S. Powell, on board a railroad train at Tallytown, Pa. He resided at Jamestown, N. Y., and was just returning from a visit to Florida.

Compelled To Shut Down.

Winsted, Conn., Feb. 12.—The Empire Knife works and the Franklin Moore Belt works have been compelled to shut down on account of low water.

CONGRESSIONAL WORK

Hill's Resolution for a System of Bimetallism.

Question of How To Pay Our Bond Obligations Raised in the Senate—Mr. Stewart's Resolution—Legislative and Judicial Bill Considered by the House.

Washington, Feb. 12.—The senate had under consideration the postoffice appropriation bill, but its progress was blocked by a decision arising out of an amendment looking to the abolition of the Southern Fast Mail service. Senator Allen (pop., Neb.), after he had expressed some views on that subject, switched off into a long speech relative to the elections in the state of Alabama last August, asserting that, on account of the gross frauds therein perpetrated, that state was deprived of a republican form of government. The two Alabama senators occupied seats in his immediate neighborhood while he read affidavits in support of the charge which he made, but they seemed not to be at all worried over the showing which he made. The postoffice appropriation bill went over without a vote on the Southern Fast Mail service item.

Earlier in the day a concurrent resolution was introduced by Mr. Hill (dem., N. Y.), and went over till today, in reference to the question of the coin in which bonds now outstanding or to be issued are to be paid. It declares it to be the true policy of the government to direct its efforts to the establishment of a safe system of bimetallism; but if that cannot be done, then the bonds shall be paid in standard gold dollars. This resolution was followed by one offered by Mr. Stewart (pop., Nev.) declaring that there is no authority of law to buy gold coin in preference to silver coin for any purpose whatever. In the regular course of procedure one or both of these resolutions will come before the senate to-day.

House of Representatives.

A session of the house lasting six and a half hours was given over almost entirely to the consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial bills for the year ending June 30, 1896. It was completed before the house adjourned, with the exception of the paragraphs providing money for the pension office force, and upon that one and a quarter hours debate at a subsequent session was arranged for. Amendments were made to be as follows:

Directing the secretary of the treasury to arrange for the refining and melting into bars of gold and silver bullion at the Helena, Montana assay office.

Referring to the attorney general for report to the next congress, as to law and facts, the statement made by the Indian bureau of the accounts between the United States and several Indian tribes, as authorized by the act of 1891 for the purchase and opening of the Cherokee strip.

Striking out the appropriation of $2,000 to pay the salary of the private secretary to the secretary of the interior.

Requiring the master of every vessel upon arrival at any port in this country where there is no naval officer, to mail a copy of his manifest to the auditor of the treasury department.

BEFORE HER MAJESTY.

The Queen Interested in the Wreck of the Elbe.

London, Feb. 12.—After an interview with the Empress Frederick, Miss Boecker was introduced to the queen and the duke and duchess of Connaught. All listened with deep interest to her narrative of the wreck of the Elbe. At the queen's request she wrote her name in her majesty's autograph book. After leaving Osborne she received a souvenir from the Empress Frederick.

President McBride To Meet Charges.

Columbus, O., Feb. 12.—John McBride, president of the American Federation of Labor, arrived from Indianapolis last evening and will remain during the week. He is here to meet the charges of President Adams, of the Ohio miners. Adams has charged the national officers of the Mine Workers union with selling out the miners last June when the national strike was settled. All the delegates refuse to express an opinion as to the probable outcome of the investigation of the charges.

Fire in a Planing Mill.

Elwood, Ind., Feb. 12.—The large plant of the Elwood Planing Mill company was entirely destroyed by fire yesterday. The costly machinery, models and patterns were destroyed, together with the electric light company's dynamos. The estimated loss is $50,000, partially covered by insurance. The fire was caused by the bursting of a gas regulator.

Not in Favor of Home Rule.

London, Feb. 12.—John Redmond, leader of the Parnellites, brought forward in the commons yesterday his motion to amend the address by demanding that the government appeal at once to the country, inasmuch as they had failed to carry out their home rule programme. The motion was defeated by a vote of 256 to 236.

IT STOPPED THE FITS.

And No Sign of Them Ever Returned.

WHAT A BRIGHT AND ORIGINAL WOMAN SUCCEEDED IN DOING.

Fits Are Terrible Things But There Is One Sure Way to Conquer Them.

Every time a child has a fit it takes a fearful stride towards the grave. They sap the very life's blood and drag from the wasted nerves the foundation of life itself. The whole nervous system is affected, and the nerve centres are fearfully weakened.

It is just here that the peculiar and wonderful action of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is so strongly seen. The disease simply cannot resist it. The very first dose often produces a change for the better, and from that minute the nervous symptoms grow less.

The child who has fits, St. Vitus' dance or other nervous diseases, generally has poor blood. Right here again come in those virtues which have made Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy indispensable to the sick. It makes the blood rich, pure and of vigorous circulation.

Mrs. J. Learmonth, of 776 Broadway, South Boston, Mass., who had employed physicians unsuccessfully, finally determined to give her child Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"At ten years of age," said Mrs. Learmonth, "my daughter became affected with a nervous condition which soon developed into St. Vitus' dance. It was pronounced by the attending physician to be a very severe attack.

"The mouth would be drawn spasmodically far to one side, the hands and arms were restless and constantly twitching. Her limbs also were weak; her ankles bent under her so that it was almost impossible to walk.

CORA LEARMONTH.

"She was so nervous that she would scream almost like a maniac and then have fits of crying. After two months' treatment without a cure, I concluded to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

"Three bottles entirely cured her. She is now thirteen years old and has been well ever since, and today is a picture of health."

Fits will never stop themselves. Remember that. The one sure way to permanently cure them is to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It quickly and completely cures St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, hysteria and all manner of nervous spasms and convulsions as well as that nervous irritability which often results in fits. If your infants or children are restless or sleepless, cry out or grit their teeth at night, they are in great danger of nervous troubles. Give them Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It will make them strong and well. This remedy is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless for children of any age. It is the discovery of Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York City, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter. Use his great remedy and consult him at any time.

ALONE WITH A CORPSE

Frozen To Death in a Hovel at Hickory Tree.

Brothers, But Hermits of a Pronounced Type—The Body Eaten by Goats and Chickens—Kept Watch in a Corner—Was Once a Teacher in Orange.

Madison, N. J., Feb. 12.—For more than twenty-five years Jacob Stout and his brother James lived happily together in an old tumble-down shanty at Hickory Tree, about one mile from this place. They both have been considered hermits of the most pronounced type, they having little or no intercourse with the outside world.

A farmer passing the shanty yesterday was hailed by James Stout, who told him that his brother had been frozen to death. The farmer came to this town and told Undertaker Burroughs about the case. The undertaker immediately sent word to Coroner Douglas, of Morristown, and then started for the hovel in which the Stouts lived. He found the body of Jacob Stout lying on the floor of the one room in the shanty, surrounded by goats and chickens. In the corner sat James Stout, the brother of the dead man.

Almost Naked.

The floor was covered with straw and hay. The only furniture in the room was an old table and a few boxes, which served as chairs. The dead man was frozen stiff. He was almost naked, his clothing having probably been eaten off by the goats. The remains were mutilated about the head, and other parts of the body bore evidence of the ravages of the goats.

The room was filthy beyond description. James Stout when questioned answered in an incoherent manner. He, too, had suffered severely from the cold and was frost bitten about the feet. He said he left his brother Friday night in order to seek aid from neighbors, as he had no food in the house. He went to the nearest house, about a quarter of a mile away. They fed the old man and he ate too heartily and became ill and soon after unconscious. He remained at the neighbors over night and returned home about noon the next day, when he found his brother frozen stiff on the floor.

Only a Few Dry Crumbs.

Since then he has been in the house with his brother with nothing to eat except a few dry crumbs.

The shanty in which the Stouts lived is nothing more than a shed. Originally it was a farm house. The front part of the house was all tumbled down and the Stouts lived in the room that was once a kitchen. The windows, two in number, are stuffed with rags to keep out cold. The Stouts made what they could by raising goats and selling poultry.

Dead Three Weeks.

About seven years ago the Stouts were brought into notoriety by the death of their sister, who had lived with them. She died of some brain trouble and her body was left unburied for three weeks. The neighbors discovered that she was dead, and reported the case to the authorities.

James Stout is 62 years old. His brother was over 70. James will be sent to the poor house as soon as his brother is buried. Originally the Stouts came from Newark. Both were well educated. Jacob was once a school teacher in Orange.

KILLED A WHOLE TRIBE.

Massacring of Woman and Children. Seven Men Under Arrest.

Sydney, N. S. W., Feb. 12.—A dispatch from Perth, West Australia, says that seven men have been arrested in Coolgardie for massacring an entire native tribe, including women and children. The men had gone out gold seeking and were encamped near the village of the tribe which they are accused of exterminating. They say that they acted in self-defense as the natives menaced their lives.

They Have No Suggestions To Make.

Washington, Feb. 12.—The republican members of the senate finance committee at a meeting decided that they had no suggestions to make on the financial question. There will be no meeting of the finance committee to-day. Mr. Gorman (dem., Md.) will offer an amendment to the sundry civil bill authorizing the issue of 3 per cent. treasury certificates to meet current deficiencies, and if he does, the republicans will favor it.

Important to Farmers.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 12.—The Michigan crop report for February says that in reply to the question, "Has wheat during January suffered injury from any cause?" 234 correspondents answer yes, and 527 answer no. Farmers marketed 1,061,838 bushels of wheat in January and 7,296,941 bushels from August 1 to January 30, which is 1,952,971 bushels less than reported marketed in the same months last year.

The Prospects Were Poor.

Detroit, Feb. 12.—The American Savings bank, doing business at 116 and 118 Griswold street, this city, has decided to liquidate its affairs and retire from the field. The causes leading to this action are that the bank has not made any money of late and that the prospects for making money were poor. The bank has a capital of $300,000 and was organized in 1887.

Her Terrible Fall.

New York, Feb. 12.—Bridget McSweeney, a middle-aged domestic employed at 125 East 57th street, got out on the ledge of a window on the fifth floor to clean the windows, and while at work, lost her balance and fell headlong to the ground. She died shortly afterward.

Nine Prisoners Break Jail.

Athens, O., Feb. 12.—Nine prisoners escaped from the county jail yesterday by boring out a panel of the inside door of the jail. Six of the nine are under indictment for felonies.

POSTPONED ONCE MORE.

The Coleman-Drayton Divorce Case Delayed Until Next Monday.

Jersey City, Feb. 12.—The motion to amend by Mrs. Coleman Drayton to her husband's complaint was to have been argued yesterday in the chancery court here. A big crowd was present in anticipation of hearing testimony about the Astor family's dirty linen. A week ago the hearing had been postponed because Mrs. Drayton's counsel was unable to attend. Mr. Clark, Mr. J. Coleman Drayton's lawyer, strenuously opposed any delay whatever.

Yesterday when all was ready Mr. Drayton looked around in vain for his lawyer, and finally asked leave to go out and telephone to his office. He soon returned, saying Mr. Clark did not feel well and would not be over. The case was then set down for next Monday.

MR. MAXWELL'S RESIGNATION.

Willing That the Facts in the Case Should Be Published.

Cincinnati, Feb. 12.—Ex-Solicitor General Lawrence Maxwell jr., in an interview here, said the whole story of his resignation was told in the correspondence that passed between Attorney General Olney and himself.

"I am willing," he said, "that it should be published and had hoped that the attorney general would give it out. However, it is the property of the department of justice and I will refer you to Mr. Olney. I decline to discuss the matter. The statement that I will locate in New York is absolutely without foundation. I propose to remain in Cincinnati and my family will be here as soon as this bad weather breaks up."

Mr. Maxwell left during the day for New York.

THE LETTER WAS STOLEN.

A Row in the Reichstag over a Socialist Paper's News.

Berlin, Feb. 12.—During the debate on the estimates of the parliament building Baron von Manteuffel, conservative, declared that a letter which was printed in yesterday's Liepzinger Volkszeitung was stolen from the cloak room of the reichstag building, and demanded that Herr Schoenlank, socialist, who is the editor of the Leipzinger Volkszeitung, furnish an explanation to the house, of which he is a member.

Herr Schoenlank replied, saying that the "copy" was sent to him anonymously. This caused an uproar and many cries of incredulity. Baron von Manteuffel then demanded that the letter be returned to him in order that he might criminally prosecute the person who took it from the cloak room.

TRIED TO COMMIT SUICIDE.

A Physician and the Stomach Pump Saved His Life.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 12.—John Shafer, of Philadelphia, who was taken to the court of special sessions yesterday, to plead to two charges of forgery, tried to commit suicide in the jail. The warden found the man unconscious in his cell with a slight cut on his wrist. It was also found that Shafer had taken poison. A physician was summoned who succeeded in pumping the poison out of the prisoner's stomach and saved the man's life. This morning when Shafer was brought into court to plead to the charge of passing two worthless checks he staggered a moment and then fell to the floor in a faint. He was revived and afterwards was sent back to jail.

JAPS AGAIN VICTORIOUS.

Sink Three Torpedo Boats While Attempting To Escape.

London, Feb. 12.—The Times correspondent in Wei-Hai-Wei telegraphs, under the date of Feb. 8:

"A severe engagement began at 7 o'clock this morning. Several Japanese warships entered the bay from the eastward and three Chinese torpedo boats attempted to escape by the western entrance. The Japanese boats sank them. The thirteen remaining Chinese warships have taken up a position at the southeast island. The main Japanese squadron is still out side the harbor. Four Chinese forts on the southeast island maintain an incessant fire."

For "Ways That Are Dark."

Guthrie, O. T., Feb. 12.—The legislative committee investigating the agricultural college are eliciting some sensational testimony showing that many thousands of dollars was corruptly squandered, positions openly bought and sold, members of the board going on long junketing tours at the expense of the institution, etc. The report, it is believed, will show up the greatest scandal in the history of the territory.

The Wages of Sin.

Fayetville, Ark., Feb. 12.—J. L. Dickson, formerly the cashier of the Mollroy Banking company, of this city, committed suicide by taking poison. Dickson had recently been discharged from the bank, and an investigation of his accounts showed that he was a defaulter to the amount of $21,000. Fear of prosecution drove him to suicide.

Hung by His Suspenders.

Pittsburg, Feb. 12.—Frank Potter, a convict in the Western penitentiary, committed suicide by hanging himself in his cell. The man made a noose out of his suspenders. He was serving a four years sentence for burglary committed in Mercer county.

Woman's Suffrage Bill Defeated.

Carson, Nev., Feb. 12.—The womans' suffrage bill after being reported unfavorably by the committee of the whole and being beaten in the assembly by 17 to 12 was made a special order. Mrs. Mila Tupper Maynard addressed the assembly on the subject.

Receiver Appointed.

Pittsburg, Feb. 12.—The court of common pleas, on application of stockholders and creditors, appointed Henry Warner, receiver of the Linden Steel company. The company's statements show assets valued at $695,000 and liabilities of $485,000.

Kelly To Die in the Chair.

Utica, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Michael Kelly, alias Corey, was convicted of murder in the first degree at Morrisville yesterday and sentenced to be electrocuted at Auburn state prison next month.

TO SETTLE THE DISPUTE

Efforts Being Made To End the Brooklyn Strike.

The Only Point in Dispute Seems To Be the "Tripper" Agreement—This Said To Have Been Arranged—Strikers Will Fight to the Bitter End for That Clause.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 12.—It is probable that the strike may be settled today. Negotiations are pending which it is expected will be concluded by that time.

Secretary William Holcomb, of the executive board, D. A. 75, said that the strike would not be declared off until contracts had been signed between the companies and the men.

An effort to bring about a compromise between the trolley strikers and President Lewis, of the Brooklyn Heights railroad, was made by means of a third party, whose name the strikers refuse to disclose.

Master Workman Connelley said that everything was agreed upon except the nature of the contracts between the company and the men.

President Lewis insisted upon individual contracts, and that each motorman and conductor sign for himself. But the strikers declare they want contracts made through a committee of their labor organization.

The point in dispute between the two parties is a vital one to the Knights of Labor, as upon it depends whether the strikers organization will continue to exist among employes of Lewis' road. If the company gains its point, it will be really a refusal to recognize the Knights of Labor.

Fight to the Bitter End.

The master workman said that the "tripper" question had been agreed upon, but he refused to state particulars.

"If no agreement can be reached," he continued, "it will be a fight to the bitter end."

In speaking of President Lewis' statement made on Saturday, that he was willing to take the old men back, with the exception of some who committed crimes, Connelley said the men would only go back as a body. He does not believe that the contracts with the new men need be a bar to a settlement of the strike. The men know that some of the contracts made with the non-union men are for fifteen or thirty days. The contracts do not bind the companies very tightly, they claim, and besides the new men have broken the rules, which in ordinary times would cause dismissal.

Want H's Removal.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Yonge will appear before the general term of the supreme court and present a petition for the removal of Police Justice Watson. To-morrow he will take similar action in the case of Police Justice Quigley. Mayor Schieren is the petitioner in each case and the corporation counsel's office has taken up this matter at his request. Mr. Yonge will hand in charges of incompetency and neglect of duty on which the applications are based.

Judge Watson in the Ewen street police court, when asked about the charges brought against him by Mayor Schieren, refused to talk until he received the papers. He said, however, he could not see on what grounds charges are brought against him. All told, he has held seventeen for the grand jury for violating Section 635 of the penal code. The cases dismissed were principally those where the evidence was not strong enough to hold and in several cases the prisoners were boys.

Grand Jury on the Strike.

The grand jury began an investigation into the matters connected with the strike. The case of President Norton, of the Atlantic Avenue railroad, who was held for the grand jury, was under consideration. Some of the witnesses before the grand jury were Benjamin Jeremiah Desmond, James Dwyer and Patrick J. Collins. Assistant Corporation Counsel Yonge was also present. He was questioned, it is supposed, as to the city ordinances.

According to a report received by Mayor Schieren, Lewis' company was running 527 cars out of about 720 ordinarily run before the strike. The Atlantic avenue was running 81 out of 230, and the Brooklyn, Queens County & Suburban, 77 out of 315.

A Bomb Thrown In.

Lineville, Ia., Feb. 12.—Unknown men made an effort to blow up the house of Sol Litton, a farmer living a mile from here just after midnight last night. The door of the room was broken open and a bomb thrown in. It exploded but no one was killed. The house was badly wrecked. Litton extinguished the flames and was badly burned.

Met Death While Asleep.

Bryan, O., Feb. 12.—The bodies of two middle-aged men one of whom is thought to be F. P. Hart, a member of the Metal Workers' union of Denver, were found in a barn owned by Gideon Follis near here yesterday. The men had evidently taken refuge and frozen to death while asleep.

Made an Assignment.

New York, Feb. 12.—John Rowland & Sons, manufacturers of hats, doing business at Yonkers, and also having a place of business in this city, has made an assignment to William H. Sweny, of Yonkers, for $13,400 on notes of the firm and $585 to the Citizen's National bank of Yonkers.

A Remarkable Dispatch.

Berlin, Feb. 12.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Tageblatt sends a remarkable dispatch to the effect that both the empress and dowager empress are enceinte. The empress, who was the Princess Alix of Hesse, was married to Nicholas II., on last Nov. 26.

Charley Johnson the Winner.

London, Feb. 12.—Charley Johnson, of St. Paul, U. S. A., met the welterweight, Robinson, here last evening for twenty rounds, but Johnson's superiority told so strongly that the fight was awarded him by the referee in the seventh round.

THE DAILY PRESS.

E. L. FORCE, Publisher and Proprietor.
WALTER IRVING CLARKE, Managing Editor.

TOWN AND HOME FAVORITE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., FEB. 12, 1895

Just what a new dress is to a woman a new dress of type is to a newspaper; and The Daily Press congratulates the embellished Courier-News on its improved good looks.

Just as The Press today celebrates Lincoln's Birthday, so will it celebrate Washington's, by a special copyrighted page of news of George later than the hatchet story.

Ouida, who has been so severely ill that she cancelled her literary engagements, has fully recovered, and is engaged on a new novel to appear in March in The Daily Press, in the short-serial series.

Daily Press serials have not only the merit of being brand-new, copyrighted and by the best authors, but also of being short enough to be compassed in six consecutive issues of the poper. Thus the reader gets choice variety, and does not grow wearied by one story drawn out many weeks.

To Lincoln the immortal, whose natal day is this, The Press gives tribute in its specially prepared matter on Pages 6 and 7. Six full columns are devoted to the martyred president, and the best informed student of human nature and statesmanship as revealed in Lincoln will find therein much to interest and ennoble.

The American boy will find no tales more thrilling, none more inspiring, than the short stories of heroism published from day to day in The Press over the signature of George L. Kilmer. These anniversary records are at once an entertainment, a faithful history, an education; and are worthy of being read in the schools for the graphic impress they will make on the youthful mind.

Prizes at Salmagundi.

Miss Edna French and Miss Bessie Valiant gave a Salmagundi party to their numerous friends last evening, at the home of Miss Edna French on Craig place. Nine tables were arranged with the following games:

Head table, Go Bang; second, Fish Bond; third, Messenger Boy; fourth, Tiddley Winks; fifth, Parcheesi; sixth, Dominoes; seventh, Fascination; eighth, Sewing; ninth, Snap.

Each guest started at the lowest table and then worked his way up. The lucky ones to score the highest number of points were Miss Mary Collier, who received a cup and saucer as first feminine prize, and Maxwell Honeyman, who received as his reward a hat band check. Miss Mary Luckey won the booby prize, a hand-painted match safe, while Charles Barlow, the lowest among the young men, received a penknife.

After a very enjoyable evening spent with the games, the gay party partook of an elaborate collation. Dancing and conversation closed the very successful evening.

Among the young people who enjoyed the good cheer were: Miss Florence Serrell, Miss C Florence Barnes, Miss Percy Emmons, Miss Mabel Ladd, Miss Bertha Thorn, Miss Lillian Glenn, Miss Mary Collier, Miss Mary Luckey, Miss Lillian Schoonmaker, Miss Edith Hurlbut, Miss Adele Kirby, Miss Stella Swain, Miss Maud French, Henry B Drake, Frederick Bettman, Arthur Peck, Everett Peck, Orville T Waring, Walter Serrell, Herbert Schutt, Raymond A McGee, George A Horne, Sydney R Titsworth, Volney F Green, George P Smith, Charles Barlow, Howard Martin, Clifford M Crane, Philip Suffren, Maxwell Honeyman, John VanWinkle and Wilbur F Cornwell.

Party and Presentation.

Last evening a party of 50 relatives, friends and fellowmembers of the Sangerbund Society invaded the home of Mrs. H. Weigmann at 146 East Front street and at once made themselves perfectly at home.

The occasion was a birthday surprise party to the involuntary hostess of the evening.

The merry-makers not only took Sam Frazee and his orchestra with them to discourse sweet music, but were also loaded down with gifts which showed the high regard in which Mrs. Weigmann is held by her associates and friends. The presents were many and valuable, consisting of a elegant rocking chair from the women of the Gesang and Turn Verein, and a lemonade set, lamp, pretty neck muffler, table scarf, gloves, boxes of candy, three tidies, an ice-cream set, and a dozen napkins, from various relatives and friends in the party. Following the presentations, and after Mrs. Weigmann's surprise had somewhat abated, dancing, chat and a general good time were enjoyed until 12, when an elaborate repast was discussed. Again Frazee sounded to the dance and it was long after 2 when the happy gathering dispersed in the moonlight, not failing to wish their friends "many happy returns" ere they departed.

Funeral of Mrs. Boice.

The funeral services of Mrs. Anna Boice, a niece of the late Peter Wooden, were held from her late home in Newark yesterday afternoon at 2.

A sad circumstance was the fact that her husband, John Boice, was lying in a room upstairs ill, and not able to see the silent form.

Those who attended from this city were Mrs. Ann Dickinson, Mrs. Elizabeth Vail, Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Clawson and Caleb Dickinson.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Postmaster Hetfield is rapidly recovering from his recent attack of the grip.

The death occurred this morning of Mrs. Margaret Conrad Burr at the home of her son, 417 Kensington avenue.

Collector Plough of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company was in town yesterday on business for the company.

L. J. Denton of Hillside avenue does not improve as rapidly as his friends would desire, and is still confined to his home.

Wm. C. Ayers of West Second street, hale and hearty, celebrated the 86th anniversary of his birthday today in a fitting manner.

Nathan D. Daboll of 330 East Sixth street received a telegram yesterday announcing the death of his mother in New London, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dunham of Central avenue will give a progressive whist party to a number of friends Thursday evening of this week.

Miss Minnie Mills of Middletown, N.Y., returned home yesterday from a pleasant visit with her cousin, Miss Louella Mills of East Fifth street.

Mrs. Marion Ackerman will give a dinner in honor of Miss Cox of New York, at her home on East Ninth street this evening, Max Wiertz catering.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Covey are boarding at Mrs. Robinson's on West Second street prior to moving into their home on West Front street near Grant avenue.

Theodore Smith of the borough, who has been a great sufferer with inflammatory rheumatism the past four weeks, took a short walk yesterday with his attendant, Garrett P. Smith.

Dr. Daniel H. Thickstun, who went to Florida about a week ago for his health, has written to his son William Thickstun that he is feeling much better, and enjoys the southern climate.

J. P. McAndrews, the local yardmaster of the Jersey Central railroad, is again confined to the house with sickness. The doctor entertains grave fears that his malady will develop into pneumonia.

J. W. VanHorn of Duer street has resigned his position as collector for the Prudential Life Insurance Company in this city. Mr. VanHorn will devote his time to the constable and special marshal business of the borough.

The Misses Lillian and Helen Coward of East Front street, who attended a whist party at Orange Thursday evening, were unable to return home because of the blizzard and remained with friends for several days.

UNCLE PETER'S WILL.

Investigation in Progress, and Contest Probable.

Ex-Judge Wm. R. Codington, who has been consulted by several heirs under Peter Wooden's will as to the advisability of contesting it, is at present making a searching investigation of the affairs relative to the matter, and should such research bring warrantable facts to light a contest will doubtless result.

—Chief Doane of the Fire Department and Superintendent Amos Andrews of the Plainfield Water Supply Company have thoroughly overhauled the hydrants throughout the city and found all but three of them in perfect working order. These were at once put in condition. This inspection is a labor always undertaken by the Chief after an unusually severe cold snap and speaks volumes for his watchfulness of the safety and comfort of Plainfield's citizens.

—A lineman accidentally cut a Plainfield fire-alarm wire this afternoon, sending in a blow on the gong.

The Festum Asinorum, or feast of asses, was formerly held Jan. 14 to commemorate the flight into Egypt. There are still extant several rituals of this festival. One, of Beauvais, in France, orders the priest to bray three times and the congregation to resound each time in a similar manner. An ass, decorated with costly coverings, was led to the altar in a procession and with hymns of rejoicing.

A Modern Instance.

"Oh, of course," said the old man, "I don't blame you for taking the boy's part—it is just like a boy's mother to do so. But I'd think a heap more of him if there were less point to his shoes and more to his conversation."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

BY THE WAY.

—Messrs. Broadway and Kirk had a speeding match on Park avenue Sunday afternoon, which was witnessed with much pleasure by many lovers of good horseflesh.

—William Boe, Jr., of North Plainfield, received a severe wound in the third finger of his left hand this morning while constructing a box. The knife with which he was working slipped and entered the finger, cutting it to the bone.

—The vestry meeting of St. Stephen's Church, Netherwood, which was to be held this evening at the residence of C. P. Ralli, Belvidere avenue, has been postponed until further notice.

Lincoln's Love-Letter.

Did you ever read the letter Lincoln sent his sweetheart? It is newly discovered, a curiosity, and appears in this issue of The Daily Press.

The experience of Geo. A. Apgar, of German Valley, N. J., is well worth remembering. He was troubled with chronic diarrhoea and doctored for five months and was treated by four different doctors without benefit. He then began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, of which one small bottle effected a complete cure. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. REMOVAL.

Dr. Lighthill begs leave to give notice that he has removed to

NO. 132 CRESCENT AVE.

(a few doors from his former location) where he can be consulted on all chronic diseases of whatever name and nature.

Dr. Lighthill refers with pardonable pride to the success of his practice in Plainfield and submits below a few of the many testimonials which he has received from grateful patients. A mass of similar ones can be seen at his office.

AN ALMOST MIRACULOUS CURE.

The Statement of Mr. Edward Teel, Jr., of Dunellen, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

From a sense of duty I desire to call public attention to the almost miraculous cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in the case of my wife. For eleven years she had been afflicted with piles of an unusual severe and distressing character. She suffered every day of her life the most intense pain, attended with frequent and profuse hemorrhage. This state of things debilitated her entire system until she became a perfect wreck of her former self.

We made every effort to obtain a cure but they all resulted in bitter disappointment, although a number of physicians of excellent reputations for skill in that direction had treated her case. She grew worse and worse all the time, the pain became perfectly unbearable and I felt she could not bear the strain of her condition much longer. In this extremity, a friend of mine, Mr. W. E. Dilts, a resident of Roselle, N. J., a passenger conductor on the New Jersey Central told me that he had been similarly affected, and had been permanently cured by Dr. Lighthill, after other medical skill had failed. He assured me that the doctor would cure my wife, no matter how severe her case may be, and his prediction proved perfectly correct. In spite of her desperate condition, Dr. Lighthill, I am glad to say, has effected a complete and perfect cure in her case, and has given her new life.

Since the cure has been effected she has gained in health and strength and is so improved in appearance that her friends scarcely recognize her. They all consider her cure as almost miraculous, and Dr. Lighthill's praise is heard on every side. Our gratitude to Dr. Lighthill is unbounded and we only hope that other sufferers may be benefited by this publication.

EDWARD TEEL, JR.

A Flattering Testimonial from Colonel John Dietrich, One of Plainfield's Oldest and Best Known Residents.

16 ARLINGTON PLACE,
Plainfield, N. J., July 17, 1894.

I am profoundly grateful to Dr. Lighthill for his speedy and radical cure of a most painful malady of over ten years standing with which I was afflicted.

I deem it proper to say to all afflicted to place themselves under the care of this skilful physician and be permanently cured.

I will cheerfully impart any information I possess when called upon.

JOHN DIETRICH.

Mr. Thomas Callahan of No. 214 Richmond street Cured of a Very Distressing Trouble by Dr. Lighthill.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 1, 1894.

TO THE PUBLIC:

For some time past I have been greatly distressed with noises in the head. They were all over my head and troubled me constantly; they were loudest at night when everything was quiet and at such times would often keep me from sleep and disturb my rest. In fact they got to be so bad and distressing that they affected my whole nervous system as well as my health. I did not obtain the least relief until I placed myself under the care of Dr. Lighthill, of No. 132 Crescent avenue, who effected a complete cure in my case in a short time and made me a very happy man.

THOMAS CALLAHAN,
214 Richmond street.

A Card From Mr. T. R. VanZandt,
of Nos. 304 and 306 Park ave.,
Plainfield, N. J.

I certify with pleasure that Dr. Lighthill has effectually cured me of a most painful case of piles. For some time past I had been subject to its attacks, but the last attack was so exceedingly painful that it completely upset my whole system. The pain extended to my legs and in many other directions, and made me so nervous that I could neither sleep, sit down, lie down or move about without serious discomfort and distress. Such was my condition when I applied to Dr. Lighthill for relief, and I am glad to say that as soon as he took hold of my case, I began to improve, and in a short time found myself completely cured. Dr. Lighthill has also effected a radical and permanent cure in a most terrible case of piles on my cousin, Mr. J. V. Z. Griggs, of Rocky Hill, N. J., whose flattering testimonial is in Dr. Lighthill's possession.

T. R. VAN ZANDT,
304 and 306 Park avenue.

Dr. Lighthill
can be consulted daily (except Thursdays) on all CHRONIC, OBSTINATE AND COMPLICATED diseases of the human system of whatever name and nature, at his office and residence,

FORMAL OPENING OF OUR
Grocery Department!
MONDAY, FEB. 11.

A few plain remarks in connection with this new departure we think is opportune.

A few months ago I rented and fitted up at a heavy expense my present elegant and spacious stores, with the intention of giving Plainfield a department store second to none in the State.

As I have progressed from one improvement to another, I find that if I fulfill my plan, I must, of necessity, add a first class Grocery Department, in order to compete with New York and Brooklyn department stores, as many of my patrons are buying these goods there, and desire me to furnish them with their Groceries together with their Dry Goods, Housefurnishings, etc.

I am very much surprised as I have talked to people in regard to this movements, to find that there is such a large proportion of this trade going to New York department stores, and I shall make a strong effort to induce it to remain at home—where it belongs.

I shall do all I can to counteract the too prevalent idea abroad that Plainfield is an expensive place to live in on account of the high prices on articles of food, as real estate agents often say they are obliged to meet this objection when trying to sell or rent houses to New York and Brooklyn people.

We shall, therefore, sell our goods, which will always be of the best quality to be had, at what may be known as cut prices

ROYAL IN NAME AND NATURE.

Plainfield Arcanamites Celebrate Their Growth, and Enjoy a Happy Time.

Plainfield Council, 711, Royal Arcanum, had a notable celebration last night of the acquisition of their two-hundredth member, and the large number present at the session were "glad they came". The Plainfield Council is one of the largest organizations in this city, having acquired its phenomenal growth on the strength of its benefits to members.

Not only did the Council accomplish what it had set for the night, but it went even further, and elected the 201st. The 200th was M. L. Bullock, admitted by card from Passaic, and after him was Henry F. Ritterbusch, transferred by card from Somerville, and an additional proposition for membership was received.

E. W. Conklin had been deputized by the District Grand Deputy to install E. C. Pease chaplain, and James K. Arnold sentry. Wm. B. Remsen acted as guide, and introduced Deputy Conklin and the new officers to be installed.

Mr. Conklin was assisted by Past Regents F. A. Emmons and S. C. Baker, and performed with dignity and decorum the installation.

Mr. Bullock, introduced to the officers and members, was impressed with the importance of his membership, completing as it did the second century of the roll call. He was welcomed with well chosen words by Regent A. M. Res, the central idea expressed being that the men and the society were a great help one to another, and it was hoped he would be of value to the society proportionate to its worth to him. All were in a most happy mood, and it was with much pleasure that business was concluded for entertainment.

James Phillips of Evona, one of the members, gave funny character sketches and songs, in his clever style, being repeatedly recalled. He was followed by Fred DeForest Crozier, an inimitable original dialect story teller, who is a credit to his profession of newspaper man as well. He had a ceaseless fund of humor, and he always amused and never offended. The people could not seem to get enough of him.

There was singing by Fred J. Pope, and piano music by W. E. MacClymont, Orator Burtis had charge of the entertainment, and himself gave some happy recitations. During the programme Eggerding's best were passed, and the air was speedily blue with fragrant Havana smoke.

Not till near midnight did the merry men seek their homes, and then it was to tell their wives what a great and glorious institution was the Royal Arcanum, from which the widows and families of members receive such substantial benefit.

TOPSY, TOPSY-TURVEY.

She Gee'd When Ordered to Haw, and Down She Went with the Cart.

This morning, after removing a cart full of dirt from the cellar of Love Bros. recent purchase, which adjoins Dreier s on West Front street, Charley Nelson led Duffy's high-stepping black mare Topsy to the dump back of the Babcock Building for the purpose of unloading. On this particular trip Topsy seemed to have a load on her mind, for she "gee'd" when ordered to "haw" and Charley and Topsy started down the slide with the inverted dump cart as an improvised toboggan. Witnesses to the affair ran down the bank and in the confusion grabbed Charley's hair, mistaking it for Topsy's mane, but matters were soon straightened out and an inventory showed that no damage was done. Charley removed some of the rich Jersey soil from his immaculate waistcoat and things in general assumed their wonted aspect of Sabbath happiness in the region of Plainfield's Commercial Palace.

Miniature Donnybrook Fair.

James Caufield of Johnston avenue, Netherwood, was so delighted at the recent safe arrival of a little daughter in that particular portion of "this vale of tears" in which his home is located, that he held a christening party Saturday evening in honor of the happy event, to which were invited the relatives ot the little stranger and many neighborhood friends. Now James believes with Owen Meredith that "All things are best", and, in order to make the affair seem as much as possible like similar affairs in the old country, he provided several shillelahs and numerous bottles of good old Irish whiskey, the former to beat time to the infantile music and the latter to ward off possible attacks of the grip.

It was a miniature "Donnybrook Fair" and an Irish "Come-all-ye" at one and the same time.

Time flew rapidly—so in fact did the corks. Finally the latter got ahead of time and finding they had no more bottles to open the entire party began looking around for something else, and quickly selecting one of their number who had the largest head in the crowd they opened his head in a very artistic manner with their sticks. The "claret" flowed freely after this little pleasantry, and had not the one owning the head felt somewhat "broke up" and the entire party soon afterward been troubled with the same feeling (doubtless out of sympathy), "One of the finest" might have been called upon to give an exhibition of twirling the nightstick.

Anyway, the baby is christened.

Knows His Business.

Frank Hedden is receiving compliments on all sides for the efficient manner in which he managed the large number of carriages last evening at the Casino. One hundred and twenty-five carriages were in attendance after the ball, and few people realize the quick judgment and ability necessary in handling so large a number of vehicles in so short a time without a hitch.

—All interested in the Y. M. C. A. building, women as well as men, are cordially invited to the opening tonight at 5.

—Every person will receive a hearty welcome at the opening exercises of the new Y. M. C. A. Building tonight at 8.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure.

—The Unit Social Club are planning for a most enjoyable time at their Washington Birthday dance.

—The Camera Club will exhibit the Newark slides at their rooms this evening, to club members and friends.

—The surplus snow hauled from the main streets in town is being dumped in the spare space near the Y. M. C. A. building.

—Most of the furniture for the new Y. M. C. A. Building arrived yesterday, and the rooms will be furnished immediately, to be in readiness for the convention.

—In St. Joseph's Church next Sunday morning at 10:30 the forty-hours devotion will commence. Four priests will be present, American, German, French and Italian.

—Jacob Kleiner, the star route mail carrier between this city and Warrenville, succeeded in reaching that place yesterday with much difficulty, having made two previous unsuccessful attempts.

—Harry Marshall of East Front street has had a covering made to place over the iron grate in front of his laundry. This is done to keep the cold air from the cellar. Daniel Dunavan did the work.

—Street Commissioner Meeker and his force of men have removed the bank of snow which blocked East Front street at Mulford Cole's hill, thus making an open thoroughfare between this city and Scotch Plains.

—A water pipe in the flat over Mallinson's drug store burst last evening about 6:15, and water fell in torrents from the ceiling, flooding the rear part of the store. George Tobin was called, and repaired the break immediately.

—A special communication of Jerusalem Lodge No. 26, F. and A. M., will be held tomorrow evening, when the Fellow Craft Degree will be conferred on three candidates. A large attendance is requested, and visiting brethren are cordially invited to attend.

—No prize is offered for the correct guess on the identity of the tall young man in Hallock's ad, but every purchase made at Hallock's is a prize.

—With the grip in nearly every member of the family, and the water pipes frozen and burst, the family of F C. Adams of 604 Washington street has been severely tried of late.

—The North Plainfield Township Committee have not decided on the two polling places for the township yet, but it is thought that Demler's store and Acker's mill will be used.

—Elias Allen of Washingtonville, a member of the North Plainfield Township Committee, was the guest last night of his son-in-law, Mr. Schutt of Duer street. Mr. Allen has not been well the past three weeks.

Diligent in His Business.

James Daley of the Northern Pacific Tea Company attempted to reach his customers in Metuchen last Saturday, but was unable to get any farther than Campbell's club-house, and had to return.

Yesterday he tried again, taking an assistant and two snow-shovels. He succeeded in reaching his destination, and his patrons were happy to get their goods.

A False Diagnosis.

La grippe is confounded by many persons with a severe attack of catarrh, which in some respects resembles the former. These individuals suffer severely with pain about the forehead, eyes and ears, with soreness in throat and stoppage of the nasal passages, and in fact, are incapacitated for work of any kind for days at a time. These are catarrhal sufferers. Ely's Cream Balm has been used with the best results in such cases. The remedy will give instant relief.

NOW ON HAND,

Diphtheria Antitoxine.

FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY.

So limited has been the supply of GENUINE ANTITOXINE heretofore, that sales have been made only on condition of immediate actual use. But amid so large a population as ours, an urgent demand for the new treatment may arise at any hour, night or day, Sunday or week-day. And delay in obtaining it might result fatally. I have therefore, with some difficulty, and at considerable expense, provided a complete outfit of Antitoxine Serum (with injector) and am prepared to meet such demand. The cost of an outfit (Serum of two powers and Koch injector) is now about $12 being only one-fourth of the earlier price. At present sales will be made only on the order of a practicing physician.

AS A STUMP SPEAKER.

Lincoln's Famous Oration In Cooper Union, New York.

Mr. Lincoln was the only man who ever went directly from the stump to the presidency and was, in fact, the only man ever chosen to that office who did not at the time of such choice or within a very near period of time hold public office or stand conspicuous before the nation for military achievement.

Mr. Lincoln was nominated for the presidency within a few weeks after he had finished the last and one of the most important stumping tours which he ever made. It is one about which less has been written than has been told of any of his other experiences upon the hustings, and yet it was one which had almost as important influence in reconciling the leading men of his party to his nomination as even that more conspicuous and brilliant succession of debates which he held two years before with Stephen A. Douglas.

It was doubtless with a view of revealing to the able men of the east that Mr. Lincoln was as logical, lucid, terse, impressive and cultivated an orator as any man that the east possessed that the suggestion was delicately conveyed to the eastern Republicans that he might consent to deliver an address in New York city. If there was no great belief on the part of these able eastern Republicans in Mr. Lincoln's higher intellectual cultivation and quality, there was on the other hand something of curiosity to see and hear this man who had overthrown Douglas, and who had crystallized public opinion in the west.

The congregation that assembled in Cooper Union on that now historic evening was a splendid one. Many of the distinguished Republicans brought their wives or members of their families. Evarts was there, curious to see and hear this man of whom he had heard so much, but for whom he had not at that time the most admiring opinion, perhaps because of premonitions that it was Lincoln who was to defeat the darling hope of Evarts and of that great company of eastern Republicans who had cherished for four years the desire to see Mr. Seward nominated for the presidency. Governor Morgan was there, and Moses H. Grinnell, who might have been governor had his partner not objected, and young Colonel Arthur, who was afterward to be president, and Professor Dwight, one of the profoundest lawyers New York has ever had, and William Cullen Bryant, even then seeming venerable in appearance, and, in fact, nearly all of those men who had been conspicuous in the service of the young Republican party in New York city.

Mr. Lincoln was introduced, and very happily, by William Cullen Bryant, and when he stepped forth upon the platform a great throng saw a man conspicuous above every other one in that hall for height, with a sort of awkward grace suggested by his loose jointed figure, a careless indifference to nicety in his dress, his face clean shaven, homely and his hair tossed about his head seemingly as though his fingers had been run carelessly through it just before he arose. His appearance for the moment was not such as to greatly impress those who saw him. He spoke in a voice pitched upon a high tenor key, but it was noticed that his words were distinctly enunciated, and his voice carried easily over that hall.

His first sentence surprised the accomplished orators and thinkers who were before him. They expected to hear a flowery, rhetorical and showy exordium, but there was no exordium at all. He plunged immediately into his subject, taking as his text a paragraph from a speech delivered a few months before by Douglas in Ohio. Before he had spoken five minutes these able men perceived his intellectual strength and began to understand why he had gained the pre-eminence which distinguished him in the west. There were no flowers of rhetoric in the address, but it was noticed that the diction was singularly accurate, simple, appropriate, and that it was used with such remarkable felicity as enabled him to express abstract ideas so that they were understood upon the moment of hearing.

He had that great and distinguished audience completely in his power within a few moments after he began to speak. Curiosity had vanished, and there came in its place that impressive recognition which intellect gives to intellect. Before he was half through it was perceived that he was setting forth the tremendous issues of the day in such a manner as had never been done in New York, and when he had finished these able men turned to one another and with common thought exclaimed, "That is a masterly address."

The pre-eminent ability revealed by this address caused the profoundest impression in New York city. The speech and the man were the chief topics of interest when Republicans met on the following day and for many days thereafter, and when the news came three months later from Chicago that Mr. Lincoln had been nominated for the presidency there was probably not one of those who heard that address who did not recall it and find consolation in the recollection of it for their disappointment over Mr. Seward's defeat.

E. J. EDWARDS.

A STUDY OF LINCOLN.

THE MASTER IN DIPLOMACY, DEBATE AND POLITICS.

Genius In Cowhide Boots—Something That Charles A. Dana Will Remember—Lincoln In Action and In Fitness of Speech. A Man of Many Sorrows.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

THE Lincoln bibliography comprises thousands of volumes, and each year adds to the catalogue. Yet the world, not only American, but foreign, never tires of reading his life and studying its cipher. Lincoln was always something of an enigma, and there is a feeling not yet dead that the last word has not yet been said concerning the man, unique and complex above all his compeers. He belonged to the "plain people," whom he loved, and who were ever in his mouth. He was their voice, one with them in the limitations of taste and in the elemental forces of temperament. Like them, he wasted but little thought on the graces of culture. It was not, one may fancy, that he did not esteem the things which decorate social and intellectual life. But these had not been mother's milk to him, and when gigantic issues clutched him in their grip they so minimized lesser ideals as to make them worthless.

So he remained to the last, genius in cowhide boots, a man of the backwoods in outer seeming, but with the delicate tenderness of a Bayard under the skin, which needed but a pin prick to escape and transform him into the noblest of gentlemen. The one statesman of his period whose grasp on the logic of the history then being worked out in battlefield and forum and council chamber was infallible, he could also be at need the craftiest of wire pullers, with a skill in jerking the puppets which would have shamed the shrewdest modern politician in his own game. The poetic elevation of the prophet, which so often burned in his utterances of tongue and pen, was linked with homespun sagacity, and the melancholy so ingrained in the substance of his being would often burst at the mere twist of a suggestion into the wildest fooling of the buffoon. Such were some of the antitheses of the immortal whose name pairs that of Washington to make the Dioscuri of American history. Today no less than at that time, when he filled the whole foreground of national life, the essential quality of the man shines through so many and so diverse facets that their cross lights dazzle perception. Yet he never ceased to be a man of the "plain people," its finest incarnation indeed, the "Honest Old Abe" of familiar speech.

There was nothing in Lincoln's youthful conditions but what are closely paralleled in those of other distinguished self made Americans. It was the life of the log cabin and the dugout, 16 hours' grapple per diem with hard physical toil for hog and hominy. He had grown hair on his chin before he had emerged from the mysteries of long division.

His rise to distinction as lawyer and politician, though he began under conditions which handicapped him, was remarkably rapid. During the early fifties he had hammered out a solid reputation throughout the length and breadth of the west, but his national fame did not become settled till the great Douglas-Lincoln debate of 1858, when he crossed blades with one of the strongest controversialists in the country as competitor for the United States senate. Those speeches have become classics of debate and sounded the ringing prelude to the hundred battlefields of the early future with such swordlike epigrams as, "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

When Abraham Lincoln was elected president, probably no one would have classed the choice of the Republican party as a special dispensation of Providence. It is sure that there were a score who were willing to be understood of all that each and every one could better fill that pair of No. 11 shoes than could the gaunt Illinoisian. Sure it is that during a large portion of that terrible period, 1861-5, numerous leaders of public opinion, and of his own party withal, did not spare the lash, in season and out of season, from the shoulders of their sorely tried chief. The president, however, felt that the heart of the "plain people" was with him, lifting him on its ground swell. When the history of Republican faction fighting, specially in the senate, during the Lincoln administration, is fully written, it will reveal a curious story. Never did diplomat show more subtle tact and knowledge of men than did Lincoln in smoothing the bristles of opposition and winning his own will. Let a single instance of a little understood side of his character suffice.

A jealous senatorial majority in 1863 had determined to drive Secretary Seward from his portfolio at any cost, and irresistible pressure was brought to bear on Mr. Lincoln. Much as he valued Seward, the cordial support of the senate was still more essential. Here was a stump to plow around, to use his favorite metaphor. Mr. Chase, the secretary of the treasury, was as great a favorite with the oligarchy in the upper house as Seward was its bete noir. Lincoln demanded and received Mr. Seward's resignation and forthwith sent for Mr. Chase, whom he also asked to resign and in written form which he himself should dictate. The putative reason assigned by the great financial secretary was Mr. Seward's resignation and his unwillingness to serve in an administration with that strong right arm lopped off. The two papers were shown to Morton, Wade and others of the astonished coterie, and rather than have Chase go they expressed their willingness to yield the point as to Seward. So Mr. Lincoln's craft disarmed their obstinacy and saved the integrity of his cabinet without giving offense to the "conscript fathers," so suavely hoodwinked by this master hand.

The presidential campaign of 1864 affords an illustration of the cunning in practical politics which supplemented the loftier aspects of the statesman and the patriot. To make sure of Pennsylvania, which was the native state of McClellan, and which seemed very doubtful, was a grave problem. At a conclave held in Washington the president ended discussion with the following dictum: "Let the right men, soldiers hot from the battlefield and full of enthusiasm, be furloughed home by the thousands for the week preceding election. One of these missionaries will make more votes than a score of stump speakers. But the president," he continued, "must not be known as privy to it, nor must it be an order from the war department." Assistant War Secretary Charles A. Dana was sent to General Meade's headquarters to negotiate this piece of finesse, and that general was very unwillingly persuaded to spare his battalions. But Pennsylvania went "Lincoln" by an overwhelming majority. The versatility of Lincoln, master in power and mental resource even as political juggler, astonishes the mind. One is interested in such incidents mainly as they blazon his complex makeup and wonders that a man so equipped on the noblest side of statesmanship should have had these lesser gifts of the working politician, an endowment rarely united in the same man.

Whatever credit may be justly given to the staff of great lieutenants in council and camp who held up the hands of Abraham Lincoln, his genius overshadows them all. His was the initiative of all great measures, his the power to see things dissociated from party or temporary bias in luminous perspective. Stanton, Seward, Chase, great men as they were and of domineering wills, recognized the master, who had them bitted and bridled, yet never let them feel the gall of the curb, so firmly gentle was his touch. It was not really till the last year of Lincoln's life, the year of his renomination, that there was a fully adequate notion abroad in the land, however, of just what measure of greatness there was in him. But that was the year when the nation made a stock taking of the four years, posted the ledger and struck the balance. The sharp cut, salient bigness of him, cleaving upward like an Alpine peak, stood out monumental. All cloud of misconception had blown away. Men could look back and see in true proportion the president's management of the slavery question as in its threefold relation, a military, political and international weapon. The emancipation proclamation probably saved the country. Had it not been for that downright step, which stiffened the backbone of English liberation, Earl Russell would probably have had free hand to have smashed the blockade. So, too, Lincoln's treatment of the "Trent" incident, of the Mexican imbroglio and of the other great exigencies which rose with repeated threat, shone in its true light. Men felt that here was "a man sent of God" when the polling booths of November, 1864, were the scene of the most important battle of the war.

Mr. Lincoln rose greatly to occasion in times of action. In rising to occasion in fitness of speech he was equally sure. Scores of his utterances have got imbedded as unwritten sections of the American constitution. That, for example, where he spoke of this country as one "where every man has a right to be equal with every other man," is a lamp set in the midst of the Declaration of Independence. At least two of his utterances will live, while the speech of men endures, among the greatest monuments of eloquence. The first of these thought out incidentally within a few hours of delivery and only 269 words long, spoken at the dedication of the Gettysburg battlefield, completely dwarfs everything similar in history. The simple Doric phrases were elegy and trumpet blast. They are ineffaceably chiseled on the world's memory, and Edward Everett's brilliant oration of two hours at the same time has already gone to the dust heap. So Lincoln's second inaugural takes rank among the matchless things of human speech, the becoming of the hour and the man.

Lincoln's fame has broadened and deepened and heightened with the flight of years. Unlike most great men, he inspires love equally with awe and admiration. When we think of him now, it is not merely the figure of the great statesman and the savior of a nation that rises. It is the man of many sorrows, the big tender heart in the uncouth giant frame, the intense humanity of him that sounds the magic stop and tells why Lincoln is Lincoln.

G. T. FERRIS.

Like Two Bulldogs.

Once, when a war with England seemed imminent, owing to the strained relations existing, some one asked Lincoln for his opinion.

"I remember," replied the president, "when I was a lad, there were two fields behind our house separated by a fence. In each field there was a big bulldog, and these dogs spent the whole day racing up and down, snarling and yelping at each other through that fence. One day they both came at the same moment to a hole in it, big enough to let either of them through. Well, gentlemen, what do you think they did? They just turned tail and scampered away as fast as they could in opposite directions. Now, England and America are like those bulldogs."

MONEY LOANED.

Local Representatives Wanted.

Our system affords an opportunity to borrow on either personal or real estate security. The plan is superior to building and loan associations. The amount borrowed may be returned in monthly payments without bonus, with interest at 5 per cent. per annum. It affords absolute security to investors with a reasonable guarantee of an annual dividend of from 8 to 10 per cent. We desire to secure the services of energetic, representative men in every community to act as local secretaries. The position will be sufficiently remunerative to amply compensate for services. If you possess the above qualifications write for particulars. Full information regarding our system of making loans as well as investments and agencies will be furnished by addressing S. S. GENIUS OF LINCOLN.

A STRIKING EXAMPLE OF HIS REMARKABLE POWER.

How Junius Henri Browne Was Charmed by His Sincerity and Perfect Fairness, His Personalveness on the Political Rostrum—Effect of His Speech.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

The first time I saw Abraham Lincoln and the impression he made upon me I shall never forget. It was in the days of my early youth, just before the civil war, when I had already been impelled by some unknown though adverse influence to enter journalism in a southwestern city on the border.

Lincoln had very recently emerged from comparative obscurity into national reputation through his memorable canvass in Illinois with Stephen A. Douglas for the United States senatorship and had been defeated. He visited the city where I then lived as a prospective candidate for the presidency and had been announced to speak on the issues of the forthcoming campaign, the long deferred struggle between freedom and slavery. The public was eager to hear him, for it had read his famous debates with Douglas as reported by the press, and he had in consequence an immense open air audience. The reporter who had been assigned to the meeting failed at the last moment to appear, and I went in his place rather reluctantly, I admit, for I cherished a most violent prejudice against the man on whom I had never laid eyes. Like Charles Lamb, I had damned him at a venture.

The cause of the prejudice was that, though a native New Yorker, I had been reared in the southwest. I had had southern boys as chums at college, I had been much in the cotton states, and I was the son of a strong Whig. The Whig party had always favored and been in sympathy with the south (they well deserved the name dough faces), and I had been bred in my father's political school, which as a boy I had accepted unhesitatingly. The very name of abolitionism was detestable to me.

I had a place very near Lincoln on the balcony from which he spoke, though expecting to give only an abstract of his address, for the newspaper I represented was opposed to him and his convictions. He more than realized my anticipations. He was, I thought, the ugliest, most awkward, most common looking man I had ever seen. To imagine him president of the republic almost made me shiver. The first words he might speak would, I felt sure, repel me even more than his personal appearance had.

That long, lank, disjointed figure, half leaning on the iron railing, that sallow, angular, unsymmetrical face, those few clumsy gestures still live in my memory. So does his voice, which, when he opened his lips, had a rather strident, uncultured sound. It was strong, penetrating, particularly earnest, honest, persuasive. And this earnestness and honesty made me forget its rusticity of accent and intonation. It contained, too, a note of sadness, which corresponded to the melancholy expression of his deep, luminous, significant, impressionable eyes.

After a few minutes of intent listening, which his perfect simplicity and earnestness commanded, I began to forget his manner in his matter. I lost sight of his appearance as he uttered his undoubted convictions. Nobody who heard him could have questioned for a moment his absolute sincerity, the complete truthfulness of the man. He was the very embodiment of candor, benevolence, uprightness. His whole nature seemed to be animated with the highest purpose, the purest of motives.

Lincoln's subject was, of course, "Slavery," the one, the absorbing question of the time. He treated it in the calmest, fairest, most unimpassioned manner, though the habit of the day, both north and south, was to look at it altogether sectionally and to discuss it for the most part with ardent bias and temper.

He pointed out clearly, as I remember, the danger of slavery to the whole country; that slavery was as inconsistent with freedom in the north as it was with freedom at home. Whatever slavery might be morally, and he declined then to debate its moral aspect, its political aspects at such a crisis were more important, were vital indeed, to the preservation of the nation. He would give to the south every constitutional right, but it should be remembered that the north also had rights, and that it could not endure continued encroachments, which, a few years before, had never been put forward or even imagined, without losing its independence and self respect. The two systems of slave labor and free labor, he did not believe, could much longer coexist.

This was, I think, the substance of his speech, but it gives no idea of its impartial character, to which even a Carolinian fire eater could hardly have taken exception. It contained not one rhetorical phrase. It was all reason, practicality, common sense, but intensely interesting. The speaker plainly was not an orator in the usual sense, and yet his effort was the sum of all oratory. It was wholly convincing, wholly unanswerable, and the vast assembly must have so regarded it. The enthusiasm at the close was immense. A new order of politician, the coming man, had clearly been revealed.

I in common with many others stepped forward to grasp his hand. He had won me over completely. From that hour to his death I was his profound admirer, and I revere his memory today as the greatest of all Americans. It may seem nothing to conquer the passionate prejudice of a bumptious boy barely out of his teens. But it is the strongest prejudice that can be cherished and can be conquered only by a combination of the rarest power and the loftiest genius, such as belonged indisputably to Abraham Lincoln.

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

A LINCOLN NURSE.

She Cared For Bob and Willie Lincoln Before the War.

Aunt Ruth Stanton, an old colored woman who resides in St. Louis, was a nurse in Abraham Lincoln's family years ago, when they lived in Springfield, and long before the ultimate glory of the great emancipator was outlined. Aunt Ruth is now a janitress and drudges all day long, but she is yet in robust health. This is the story the old lady tells of her experience, minus the quaint dialect:

"The Lincolns were poor then and lived in a frame house with six rooms. Mrs. Lincoln belonged to the Episcopal church, and so did the Bradfords. I used to take the Bradford children to Sunday school, and on the way we would sometimes see Mr. Robert Lincoln, who was only 5 years old. He was going to Sunday school, too, and the Bradford children would say: 'Oh, Ruth, there's that Bobby Lincoln with his patched pants! Let's go the other way, so as we won't meet him.' Then we would go by a roundabout way to church to get away from Bobby Lincoln because he used to wear blue jean pants which his mother made for him and patched for him when he wore a hole in them. After awhile Mrs. Bradford sent me over to help Mrs. Lincoln every Saturday, for she had no servant and had to do her own housework. Then Mrs. Bradford sent me to live with the Lincolns.

"I scrubbed the floors and waited on the table and helped Mrs. Lincoln to clean the dishes and do the washing. She did all the up stairs work, made clothes for the boys, Robert and Willie, and cooked the meals. Mr. Lincoln was a very good and kind man, but I don't remember anything particular about him, for I was very young. He was a very tall man. That's all I can remember of him. He used to be at his office all the day long, and I did not see much of him, but I never expected to see him president of the United States.

"Mrs. Lincoln was a very nice lady. She worked hard and was a good church member. Every Thursday the sewing society of the Episcopal church would meet at Mrs. Lincoln's house and make clothes for the very poor people. She was very plain in her ways, and I remember that she used to go to church wearing a cheap calico dress and a sunbonnet. She didn't have silk or satin dresses. The children, Robert, 5 years old, and Willie, a few years younger, were very good boys. I used to take care of them, for they were too small to go to school. We would play around the streets of Springfield, and the white children would throw stones at the colored children.

"After I left, Mrs. Lincoln had to do all of her own housework, for she could not afford to get another servant. I have never seen any of the family since, but of course I have heard a great deal about them. I guess that Mr. Robert Lincoln does not remember when he used to wear patched jeans pants since he has become a big man."

AUNT RUTH STANTON.

LINCOLN'S LOVE LETTER.

But It Was Without the Word Love and Was a Proposal That Did Not Propose.

Of all the strange traits in Abraham Lincoln, certainly the strangest was his attitude toward women. The original letter to the lady he afterward married, of which so much has been conjectured, was found by accident after The Century biography was completed. If it has a rival in the world for oddity among love letters, it certainly has but one—that written by George Whitefield, which has long been considered the queerest proposal ever penned. Mr. Lincoln's letter is addressed to "My Dear Mary" and is as follows:

MRS. LINCOLN.

You must know that I cannot see you or think of you with entire indifference, and yet it may be that you are mistaken in regard to what my real feelings toward you are. If I knew you were not, I should not trouble you with this letter. Perhaps any other man would know enough without further information, but I consider it my peculiar right to plead ignorance and your bounden duty to allow the plea. I want in all cases to do right and most particularly so in all cases with women. I want at this particular time more than anything else to do right with you, and if I knew it would be doing right, as I rather suspect it would, to let you alone, I would do it. And for the purpose of making the matter as plain as possible I now say you can drop the subject, dismiss your thoughts, if you ever had any, from me forever and leave this letter unanswered without calling forth one accusing murmur from me. And I will even go further and say that if it will add anything to your comfort and peace of mind to do so it is my sincere wish that you should. Do not understand by this that I wish to cut your acquaintance. I mean no such thing. What I do wish is that our further acquaintance shall depend upon yourself. If such further acquaintance would contribute nothing to your happiness, I am sure it would not to mine. If you feel yourself in any degree bound to me, I am now willing to release you, provided you wish it, while, on the other hand, I am willing and even anxious to bind you faster if I can be convinced that it will in any degree add to your happiness. This indeed is the whole question with me. Nothing would make me more miserable than to believe you miserable, nothing more happy than to know you were so. In what I have now said I think I cannot be misunderstood, and to make myself understood is the only object of this letter. If it suits you best not to answer this, farewell. A long life and a merry one attend you. But if you conclude to write back, speak as plainly as I do. There can be neither harm nor danger in saying to me anything you think just in the manner you think it. Your friend, LINCOLN.

Here is a love letter without the word love and a proposal that does not propose, surely the queerest thing of its class, for Whitefield's letter did at least offer marriage and gave reasons for desiring it.

A Southerner's Tribute.

Lincoln's best image is the boy of America to whom he communicates himself, his high impulse and example, his best pedestal a broad, free Union, yet if art would fitly commemorate the rise of a man without history summoned to ennoble all history what better token of a humble woodman matured to a great magistrate than a rough, resinous American bough upheld against a storm in the firm grasp of Liberty as a flaming torch, unquenchable, but too fast consumed, and revealing through a black night of thunder peals and sobbing rains a path on to a gracious dawn full blown with the morning glories of the old flag?—John G. B. Pitkin.

CONKY STILES.

As near as I could find out nobody ever knew how Conky Stiles came to know as much of the Bible as he did. Thirty years ago people as a class were much better acquainted with the Bible than folk are nowadays, and there wasn't another one of 'em in the whole Connecticut valley from the Canada line to the Sound that could stand up 'longside of Conky Stiles and quote Scripture. Well, he knew the whole thing by heart, from Genesis, Chapter 1., to the amen at the end of the Revelation of St. John the Divine; that's the whole business in a nutshell!

His name wasn't Conky; we called him Conky for short. His real name was Silas Stiles, but one time at a Sunday school convention Mr. Hubbell, the minister, spoke of him as a "veritable concordance of the Holy Scriptures," and so we boys undertook to call him Concordance, but bimeby that name got whittled down to Conky, and Conky stuck to him all the rest of his life; not a bad name for him, neither, as names go; heap more dignified than Si!

My father always insisted that Conky got his start in the Scriptures in this way: Conky's folks lived for about five years (while Conky was a boy) in the old Ransom house. Their next neighbors were the Cooleys, and just over across the road lived the Kelseys. Maybe you've heard of the Cooley-Kelsey debate? No? Funny, isn't it, how soon folks forget events and epochs and things! Fifty years ago nothin' else but the Cooley-Kelsey debate was talked of in Hampshire county, and yet here we are livin' in this intelligent State of Illinois, and it's dollars to doughnuts that half our people never heard of Lawyer Kelsey or of Deacon Cooley!

You see, the deacon was high up in the Congregational church, and he believed in "baptyzo," which is the Greek for the Congregational doctrine of sprinkling. Lawyer Kelsey had never been converted and had never made a profession, but, havin' a brother who was a Baptist minister in Pennsylvania, he was counted with the Baptists, too, and I guess he was a Baptist if he was anything, although like as not, he'd have said he was a heathen if he thought he could get up an argument by saying it, for of all the folks you ever saw Lawer Kelsey was the worst for keepin' things stirred up. One time Deacon Cooley and Lawyer Kelsey came together and locked horns on that word "baptyzo," Lawyer Kelsey maintainin' that the word wasn't or shouldn't be "baptyzo," but "baptidzo," and, as you know, of course, there is as much difference between "baptyzo" and "baptidzo" as there is between a fog and a thunder shower.

Well, for about six months they had it up hill and down dale, in all the meetin' houses, and schoolhouses, and vestry-rooms, and towns halls in the country, and it did beat all how much learnin' they got out of the books and dictionaries, and what long sermons they made, and what a sensation there was among the unbelievers as well as the elect! I guess they'd have been arguin' yet if the freshet hadn't come an' distracted public attention by carryin' away the Northampton bridge and the Holyoke dam.

It happened that while this theological cataclysm was at its height, Conky Stiles, being 6 years old, was born again, and, repentin' of his sins, made a profession of faith. And from that time he never lapsed nor backslided, but was always a conscientious and devout follower, illustrating in his daily walks (as Mr. Hubbell, the minister, said) those priceless virtues which had illuminated the career of his Grandmother Cowles, a lady esteemed not more by the elders for her piety than by the younger folks for her cookies and squash pies.

When Conky was 8 years old he got the prize at our Sunday school for having committed to memory the most Bible verses in the year, and that same spring he got up and recited every line of the Acts of the Apostles without having to be prompted once. By the time he was 12 years old he knew the whole Bible by heart, and most of the hymn book, too; although, as I have said, the Bible was his specialty. Yet he wasn't one of your pale-faced, studious boys; no, sir, not a bit of it! He took just as much consolation in playin' three-old-cat and barn ball and hockey as any of the rest of us boys, and he could beat us all fishin', although perhaps that was because he learnt a new way of spittin' on his bait from his Uncle Lute Mason, who was considerable of a sport in those days.

Conky was always hearty and cheery; we all felt good when he was around. We never minded that way he had of quotin' things from the Bible; we'd got used to it, and maybe it was a desirable influence. At any rate, we all liked Conky.

But perhaps you don't understand what I mean when I refer to his way of quotin' the Bible. It was like this: Conky, we'll say, would be goin' down the road, and I'd come out of the house and holler: "Hello, there, Conky! Where be you goin'?"

Then he'd say: "John, xxi., 3"—that would be all he'd say, and that would be enough; for it gave us to understand that he was goin' a-fishin'.

Conky never made a mistake; his quotations were always right; he always hit the chapter and the verse sure pop the first time.

The habit grew on him as he got older. Associating with Conky for fifteen or twenty minutes wasn't much different from readin' the Bible for a couple of days, except that there wasn't any manual labor about it. I guess he'd have been a minister if the war hadn't come along and spoiled it all.

In the fall of 1862 there was a war meetin' in the town hall, and Elijah Cutler made a speech urgin' the men folks to come forward and contribute their services—their lives, if need be—to the cause of freedom and right. We were all keyed up with excitement, for next to Wendell Phillips and Henry Ward Beecher I guess Elijah Cutler was the greatest orator that ever lived. While we were shiverin' and waitin' for somebody to lead off, Conky Styles rose up and says: "First Kings, xix., 20," says he, and with that he put on his cap and walked out of the meetin'.

"Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father and my mother, and then I will follow thee."

That's what Conky said, or as good as he said, and that's what he meant, too.

He didn't put off his religion when he put on his uniform. Conky Stiles, soldier or civilian, was always a livin', walkin' encyclopedy of the Bible, a human compendium of psalms and proverbs and texts; and I had that confidence in him I'd have bet he wrote the Bible himself if I hadn't known better and to the contrary.

We were with McClellan a long spell. There was a heap of sickness among the boys, for we weren't used to the climate, and most of us pined for the comforts of home. Lookin' back over the thirty years that lie between this time and that, I see one figure loomin' up, calm and bright and beautiful in the midst of fever and sufferin' and privation and death. I see a homely, earnest face, radiant with sympathy and love and hope, and I hear Conky Stiles' voice again speaking comfort and cheer to all about him. We all loved him; he stood next to Mr. Lincoln and Gen. McClellan in the hearts of everybody in the regiment.

They sent a committee down from our town one Thahksgiving time to bring a lot of good things, and to see how soon we were going to capture Richmond. Mr. Hubbell, the minister, was one of them. Deacon Cooley was another. There was talk at one time that Conky had a soft spot in his heart for the deacon's eldest girl, Tryphena, but I always allowed that he paid as much attention to the other daughter, Tryphosa, as he did to her eldest sister, and I guess he hadn't any more hankerin' for one than he had for the other, for when the committee come to go home Conky says to Deacon Cooley: "Well, good-by, deacon," says he, "Romans, xvi., 12."

We had to look it up in the Bible before we knew what he meant. "Salute Tryphena and Tryphosa, who labor in the Lord"—that was Conk's message to the Cooley girls.

He wrote a letter once to Mr. Carter, who was one of the selectmen, and he put this postscript to it: "Romans xvi., 6." You see Mr. Carter's wife had been Conkey's Sunday school teacher, and Conky did not forget to "greet Mary, who bestowed much labor on us."

Down at Elnathan Jones' general store the other day I heard Elnathan tell how Conky clerked it for a spell and how one day he says to Conkey: "That Baker bill has been runnin' on for more'n six weeks. We can't do business unless we get our money. Conky, I wish you'd just kind o' spur Mr. Baker up a little."

So Conky sat down on the stool at the desk and dropped Mr. Baker a short epistle to this effect: ("Romans i., 14; xxii., 11; Psalms, cxiii., 6."

Next day who should come in but Mr. Baker, and he allowed that that letter had gone straighter to his conscience than any sermon would have done, and he paid up his bill and bought a kit of salt mackeral into the bargain, so Elnathan says.

I could keep on tellin' things like this day in and night out, for lots of just such stories are told about Conky all over Hampshire county now; some of em' doubtless are true, and some of 'em doubtless ain't; there's no tellin'; but it can't be denied that most of 'em have the genuine Conky flavor.

The histories don't say anything about the skirmishes we had with the rebels at Churchill's bridge along in May '64, but we boys who were there remembered it as the toughtest fight in all our experience. They were just desperate, the rebels were, and—well, we were mighty glad when night came, for a soldier can retreat in the dark with few chances of interruption. Out of our company of 150 men, only sixty were left. You can judge from that of what the fighting was at Churchill's bridge. When they called the roll in camp next day, Conky Stiles wasn't there.

Had we left him dead at the bridge, or was he wounded, dying the more awful death of hunger, thirst and neglect?

"By——!" says Lew Bassett, "let's go back for Conky!"

That was the only time I ever heard an oath without a feelin' of regret.

A detachment of cavalry went out to reconnoiter. Only the ruin of the preceding day remained where we boys had stood and stood and stood—only to be repulsed at last. Bluecoats and graycoats lay side by side and over against one another in the reconciling peace of death. Occasionally a maimed body, containing just a remnant of life, was found, and one of these crippled bodies was what was left of Conky.

When the surgeon saw the minie hole, here in his thigh, and the saber gash, here in his temple, he shook his head, and we knew what that meant.

Lew Bassett, a man who had never been to meetin' in his life, and who could swear a new and awful oath every time—Lew Bassett says: "No, Conky Stiles ain't going to die, for I shan't let him!" and he bent over and lifted up Conky's head and held it, so, and wiped away the trickles of blood, and his big hard hands had the tenderness of a gentle loving woman's.

We heard Conky's voice, and only once, again. For when, just at the last, he opened his eyes and saw that he was there, he smiled, feeble-like, and the grace of the Book triumphed once more within him, and he says—it seemed almost like a whisper, he spoke so faint and low: "Good-by, boys: II. Timothy, iv. 7."

And then, though his light went out, the sublime truth of his last words shone from his white, peaceful face.

"I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course, I have kept the faith!"—Eugene Field in the Chicago Record.

PUTTING UP THE FEET.

A Comfort-giving Habit, Though Reproved by Caricaturists.

"What a delight it is to put the feet up!" said Mr. Gratebar. "Caricaturists used to show the American sitting in an armchair with his feet on the mantel or braced against the chimney-piece just under it; and surely the American might do worse things than that. I dare say that the height to which one might desire to elevate his feet might depend upon the individual. Some might desire to put their feet on the shelf, some might find greater comfort at less height; for myself I like my legs about horizontal. I like to sit after dinner in a big easy chair with my feet across another in front. I suppose that if you were to ask a doctor about this, he would tell you that the sense of relief and comfort that comes with putting the feet up is due to a relief of, or to a reversal of, the strain upon some muscle or muscles with more or less lofty latin names; but I don't care to know about that. I am satisfied with the calm but profound delight of putting up my feet."

Journalism in the West.

We wish some of those fellows who are eternally telling us how to run a paper would think more and talk less. Here we are eighty miles west of the rain belt, ninety feet from water, several million miles from heaven, fifty yards from the devil and 300 miles from a saloon, sweating and worrying, trying to get out a spicy paper.—Dighton Herald.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dismondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

YOUNG HEARTS UNITE.

With Pure Delight Their Tender Vows Are Spoken.

LILY PERFUME AND ORANGE BLOOM

Afford Their Happy Token—Grace Church Enshrines a Charming Sight, a Wedding Gowned in Pink and White.

HAPPY to all hearts and beautiful to all eyes was the pink and white wedding which took place in Grace P. E. Church yesterday afternoon at 5, an hour when the sun lingered softly at the close of a day which had been favored by the smiles of Winter in her softest mood.

The contracting parties, two of Plainfield's popular young people, were Miss Sadie E. Addis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Addis of Orange street, and Clarence Nathan Mundy, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mundy.

At the appointed hour the handsome church, choicely decorated with evergreens, was filled with friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

The bridal party proceeded up the centre aisle. Miss Alice O. Smith, formerly musical instructor of the bride, was at the organ, and her interpretation of the wedding march from Lohengrin added to the brilliancy of the effect.

The bride was beautiful in a gown of ivory-white Lansdowne silk, with feather trimmings and pearl passementerie; she wore a tulle veil, with natural orange blossoms and lilies of the valley in her coiffure and corsage. She carried an ivory-bound prayer-book.

The maid of honor, Miss Tillie M. Barnes, cousin of the bride, was gowned in white crepe de chene, with white lace and satin ribbon trimmings. The bridemaids were Miss Gertrude Haskard of Elizabeth, cousin of the bride, who wore a gown of white crepe de chene, with lace and rhine stone buckles, and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations; Miss Lizzie Barnes of Elizabeth, cousin of the bride, in a gown of pink crepe de chene, with lace and rhine stone buckles, and carrying a bouquet of pink carnations; Miss Hannah Merrill of Elizabeth, also cousin of the bride, in a gown of pink silk and white, with lace trimmings, and carrying a Martha Washington bag; and Miss Jennie Addis, sister of the bride, in gown of pink silk and white lace trimmings, also carrying a Martha Washington bag.

The best man was Charles B. Barnes of Elizabeth, cousin of the bride.

At the altar the party were met by Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, who performed the very impressive ceremony of the Episcopal Church, the responses being noticeably clear and distinct.

The strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march were heard as the ceremony was concluded, and the party left the church while this favorite recessional was being played.

The bride and groom were driven to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was given to the immediate friends and relatives.

Guests were present from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Bayonne, Elizabeth and Roseville.

An excellent supper was served about 6, after which music was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Mundy were the recipients of many handsome and valuable gifts. The ushers officiating at the church were Walter F. Barnes of Elizabeth, cousin of the bride, Harry Hamilton, Chauncey L. Lane of New York, and William H. Addis, brother of the bride. They wore boutonnieres of white carnations and lilies of the valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Mundy left on the 7:45 Philadelphia train for a journey South. They will live in Plainfield.

Mr. Mundy has an excellent situation with the Seaboard Lumber Company of New York.

The happy couple have the best wishes of a very large circle of friends.

Among the gifts was a very handsome pair of embroidered pillow cases, made by Mrs. Elizabeth Garret of Elizabeth, age 80, grandmother of the bride.

—A special meeting of Gazelle Engine Company will be held this evening.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Henry McGee will give a tea Saturday, Feb. 23, from 4 to 7.

John Rafferty's son Thomas is suffering from inflammatory rheumatism.

Edward Sebring of 40 Craig place is confined to his home with the grip.

Jack Fillmore of North avenue, Netherwood, is suffering from a bone felon on his right hand.

Rev. J. A. Craig of LaFayette, Sussex County, is the guest of Horace Huff of West Fifth street.

Mrs. Hall, mother of Wallace Hall of Rockview avenue, is recovering from her recent severe illness.

T. E. Warman of 104 Grove street was out yesterday for the first time in three weeks, after an attack of the grip.

The Misses Evelyn and Nellie Dunn of New York, daughters of Samuel P. Dunn, were in town yesterday for a call among friends.

Hugo Fisher of Liberty street has been appointed a collector by the Prudential Life Insurance Company of Newark, for this city, in place of J. W. VanHorn, resigned.

Fred DeForest Crozier, the humorist who entertained the Royal Arcanum, was the guest while in Plainfield Monday and Tuesday of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Lavell at their elegant home on Putnam avenue.

Miss Florence Honneger of New Brighton, S. I., who has been visiting Mrs. J. B. Hill of Belvidere avenue, is now making a short visit to Mrs. F. J. Miller of Carleton avenue, after which she will return to her home.

Mrs. Chas. H. VanNess has so far recovered from her recent severe attack of pneumonia, through the skilful and constant attention of Dr. J. H. Carman, that she was about the house yesterday for the first time in over five weeks.

W. Montgomery Smith of Plainfield, who excels in artistic decorative work, has issued a sumptuous calendar for The Gill Engraving Company of 104 Chambers street, New York. The sheets of enameled cardboard reproduce famous paintings, set in frames whose dainty sumptuousness of decoration and whose exquisite colorings are characteristic of Mr. Smith's masterhand.

JUST A LOVE STORY

is what most folks like to read, if it is original in plot, and felicitously told. And it is just that kind of a love story which Mrs. Alexander, the author of "The Wooing o' It", and other powerful novels whose names are in everybody's mouth, has written in

"SETTLED OUT OF COURT".

This tale is one of the masterpieces of a masterhand. It will appear in The Daily Press, beginning Saturday, Feb. 16, and will run for six days. Do not miss an instalment. You will read the story in The Daily Press or nowhere.

BY THE WAY.

—A special business meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in their rooms Thursday afternoon at 3:30. A large attendance is requested.

—The borough Board of Canvassers are busily engaged in making a house-to-house canvass prior to the Spring election, which takes place in March.

—The board walk leading to the Watchung avenue entrance of the Y. M. C. A. Building was completed today. It will be replaced by flagging in the Spring.

—There is a scarcity of coal among a few of the coal dealers of this city, owing to the delay in shipping from the mines, caused by the heavy snowdrifts in Pennsylvania.

—The ardor of a sleighing party of fifteen New Brunswickers who came to town yesterday was somewhat dampened by reason of the fact that they frequently had to get out and walk because of the numerous bare spots encountered along the road.

—Capt. T. Durling of Phillipsburg, Warren County, an official of the Knights of Pythias, came to the city last night to install the officers of the local lodge, but was unable to perform the duties from the fact that the installation meeting is set for next month.

—A work of elegance and utility is the calendar issued by the New York Engraving and Printing Company of 320-322 Pearl street, New York. Each month's leaflet gives the face of a popular actress. The mechanical execution is a sample of the perfection of the company's work.

A Needed Municipal Improvement.

An improvement which this city is in need of is a restoration of signs on the corners of thoroughfares, designating the names of the treets. Plainfielders themselves may not observe the necessity of such a feature, but strangers do not always find it easy to locate streets away from the business section. Oftentimes it is not convenient to interrogate passing people on the street for the right direction to proceed in locating a residence. The signs were up years ago, but have largely disappeared.

GRACE PARISH NEWS.

[From The Advance.]

Grace parish receptions are held every Monday evening from 8 to 11, in the Rectory, 224 LaGrande avenue.

The Altar Society are busy making a set of red altar hangings and vestments, which are much needed.

The Rectory Society contemplate giving a tea at the home of Mrs. Fred H. Wills, where fancy articles will be for sale, and later a garden party at the home of Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart. These two entertainments will be given for the benefit of the Rectory Society Fund.

The members of the Parish Guild are holding afternoon teas the first Tuesday of each month from 4 to 6.

The women of the Guild are busy preparing a box of clothing to be sent to Rev. Mr. Pullman, of Austin, Texas.

RUDYARD KIPLING

never wrote, and never will write—and nobody else ever will write, because nobody can—a better story than "A Disturber of Traffic", a tale of seafaring life in the Eastern seas. But Mr. Kipling has written just as good a story in something the same vein, and yet with a freshness and originality all its own. It is called and is a tale of an Indian boy who grows up to his father's trade of piloting vessels through the strange rivers down to the seas where every drop of water has a romance to tell. You will read this story, first published, and fitly illustrated by the best newspaper artists, in The Daily Press Friday, Feb. 15, and Saturday, Feb. 16. It is brand-new, and copyrighted to Daily Press use.

"AN UNQUALIFIED PILOT",

The Monthly Illustrator.

In only one way was it possible for Harry C. Jones of 92 Fifth avenue, New York, to improve his magazine of the choicest in art, The Quarterly Illustrator, and that was to issue it oftener. That improvement he has now accomplished, and in its new guise of The Monthly Illustrator it is just four times as good as it was before.

The Monthly Illustrator is artistic excellence. The February number contains 272 superb illustrations by 74 well-known artists, and a wealth of letter-text besides. No home of culture should be without The Monthly Illustrator.

Postman Stops a Runaway.

While Milkman E. T. Schenck was delivering milk in H. Fleischhauer's drug-store on East Front street, yesterday morning, his team ran away at a rapid pace towards Scotch Plains. Letter-carrier William Demarest, who was returning from his morning delivery, saw the horses coming from a distance, drove his own horse to the curb, and succeeded in stopping the runaway team before any damage was done.

Successful Use of Dynamite.

Contractor Burnette was very successful yesterday in blasting the frozen ground of the excavation for the cellar of the Blatz house on Somerset street. Before the blasting took place, the neighbors being much frightened, closed their window blinds, but as no damage resulted from the blasting they heeded it as little as the booming of a Fourth of July celebration.

Perfecting the Service.

The electric current from the Borough Electric Light Company was turned on through the entire circuit at 4 yesterday afternoon to enable Inspector Clarence Brokaw to discover which lamps were defective, so as to replace them. The recent storms and high winds caused the company considerable loss and damage.

Plainfield Toasts the President.

From a report in the Brockville (Ont.) Evening Recorder, of the banquet of the Showshoe Club, The Press learns that "The President of the United States" was responded to by Consul J. A. Demarest, and further honored by the boys giving "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow".

Opening the Highways.

Street Commissioner Meeker of this city, is a hustler, as far as snowbanks are concerned. He and his force of men yesterday afternoon removed the snow on the Rahway road, thus opening all the principal thoroughfares leading to and from the city.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

IN THEIR NEW HOME.

They'll Never Roam in Search of Better Quarters.

BUILT THIS HAS BEEN FOR PLAINFIELD MEN,

Helped by Fair Plainfield Daughters—With Past Review, an Era Now the Smugly Quartered Men Commence—Renew Their Youth, with Words of Truth from Past and Present Presidents.

BUILT for Plainfield's progress was the new Y. M. C. A. Building, and the finely appointed and pretty Assembly Hall of the structure was well-filled last night by a representative audience which had gathered to enjoy exercises incident to the formal opening of the Association's new home. On the platform were seated the members of the Board of Directors, opening and building committees, a number of the local clergy, and the double male quartette, composed of F. S. Runyon, E. E. Runyon, Nelson Runyon, L. A. Hummer, Charles Hummer, T. E. Hazell, A. J. Moore and Ezra Loomis.

The meeting was called to order by Mayor Gilbert, who was chairman of the Opening Committee and the Association's first president. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes read a few verses from the 7th chapter of Acts, after which prayer was offered by Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

Mayor Gilbert spoke in part as follows:

"The duty has been put on me tonight of bidding you welcome to this beautiful new home of the Young Men's Christian Association, and I can assure you the duty is doubly enjoyable to me simply because I was present at the birth of the Association. I was its first President. I am familiar with its early struggles and with many of the important incidents of its early life. I can reach back from its beginning to the present time; I can touch the past and present in the history of this Association. I can bring them both together, and I can realize perhaps more fully than the most of you how remarkable has been the success of this Association, and in looking back over the interval of time which reaches from the beginning, twenty-eight years ago, down to the present development of this Association, this beautiful building suggests to me how remarkable has been the growth and development of this organization. This building tells its own story of prosperity, healthful growth, development, public sympathy and support. It reminds me also of many changes that have taken place under my own observation in the aims and purposes and in the personnel of the Association. I can clearly recall the first meeting that was held in the modest little room on Park avenue 28 years ago. We were not ambitious then; we had no thought at that time of ever achieving a state of development that would warrant such a beautiful building as this. We simply hoped to organize and to do some good. There were only a few of us but we were interested in the work and ties that bound us together in our early association work developed into stronger ties of personal association, and I am proud to say tonight that I number among my personal friends tonight men whom I discovered in that association of long ago.

"But speaking now as Chief Executive of this city, I think that I ought to congratulate the people of Plainfield on having this beautiful edifice added to the architectural development of Plainfield. Plainfield has fine avenues, beautiful streets, and charming residences, and all speak of the refinement of our people, but we have few public buildings, and these we need to express the progressive spirit and business methods of the people. There is nothing that serves so well to express the character and civilization of a people as the buildings they erect. The old world is full of the architecture of magnificent nations that have arisen, flourished and passed away, leaving nothing behind them but the ruins of old temples and public buildings, and these stand as silent monuments to the purposes and civilization of their time, and there they have stood for ages furnishing the historian reliable data for the writing of history. The old world has much to boast of in this line. From these we derive large benefits, but all these buildings were reared to perpetuate the glory of man, or of nations. The beautiful palace at Versailles has over the entrance this inscription: 'For the glory of France,' built by a prince for his own glory with money wrung from the people. How much different is it in the case of this building—money for which has been donated by a liberal people, donated as a recognition of the right of this Association to exist.

"You have given to the young men this beautiful building; you have enlarged their usefulness and increased their capacity for work, and you have laid upon them a new responsibility as well, and in order to discharge this responsibility and in order to give you what you look to them for now, it will be necessary for those who have the interest of the young men at heart to be generous in support. Now, that it is in position to do valiant work, it will need valiant support, and the money spent in this direction is well spent. As an investment, see what this institution is doing for young men in Plainfield. You all know, if you have sons, that when they reach a certain age and come home from an office or from being confined in a store you feel that they would like to go out and spend some time with their companions. Now, what is this association for these young men? Why, it is a rendezvous, a meeting place, and as a rendezvous and meeting place you want to see that it is a good place. It makes all the difference in the world whether it is a rendezvous that throws around them good influences or not. Looking upon it as an indispensible institution we ought to rally around it and defend and support it and I have no doubt that after you have listened to Dr. Richards and to Mr. Murray you will all feel that to support this institution would be a good investment to your sons and a good investment to Plainfield."

At the conclusion of the Mayor's address the quartette rendered a selection which brought forth many encomiums.

The following is a part of Dr. Richards's excellent address:

"When I came here tonight I was thinking of course, as we all were, of the work of the Young Men's Christian Association, and thinking of it with gratitude; but I found myself thinking especially of those gathering here tonight in this new building and what it meant to this Association to have at last a home of its own. I suppose my special duty was to bring a multitude of congratulations to the society itself and to all these friends who are gathered here, many of whom know what it is to have a home of their own, and when we think of it I do not know that there is any material advantage to be set ahead of the advantage of having your own home. A minister speaks of that subject with a little feeling, because it is an advantage that he never expects to possess. Belonging to a race of tramps he simply can look with envy upon those who have what is denied to him. It is not only the people who have a home of their own who are blessed; it is an advantage to the community. They have a great deal more confidence in their citizens when they own their own houses. You are not afraid of their behaving themselves in such fashion that it will be necessary for them to leave the place, if they own their own homes. Any institution comes to be worth more to the community, or at least be valued more highly when it can be properly housed.

"Now it seems to me that this is the special advantage the Young Men's Christian Association has assumed tonight. It is met in its new home; it has come to a place that belongs to itself and we hope that it will be soon paid for, and here it stands as one of the institutions of the city—something that will stand here forever as a home for the young men of Plainfield, and for the young men of our own families. We all have our own houses with their own parlors, with their own libraries, with their own privileges of social intercourse, and anything that is offered to those boys by the Young Men's Christian Association is an addition to a good many things which they have already. But after all, this thing is to be here to furnish a home for the young men in Plainfield who have n't one, and who are not likely to have a home for the present. I think our prayer to God is that as this building is now dedicated He will so fill it with His Spirit that has always guided it in the past, that this aim may be more and more completely realized, that this Association may be interested to offer to the young men of this city who need it most the advantages of a Christian home."

Dr. Richards was followed by W. D. Murray, President of the Association. In opening he spoke of the time seven years ago when the subject of the Association owning a home was first broached, and now what a feeling of gratification and joy it afforded him to participate in their formal opening. He then described the efforts that were necessary to consummate their desire, which had found root in the minds of those taking an interest in the welfare of the Association. To illustrate the immensity of undertaking to erect such a structure, he furnished a few figures concerning the finances in this connection. The total amount subscribed was $47,300, of which $46 017 46 had been paid in. It had been necessary to get a loan of $2 500, which afforded the sum of $48,517.46 to draw upon. Thus far there had been expended $14,000 for land and $34,344 90 on the building. The contract called for $43,615, which left a deficiency of $10,000 still to be raised. Now the question was asked whether the result accomplished justified the cost involved? The work done in the past answered that proposition affirmatively. He said that many young men, who had pleasant homes, were simply content to live for themselves, and conform with the rules of society and law, but the Association was a field of labor in educating them to something better and higher than mere drones. The citizens of Plainfield he said had donated the building to perpetuate the religious work which they had undertaken, and it was what was done in the future rather than what was said at present that would justify the trust placed in them.

Another song was rendered, after which the programme was concluded by a short talk by Arthur Lucas, State Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. He congratulated the Association on possessing in many respects the finest building of its kind in the State. The structure stands for the highest ideal of manhood, and in its various departments would teach that there is something better and nobler than just living and something more than death. In the religion of Jesus Christ, he said there was need for creeds and sects, but the Young Men's Christian Association afforded a common platform and purpose to centre the mind and efforts for the salvation and elevation of the young man.

After Dr. Yerkes pronounced the benediction, the audience were invited to make a general inspection of the building, of which the majority availed themselves.

The cozy reading room, the pleasant parlor, and all the apartments, were admired by the visitors, and the completion of the building was commented on as one of the events in which Plainfielders should take great and pardonable pride.

Kitty Pilot Changes Hands.

Michael Quinn has sold his well-known prize-winner, the dark bay mare, "Kitty Pilot", to a Brooklyn horseman, and a valuable black mare from Mr. Quinn's stables became the property of Mr. Arkell of Westfield about the same time.

O. W. O. Hardman, sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

BROTHERS IN ANGER

Adry Hayward Tells How Miss Ging Was Killed.

The Crime Carefully Planned by the Young Man for the Purpose of Securing the Insurance Money on His Victim's Life—One Brother Against the Other.

Minneapolis, Feb. 13.—One of the most dramatic and pathetic scenes ever witnessed in a courtroom at this place was enacted yesterday, when Adray Hayward had finished telling to judge and jury his tragic tale of the cruel manner in which his brother Harry had hired an assassin to kill his pretended sweetheart, Catherine Ging, in order to rob her and procure the insurance on her life.

After the buzz of excitement attendant upon the calling of Adrian Hayward to the witness stand had died away, Adry, who is 33, told the entire story, as Harry, his 29-year-old brother, had narrated it to him, of how Miss Ging's murder was brought about. Harry had come to his father's office, where Adry was employed, last summer and fall, and told him he was loaning money on diamonds, and that he had gambled some; also that he had loaned money for Miss Ging, and gambled with her money. Continuing, Adry said:

Would Get $2,000.

"About the middle of September he asked me if I wanted to make good money. I said yes, and he said I could get about $2,000 if I was not too particular. He asked me if I was willing to kill a woman for $2,000. I said I was not willing to kill anybody. He said it was easy to do it, and nobody would be suspicious of me, as they only looked up a set of criminals who had been convicted of crime before.

"After that he said he knew a hackman that would do anything for him. He said it would be easy to kill her in a hack, and if necessary the hackman could be killed, too."

Adry then told how, on the morning of November 6, Harry had come to his place, and added that Harry had shown him three diamond rings and a pawn ticket, with a caution against talking about it, as he was supposed to be "busted."

"Then," continued the witness, "Harry said he was through with me, and that I had not any nerve. He had found a man, however, who had nerve—an ex-policeman named C. A. Blixt.

Something Will Happen.

"Shortly after 7:30 on the night of the murder Harry came to my flat and said: 'You'd better go to the theatre to-night. Take your wife and go. Something is going to happen.' It was one of the few times I ever saw him excited. I took him by the arm and tried to detain him. He shook himself loose and said: 'I've no time to fool now. I'm in a hurry.' My wife sat there rocking the baby.

"My wife and I went to visit her father that night. When I got home, or shortly afterward, I heard a quick step in the hallway, and then I saw a light in Harry's room. I heard nothing more until 3 in the morning, when Harry came to the door and said: 'Something has happened. Miss Ging has been murdered. She was found stone dead in the road near Lake Calhoun.' He asked me to come into his room, and I did so. He got out his Colt's revolver and cleaned it. There was very little dirt on it. As he was doing this he said: 'It's just like picking up money.' Then he laid down on the lounge with his overcoat over him. I went back to my flat."

He was asked in regard to his conversation in the jail with Harry relative to their pressing Blixt rather closely.

"Don't you know there was nothing in the paper that day about Blixt?" asked Mr. Erwin.

"No, I don't. I know he was reading the paper; I was not."

"On Oct. 17, 1894, were you not out of your mind?"

"I can't say as to that."

"Did not you curse and swear and threaten to kill your father and mother?"

"Was that on Sunday?"

"Yes."

Tried To Make Trouble.

"Well I had some trouble over money. Harry came in dragging father and he lay down on the lounge. There was a shortage, but I explained it. Harry was trying to make the trouble." Harry smiled broadly at this point.

"Yes, you smile," said the witness, "but you know its so. I accused Harry of stealing the money from my flat—mind I don't say he did it but I accused him then and there. Mother spoke up and I told her that if she could not trust her sons, why did she raise such a litter of pups. Then I got mad and when Harry threatened to rip me up with a knife, I went to get my revolver and said I would let Harry wound me, but if he did I would blow his brains out. My wife can swear to that—you needn't shake your head, mother," cried the witness, noticing his mother. "That was the first trouble I had with my mother and if it had not been for Harry I would never have had that trouble."

He Blamed the Family.

During the examination witness said he did not blame Harry for trying to defend himself in his suit but he did blame the family for letting itself be brought into disgrace by helping him out. He thought the family owed something to itself. He hated to testify against his brother, but he had some rights and did not think he had to be dragged down on his brother's account.

"Were'nt you always jealous of your brother?"

"No, sir."

"Did not you ever threaten your brother with violence?"

"Once, when my brother said he could get men for $15 to send me to Stillwater, I said I knew enough to send him to Stillwater and father was right there and heard it. I said that Mr. Stewart had agreed to help me if they would not."

Witness then testified to going to Mr. Stewart, telling him his troubles.

SAFE ON TERRA FIRMA

Pathetic Scenes at the French Line Docks.

A Sight Long To Be Remembered—The Dead, Alive; the Lost, Found—The Ship and Her Gallant Commander Cheered—Flags Wave Vive Le Capitaine.

New York, Feb. 13.—The French line dock was the scene of great rejoicing during the early hours of yesterday. The friends of passengers on La Gascogne were at the dock from the first peep of dawn, and remained there until the steamer arrived. The joy of the waiting people over the news of their friend's safety bubbled over and found frequent expressions. The officers of the company were obliged to stretch a chain across the entrance to the dock shed, so great was the rush of people to go on the pier. Every one admitted had to show evidence that they had friends on board the belated steamship.

Some men and women went to the dock in carriages, but could not show that they had friends aboard the steamer. The waiting room upstairs was crowded.

Half a dozen policemen from the steamboat squad stood inside the shed entrance to help the company's officers. Other policemen stood outside to help control the crowd. At 9 o'clock there were about 300 people grouped about the entrance, unable to get on the dock. They had been there all the morning, and seemed determined to wait until the La Gascogne arrived, if necessary, all day.

Two tugs were puffing and blowing in the slip on the north side of the French line dock churning up the water in an effort to drive out the ice so as to make an easy passage for the steamer.

Greeting the Big Ship.

As the steamer came up the North river towed by two tugs the people assembled on the dock scrambled for the best places to obtain a view of the vessel. At the end of the pier was a pile of boxes. The people climbed on these and watched the approaching vessel until the police and dock officers obliged them to enter the shed so as to avoid accidents. The people in the upstairs waiting room crowded to the windows to catch a glimpse of the steamer. There was a craning of necks and a pushing of those in the rear to get a view out on to the river. Another crowd was in the pier shed near the gangways. A large proportion were women. Outside the dock was a crowd of several thousand.

When La Gascogne's stern passed the doorway working into her slip the people cheered. In a very short time the vessel was tied up and the gangplank raised to her side. Again the people cheered, and an enthusiastic Frenchman perched on a pile of boxes unfurled a new American flag and waved it. This called forth more cheering, and some one in the crowd cried out: "That is the only flag." This seemed to be the sentiment of the crowd, for they cheered the flag enthusiastically.

Cheers for the Captain.

A voice called for three cheers for Capt. Baudelon, commander of the La Gascogne. They were given with a will and made the building echo.

The passengers then began to come ashore, preceded by Superintendent of the Line West. The first passenger to step on the dock received more cheers. The passengers came down rapidly and were quickly seized by waiting friends, hugged and kissed, and again embraced. They then had a volley of questions fired at them.

The most of the people, passengers and waiting friends, had the true temperament of the French and were loudly demonstrative in giving vent to the emotion that moved them.

A lady in a long sealskin dolman pressed through the crowd carrying aloft a huge bouquet of flowers.

The people made way for her until she reached the foot of the gangplank. A call was made for Capt. Baudelon, and when he appeared the crowd cheered. An enthusiastic Frenchman cried out: "Vive le Capitaine! Vive M. Baudelon!"

The captain raised his cap and smiled. The woman with the flowers embraced the blushing commander and presented the bouquet to him.

Serious Difficulties May Arise.

City of Mexico, Feb. 13.—Telegraphic news from the state of Guatemala is that Miles Rock, chief of the Guatemalan commission, was suddenly called from the border to the City of Guatemala in connection with an arrangement with Mexico. It is believed that Mr. Rock's opinion is required on several points in dispute. The news is of a general peaceful tendency, but the El Universal warns its readers that it is still possible for serious difficulties to arise.

Blizzard Affects an Election.

Richfield Springs, N. Y., Feb. 13.—The spring elections took place in the different towns of Oswego county yesterday. On account of the recent blizzard making the roads bad a light vote was polled. The majority of those elected were republicans. No supervisors were elected and the interest in the election was not very lively.

Buried in Malt.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 13.—Henry Humphrey, a malt house man, met death in a frightful form yesterday. He was sucked beneath a great, rushing, tumbling mass of dry malt, in one of the bins of the Lake View Malt house, and was smothered to death before help could reach him.

Will Rest in Poughkeepsie.

New Orleans, Feb. 13.—Murray Ferris, the sugar refiner of Franklin, La., who was shot and mortally wounded on Jan. 28, by Henry M. Payne, planter of south Louisiana, died yesterday. The remains will be buried in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Friday.

Killed in His Old Age.

Fort Monroe, Va., Feb. 13.—William Wright, an aged colored man, was run over and killed near Hampton, on the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad yesterday.

ANOTHER NEW FEATURE.

The Daily Press Adds to Its Already Large List of Special Attractions.

THE Napoleonic wave which has displayed itself in America by a revival of Empire gowns and decorations, Napoleonic literature, pictures and relics has reached the proportions of a craze in Paris and is only less enthusiastic but scarcely less real and vital in other European capitals. So that now, eighty years after Waterloo, the Man of Destiny fills almost as conspicuous a place in the public eye as when he held the peace of Europe in his hand.

Napoleon is altogether the most brilliant, the most potent personality in modern history. Men are hero worshipers all, whether they know it or not, and the tremendous achievements and dramatic career of Napoleon appeal powerfully to the intelligent reader of today. The story of Napoleon has never been briefly told with better effect than in the new series of monographs fresh from the pen of John Clark Ridpath to appear for the first time in print in The Daily Press, to whose exclusive service in Plainfield they are copyrighted. Each monograph is two columns long, and they are arranged consecutively for publication in weekly installments. The first article is released for publication Saturday, Feb. 16, and the others in regular order on succeeding Saturdays. They will be a welcome new feature to readers of The Daily Press.

NEW PAPER BOX TRUST.

Combine Controlling Millions Will Take Their Old Employes.

Derby, Conn., Feb. 13.—The first rupture in the big paper box trust—the National Folding Box & Paper company, occurred yesterday when Col. E. Shelton Cornell resigned as a director of the combine and manager of factory No. 1, located here. Mr. Cornell and other Connecticut capitalists have leased a factory and paper mill at Southford, ten miles from here.

All of the employes, salemen and clerks of the combine's factory here will go with the new concern, and from now on will ensue a big battle in the paper box market. The combine virtually controls the American market and has factories in New Haven, New York, Brooklyn, and a paper manufactory at Ballston Spa, N. Y. Millions are behind the new industry.

THE DEBS' JURY DISCHARGED.

A New One Will Be Empaneled at an Early Date.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—The Debs jury was discharged yesterday and the case was set for a new trial on the first Monday in May. The physician attending James C. Coe, the juror whose illness caused the hitch in the proceeding, declared that the sick man would not be able to resume his duties as a juror for at least thirty days. Judge Grosscup then held a conference with the counsel of both sides, and it was agreed to leave the matter to the court's discretion. When court finally convened, Attorney Gregory for the defense moved that the jury be discharged, but that the eleven men then in the box be again empaneled and a twelfth juror secured. To this the government objected and the motion was denied.

AN EDITOR IN LUCK.

Bequeathed Fifty Thousand Dollars for a Past Kindness.

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 13.—Dr. Allen Norton Leete, editor of the Sunday News, has been notified that he has been bequeathed $50,000 by the will of the late Henry B. Cary, of Los Angeles, Cal. Back of the bequest is a story of an unpaid debt that brought the lender ultimately a competence for life. In 1862 Dr. Leete loaned Cary $500. At that time both men lived in Newark, N. J. Cary emigrated to California and made a fortune but he never during his life time repaid Leete his money. When he died not long since his will was found to contain a clause acknowledging his debt to Leete and stating that the $500 was the foundation of his fortune and in consideration of this he bequeathed him $50,000.

Pittsburg's London Fog.

Pittsburg, Feb. 13.—Early yesterday a fog of unusual density settled over this city and vicinity and continued throughout most of the day. Railroad and street car traffic was greatly impeded and continued in the downtown district only with reduced speed and by exercising the greatest caution. Numerous collisions occurred and many narrow escapes from accidents were reported, but no serious casualty occurred. Business in stores and office buildings was possible only by aid of artificial light. On the streets the density of the fog limited vision to a few paces. The temperature was mild.

No Lexow Committee Here.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 13.— The sensational investigation of charges of bribe-taking against the city detectives came to an end by a verdict of not guilty by the board of police. The three detectives under charges were Chief of Detectives Wright and Detectives Looney and Cason. It was decided by the board to find the three officers not guilty and to give Looney and Cason a reprimand for receiving presents of rings from Carrie Clarke, a keeper of a disreputable resort.

NO SECRET

IN THIS WOMAN'S CASE.

Mrs. Campbell Wishes Her Letter Published so that the Truth May Be Known.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Of the thousands of letters received from women all over the world by Mrs. Pinkham, not one is given to the public unless by the wish of the writer. Thus absolute confidence is established between Mrs. Pinkham and her army of patients; and she freely solicits a letter from any woman, rich or poor, who is in ill health or ailing.

In the case of Mary E. Campbell, of Albion, Noble Co., Ind., her suffering was so severe, her relief so suddenly realized, and her gratitude so great, that she wishes the circumstances published, in the hope that others may be benefited thereby. She says:—

"My physician told me I had dropsy and falling of the womb. My stomach and bowels were so bloated I could not get a full breath. My face and hands were bloated badly. I had that dreadful bearing-down pain, backache, palpitation of the heart, and nervousness.

"One of my physicians told me I had something growing in my stomach; and the medicine that I took gave me relief only for a short time. I thought I must die. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it worked like a charm. After taking the first bottle I could walk across the street, now I am well. I advise all my friends to take it."—MARY E. CAMPBELL, Albion, Noble Co.

DID YOU EVER

hear tell of a purchaser wanting to buy an imitation? Why do men who try to sell such articles speak of the act as "working them off?" Simply because people want the best, and it takes work and likewise deception to sell them the worst. This unpleasant experience may befall the housekeeper who determines to the new vegetable shortening. The healthfulness, flavor, and economy of this wonderful cooking product has won for it the widest popularity, which in turn has attracted the attention of business parasites who are "working off" imitations and counterfeits. BIG CITIES EDUCATE.

One Must Think Quickly, and Keep His Wits.

FIERCE COMPETITION URGES MEN AND WOMEN TO THEIR UTMOST.

Nerves and Brain First Give Way Under the Terrific Strain.

Men die in the big cities like the trees, beginning at top.

It is apoplexy, heart failure, nervous prostration, shock, congestion of the brain and suicide that characterizes the mortality lists in the great centers of population.

A city teaches one to think quickly, to be always on the alert and quick to avoid danger, as well as to see lucky chances. It is impossible to go slowly even if one has no pressing need for hurry. The rush is contagious. One finds himself drawn along by the rapidly moving crowds and is soon hurrying with the rest. It is undoubtedly true that two-thirds of all the men and women one sees tearing through the streets are in no such actual haste. They are merely victims of this fearful habit of hurry.

But whether the fearful rush is essential or not, the result is the same. Nerves and brains are exhausted, men and women grow prematurely aged, times of depression follow the high-strung condition. The entire nervous system must be rapidly and fully nourished to prevent utter prostration and collapse. It is estimated by physicians that Paine's celery compound annually saves thousands upon thousands of men and women living in cities from breaking down under their work. It builds up the substance of the nerves and brain faster than it is torn down by even such prodigal waste. It cures permanently all weakness of the stomach, liver and kidneys, and takes away any tendency of these vital organs to disease.
